TURKS FALL BACK; SEE PEACE

TIERNAN BABY WINS A NAME; 3 ADULTS LOSE

Father to Fight for a Bar Sinister.

BY GENEVIEVE FORBES.

South Bend, Ind., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—William John Tiernan is the legitimate child of Prof. and Mrs. John P. Tiernan, according to Judge Chester Ducomb's decision, given this morning.

The city court of South Bend declared that Prof. Tiernan "may be" the father of the infant born to his wife, Mrs. Augusta H. Tiernan, on Nov. 28, 1921, but insisted that Harry Poulin, defendant in the famous paternity case, "could" be the father of the baby that has been repudiated by the law professor and denied by the haberdashery salesman.

Judge Ducomb believes the story of Mrs. Tiernan regarding her relations with Harry Poulin, her relations from Feb. 10 to March 10, 1921. He disregards her testimony concerning the absence of any relations between her and Prof. Tiernan, her husband, during the same period.

Harry Poulin Is Acquitted.

And, since the paternity of the 10 month old baby is so much in doubt, the court declared, "it is therefore adjudged that the defendant be discharged."

At the conclusion of the reading of the decision Prosecuting Atotrney Floyd O. Jelson appealed from the findings and moved for a retrial in the Circuit court of St. Joseph county, Ind., which has appellate jurisdiction in such cases.

Both he and Prof. Tiernan insisted they would fight the case "clear to the Supreme court if necessary."

It was a quiet, whispering crowd that gathered in the courtroom this morning, half an hour before the judge appeared. It was in contrast to the noisy, argumentative, important, excited mob that stormed the city hall a week ago Monday when the hearing began.

Reaction Affects Throng.

For days they had lived through climax; for hours they had heard a courtroom converted into a physician's office, a confessional; for minutes they had held their breath to listen to the halting answers which a witness scarcely breathed out to the attorneys.

But today the crowd moved with diffidence, feeling frightened at its own presence; self-conscious, awed, not by what was happening but by what might happen.

The principals, too, had several days since squeezed dry the sponge of their emotions and passions and hatreds. They took their places, inert, passive. Prof. and Mrs. Tiernan arrived early with the baby. The baby was asleep and remained asleep throughout the half hour that was to make it a legitimate baby or the helpless result of an illicit love.

Mrs. Poulin Stays Away.

Harry Poulin came in with his attorneys. Mrs. Poulin did not appear; nor did any of the Poulin relatives who "remembered positively" that "Harry was in the Poulin pew" at every Wednesday and Friday Lenten service, "except one in 1921."

The court was called to order. It had already been in order for some minutes. Prof. Tiernan lowered his head; Mrs. Tiernan's head was already bowed. Harry Poulin found himself standing in the back of the room far from the Tiernans. He wormed his head in between the shoulders of two spectators bracing himself against a desk and looked straight at the judge.

"There will be no demonstration in the courtroom this morning," Judge Ducomb began. "I think we have had enough of that during the trial."

The Shameless Revelations.

The warning was unnecessary. With a fierceness that stung the inactive participants in the case into a reactionary alertness, the judge described the testimony as "of the most sensational character that has shocked the morals of the court," and expressed regret that he had been compelled to give the time in the trial of a case of "such a degrading nature."

Declaring that there were two views by which to consider the case—one, the "immorality"; the other, "Is Harry Poulin the father of the unfortunate child?"—Judge Ducomb pointed out that while the public was looking at the case purely from an immoral standpoint, the court had to determine from the evidence and the law whether "Harry Poulin is the father, irrespective of the immorality."

"And it might be well to state at this time," the judge continued, looking past attorneys, prosecution, defendant, and audience, over to the young baby sleeping on a hard and narrow

NEW NAMELESS BABY MYSTERY—WHO IS MOTHER?

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 30.—The grand jury convened here today was told to try to find out who is the mother of an infant boy born seven weeks ago in the Bergen sanitarium. An exhaustive investigation will soon begin.

The boy and a girl were born in the sanitarium the same day. When a nurse brought the infant boy to the bed of Mrs. Edward Rich of Jersey City she refused to accept the baby, saying the one she had just brought into the world was a girl. The other mother accepted the girl. The boy was sent to the Mothers' institute and Mrs. Rich brought suit against the hospital.

Justice Swoze in his charge to the grand jury today asked for a thorough investigation.

JUGO-SLAVS DENY REPORT OF COUP AGAINST NATION

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Jugo-Slav legation here received a telegram from Belgrade tonight declaring that reports of revolution in the kingdom "are so grotesque as to hardly merit an official denial." The dispatch declares the reports are pure invention, and adds that the object of spreading them is evidently to increase the present complications in the Near East.

Report Received in Paris.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—An unconfirmed report has reached the Hungarian news agency in Paris that a revolution has occurred in Belgrade, and that King Alexander of Jugo-Slavia has been assassinated.

Lawson to Sell Estate to Meet $225,000 Debts

Scituate, Mass., Sept. 30.—Dreamwold, one of the most noted of New England private shore estates, today, by a deed and declaration of trust filed in Plymouth County court, was placed by the owner, Thomas W. Lawson, famous copper operator and author of "Frenzied Finance" in the hands of trustees, who announced that it would be sold at public auction to satisfy creditors. The trustees announced that the bills against the estate reached a total of approximately $225,000. It was said that Lawson wearied of the great estate after his wife's death in 1906 and this was believed to be one factor in his decision to sell it.

INSANITY GROWS; 'HOOTCH' BLAMED

Increase Here of 100% Laid to Bad Booze.

Insanity has increased in Chicago more than 100 per cent since the Volstead act went into affect, according to statistics made public yesterday by Dr. James Whitney Hall, chairman of the medical commission on insanity for Cook county.

The number of persons who are going insane averages 150 a week, as against 60 to 70 a week before prohibition, he said.

Every one of the county hospitals receiving mental cases is packed beyond capacity. The patients are sleeping on the floors or upon cots improvised in the emergency, which is the worst in the history of the state, he added.

Blamed on Hootch.

The medical commission, which acts in advisory capacity to County Judge Frank S. Righeimer and supervises the care of the insane places the blame for the increased cases of mental ailments exclusively to the use of prohibition beverages, the most common of which, says Dr. Hall, is hootch.

"Whereas the victim of alcoholic liquor in the pre-Volstead days became shiftless, unable or unwilling to care for his wife and family, unkempt, in fact a bum, the present day victim presents a far more terrible spectacle," Dr. Hall says.

"He becomes a maniac, a train wrecker, house breaker. He assaults innocent women and children. In many cases he dies of the effects. In some cases he becomes blind or insane, and he cannot be cured.

"It is a peculiar pathology entirely different from what we had before the wholesale distriution of wood alcohol and other rank poisons."

Hospitals Overcrowded.

The hospitals where overcrowding is worst, it was said, are the Kankakee, Chicago State, and Dunning.

Dr. Hall has been chairman of the medical commission since it was instituted some time ago to replace the jury of laymen who previously had advised the county judge on all mental cases.

The announcement yesterday was based upon written reports made by a staff of specialists in mental diseases, which, at the suggestion of Judge Righeimer, was appointed by the county board. One of the specialists, serving without pay, is at the Cook county psychopathic hospital every day to investigate and examine each person sent there for observation.

Members of Staff.

To date the number of cases thus examined numbers 73,601.

Members of this staff include Dr. Harold M. Moyer, Dr. Sidney Kuh, Dr. A. B. Heynme, Dr. Hugh T. Patrick, Dr. George Hall, Dr. Archibald Church, and Dr. James Whitney Hall.

It was said yesterday that the staff has written a letter to Judge Righeimer commending his work of administration over all mental cases of the county and expressing the desire that the people here reflect him for another term.

20,000 CHEER RACE REVIVAL AT HAWTHORNE

No "Open" Betting as Police Watch.

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

Twenty thousand race hungry Chicagoans, most of whom knew in advance that they could not place a bet, welcomed the attempted revival of racing in this city yesterday at the Hawthorne track, upon whose freshly harrowed surface thoroughbred hoofs had not trod since the short meeting of 1916.

Those of this crowd who thought they could bet saw six of the men to whom they intrusted their wagers led away by minions of the law sent to the track at the instance of State's Attorney Crowe. It was one of the minor incidents of the day, causing hardly a ruffle in the proceedings and unknown even to those who did not leave their seats during the afternoon. Details for those interested are found at the end of this story.

Crowd in Holiday Mood.

The crowd, in holiday mood, tolerant of the hurried preparations which left much to be desired in the way of finished appearance, seemed thoroughly to enjoy itself. It gave to Exterminator a royal greeting, a greeting worthy the king of American handicap horses, as he appeared for his mile and one-quarter exhibition journey.

This crowd cheered, shouted and pulled with excitement during the running of six almost—but not quite—betless races in which thrilling finishes predominated.

To habitual racegoers, accustomed to the shout of victory or the silence of defeat by spectators whose feelings are swayed by the effect on their pocketbooks, this attitude was the feature of the day. Hawthorne's crowd of yesterday was out to see the ponies run, to signify by its presence its desire for racing.

All Admit Its Success.

So far as the inaugural day was concerned expectations were more than realized. Even the skeptical admitted its success.

Traveling to Hawthorne by special trains and automobiles, early spectators found places in the newly roofed and newly painted grand stand, but the crowd soon overflowed on to the brick "lawn" in front, and occupied every available coign of vantage.

It was a good looking crowd. There was a surprisingly large number of women. There were many faces which you remembered from twenty years ago. There were others from whose attitude you recognized present followers of the ponies even with no racing in Chicago. Many, a great many, were curiosity seekers pure and simple, anxious to know what this racing thing was all about.

Two Things Missing.

Considering the handicaps and lack of time for thorough preparation, stands and track were in good condition. Over the infield where usually one sees landscape effects were piles of lumber from government buildings recently leveled. Hawthorne was used by Uncle Sam during the world war as a quartermaster's depot and the lease has just expired. Until almost the first race, workmen were hauling away debris from the brick terrace.

But there were flags, fresh paint, a band, the inevitable "red hot" stand, in fact all the old-time appurtenances except the bookmakers' booths and the bar.

The track was slow and rather dusty. Judge Joseph A. Murphy, presiding steward and manager, remembered when Edward Corrigan, one time Master of Hawthorne," built the track and shipped 2,500 loads of Indiana sand in constructing the oval so Hawthorne never was considered a fast track.

No "Open" Betting.

Was there betting? Open betting, no. Credit betting, yes. In what was once the betting ring, where once slates and prices were openly displayed, were clustered little knots of men. One indivdual in each group seemed the center of interest. He answered frequent questions. Perhaps he was estimating what odds he thought ought to be offered against various horses.

This individual seemed well acquainted with his questioners. In fact, they were known to him as "Fred," or "Jack," or "George," and occasionally he used the prefix "Mr." in speaking to some opulent appearing person. There was perfect amity and understanding. At time he just nodded. At other times he accepted and placed in his pocket a slip of paper on which a message was penciled. The writer looked over a shoulder before the first

No Fun Now Being a King —Constantine

BY OTIS SWIFT.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ATHENS, Sept. 29.—[Delayed.]—"Between you and me and the gatepost being a king is no fun these days. It is a lot of hard work."

EX-KING CONSTANTINE.

Thus Prince Glucksbourg, recently well known as King Constantine of Greece, chattily summed up his personal opinion of recent events in a teatime interview with me today. This hour's conversation in the garden of the royal summer palace at Tatoi, outside of Athens, is the first and only interview the former king has given since his abdication.

He told me that he expects to leave tomorrow with the royal family for Palermo, Italy, on a merchant marine transport. The former monarch, who looked tired and nervous, but cheery, refused to discuss Greek politics.

Sees All Europe Tottering.

He voluminously surveyed the general European situation, however, declaring that all Europe was tottering into chaos. He condemned France bitterly and denounced the American policy of non-participation in European affairs, saying: "Why didn't you recognize me? You call America democracy, but you don't recognize me? What kind of democracy is that?"

He refused to say whether he was planning to write a book.

Ex-King in Marble Palace.

Accompanied by N. Theodoropolis of the revolutionary party, I motored thirteen miles to Tatoi, along the road famous for the Marathon race. The charming white marble palace lies in the center of a fragrant pine forest. Beyond the sentry line is a group of little cottages where members of the court entourage reside.

While a white and gold uniformed naval officer—aid-de-camp to the former king—went to request an interview I waited in a vine shadowed arbor. Near by a black clad group of ladies was waiting—many in tears—and talking of the departure of the queen.

Uses American Slang.

The former king received me in the garden. We sat at a little rustic table located halfway down the middle of a long, shady avenue of elm trees.

Constantine, who is 55 years old, is a big man with wide shoulders, heavy face, heavy jaw, and close cropped, bullet shaped head. He is bald about the forehead. His face is wrinkled, white, tired, weary. There are blackened pouches under his mild blue eyes. His upturned military mustachios are not waxed. He was bareheaded and wore a grey tweed business suit.

But when, after dismissing his aide-de-camp, he opened the conversation, he spoke cheerfully of his collapsed throne. Constatine's English is without accent and he speaks in a low torrent of nervous, ejaculatory, explosive sentences, using much American slang.

Blames Lack of U. S. Recognition.

"You are an American," he said. "I cannot understand America. Much of our trouble here has been due to the fact that America did not recognize me. Why shouldn't they recognize me? It was over some silly question in Mexico. The powers said that if the United States recognized me they would recognize me. What has Mexico got to do with me?

"You call America democracy. That is a Greek word—demos rule to the people. You talk about freedom and letting everybody be free. Yet you don't

A LITTLE CURE FOR BACHELORS

KEMAL TROOPS GIVE UP TOWN ALONG STRAITS

French Envoy Adds to British Hopes.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Sept. 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Kemalists have evacuated Eren Keul, and the British now control the whole coast of the narrows of the Dardanelles from Chanak to Kara Bournou. The latter point possesses an excellent key, enabling warships to anchor in deep water.

The mission of M. Franklin Bouillon to Smyrna, where he went to confer with Mustapha Kemal Pasha, has been successful, according to announcement by the French officials here. He is coming to Constantinople tomorrow by the cruiser Metz, probably to consult with Gen. Harrington, commander in chief of the British forces.

Stirs Hope of Peace.

These two important developments caused hope here tonight that war between the British and Turks may yet be averted. They came after a day of gloom during which British officials frankly admitted that the situation around Chanak was growing more critical and a rupture might be precipitated at any moment unless the Turks withdrew from the neutral zone about the Dardalelles.

Meanwhile Gen. Harington continued to seek a peaceful way out of the tangle.

In replying to the latest note of the nationalist leader, Gen. Harington requested him to direct the Turkish commander in the neutral zone to meet the British commander for the purpose of drawing a new line between the British and Turkish forces, which would be without prejudice to the neutral zone.

Hamid Bey, the Angora representative here, announced this evening that Kemal would confer with the allied generals at Mudania early next week. He declared, however, that the nationalists would remain in the neutral zone pending settlement at Mudania of the controversy.

Turks Hem In British.

The British army, now considerably reinforced, is in high spirits in the face of the Turks' deliberate intrusion into their private precincts of Chanak. A high authority likened the situation to a family which was obliged to tolerate an unwelcome guest.

The Turkish troops continue in close contact with the British. They have formed a screen around the British forces behind which they are making concentrations and reconnoitering.

The British have established a wartime censorship. Hereafter the mention of names of regiments, their strength, and destinations is prohibited.

Kemal Polite, but Stern.

Mustapha Kemal Pasha's note in reply to the second request from Gen. Harington for the withdrawal of the Kemalist troops from the Chanak zone, in which the Turkish nationalist leader said his forces would be withdrawn "slightly" if the British were prepared to withdraw their forces also, was made public here today. It follows:

"I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your telegram dated Sept. 27.

"You can easily appreciate the extent to which we have been moved by the atrocities and acts of violence which continue in Thrace.

"On the other hand with regard to the sending away of the Greek fleet from Constantinople, which will influence the military situation, we desire proof that it will not be allowed to return.

"We would also like to hope that you will give up the measures of extraordinary coercion adopted by the forces of occupation towards the inhabitants of Constantinople, as well as the prohibition upon shipping to all ports in Anatolia.

"So far as the proposed acts of destruction in Constantinople, as well as in Chanak, are concerned it is illegal to destroy property, while the arms and ammunition also belong to us.

Asks British to Withdraw.

"Notwithstanding the unilateral decisions taken without our consent, as a new measure, in order to avoid misunderstandings we have given orders to the officer commanding our troops at Chanak for our troops to remain in the localities wherein they now are and to avoid to giving rise to incidents.

"Should you be prepared to withdraw your forces from the Asiatic coast, in the same way as the French and the Italians, we are prepared to give forthwith orders to our forces which are on the coast of the straits to withdraw slightly and to content themselves with re-establishing the civil administration and the police.

"Although I am returning to Angora in order to get into touch with the assembly, I will yet take advantage of the first occasion which presents itself, in order to have the honor of meeting you.

[Signed] "Kemal."

Land More British Troops.

Large forces of British infantry have been landed here from the trans-Atlantic liner Glengorm Castle. These soldiers are to reinforce the lines on the Asiatic side of the Bosphorus, which the British will defend in the event the Turkish nationalist army at Ismid begins a movement toward Constantinople. The Kemalist army is understood to consist of two divisions.

When the Glengorm Castle entered the Golden Horn and the masses of infantrymen became visible from the city, the immense gatherings of Greeks and Armenians seeking visas outside the interallied passport bureau quickly melted away. The expression was heard: "We won't bother with passports now. The British are sending ships and troops."

Sultan Will Not Quit.

In a letter to an intimate friend the sultan, reports of whose abdication have been in circulation, declares he will not abdicate.

"I shall continue to discharge my holy duties until the end," he wrote. "When the Nationalists enter Constantinople, I shall have something pertinent to say to them. I have done what I believed was to the interests of my country and my people. I have made mistakes, but they were human. The Nationalists admit I have been kept a prisoner in Constantinople. Therefore, how can I be responsible for the adversity of my people?"

NIGHT CABINET SESSION

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Oct. 1 [1:20 a. m.].—After a war council session lasting two hours, the British cabinet adjourned to meet this morning at 10 o'clock. It was announced that there was no material change in the near east situation, but no explanation was vouchsafed for the sudden call for the meeting, which Prime Minister Lloyd George sent out shortly before 11 o'clock last night.

The cabinet also was in session for a considerable time yesterday afternoon. The chiefs of the army, navy and air forces attended.

According to a Paris dispatch Lord Hardinge, the British ambassador, was informed by Premier Poincare last night of the contents of a message which he had just received from M. Franklin-Bouillon, the special envoy whom France sent to urge Kemal to accept the allies' peace proposals. Lord Hardinge is reported to have said that Kemal was showing a very reasonable attitude.

Deny Ordering Ultimatum.

The statement printed yesterday that Gen. Harington had been ordered to convey an ultimatum to Kemal was officially declared not to be true. What the cabinet did was to assure Gen. Harington of its fullest confidence and that he was free to take any measures he saw fit to clear the Turks out of the neutral zone.

It is clear that there is a division of opinion in British military and civilian leaders about the seriousness of the situation. One school to which both soldiers and civilians belong believes Kemal is simply bargaining in the typical Turkish way and as an oriental he would be eternally disgraced if he accepted the first offer. The other school, to which it is said Mr. Lloyd George belongs, believes Kemal is delaying for a sinister object. They think that the threat against Chanak is only a bluff and that he intends to attack Constantinople as soon as he has troops up.

The latter school also fears the influence of the wild spirits at Angora, who are anxious for a pan-Islamic war against Europe, and particularly the British empire.

Refugees' Plight Pathetic.

ON BOARD THE GREEK STEAMER PROPONTIS, WITH THE AMERICAN RELIEF COMMITTEE, SMYRNA BAY, Thursday, Sept. 28.—Seventeen steamers, placed at the disposal of the American relief committee by the Greek authorities, are here endeavoring to complete the evacuation of 140,000 refugees by Sept. 30, the time limit fixed by the Turks.

The shore is crowded with the completely demoralized population, encircled by Turkish soldiers, who are constantly firing off rifles. There is continuous moaning and weeping by helpless women and children. The steamers along the railroad pier are taking aboard the refugees. All are searched and robbed by the Turkish soldiers, who only allow the aged and children to pass.

Killed with Rifle Butts.

Seven corpses are lying on the pier, the remains of persons struck by the butt ends of rifles. The embarkation of the refugees is being humanely conducted by American and British sailors alone, regardless of the difficulties and fatigue. A large French battleship is anchored in the bay, but has offered no assistance.

The town appears utterly abandoned. No trade is possible. The large American tobacco stores located here are still burning. It is charged that many Christian girls were violated by the Turks.

GREEKS KILL 26 TURKS IN BATTLE IN THRACE TOWN

Charge Kemal Soldiers Massacred Eleven.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—A communique from Gen. Polymenacos, commander in chief of the Greek army in Thrace, was received today from Athens in a dispatch to the Greek legation here. It said:

"Turkish troops penetrated the neutral zone, occupying the village of Safalan, Thrace, where they massacred eleven inhabitants. The Greek forces shortly after made an attack and killed twenty-five Turkish soldiers and one officer. The Greek losses were one killed and one wounded. The Turks were under the command of an officer namer Redjeb, who arrived in Constantinople ten days ago."

Ex-King Sails for Sicily.

ATHENS, Sept. 30.—[By Associated Press.]—King Constantine, Queen Sophie and Prince Nicholas sailed today for Palermo, Sicily, on board a Greek steamer on which they embarked at Oropus, placed at the disposal of the fallen monarch by the revolutionary committee. The departure was without ceremony.

The revolutionary committee will visit King George tomorrow for the first time. The acceptance of their appointments as Premier and minister of foreign affairs, respectively, were still being awaited today from M. Zaimis and M. Politis.

The prefecture of police has disclosed that the following persons are held in prison awaiting trial:

Former Premiers Gounaris, Stratos, and Propopapadakis, who conducted the government during the Asia Minor campaign; former Minister of War Theotokis, Generals Constantinopoulos and Dousmanis, and Col. Tsontos.

Win Aid of All Provinces.

The revolutionary committee has announced after conferring with the ministers of Great Britain, France, Italy, Holland, and Spain, that there is no doubt the revolution has created an absolutely new condition of affairs, clearly indicating that the entente nations will favor Grecian political rights.

Dispatches from all the provinces of Greece tell of the eagerness of the population to join the nationalist movement. It is officially announced that practically all the civil and military authorities of the country have recognized the new régime.

MAKES FRENCH WORRY

BY FLOYD GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The hurried departure of former Premier Venizelos for London early this morning has caused more anxiety in Quai d'Orsay than the Turkish infiltration of the British zone at Chanak. If the Greek statesman can persuade Prime Minister Lloyd George to let Greece again be Great Britain's ally in the near east, with all that that implies, the French government fears an immediate Turkish attack upon the British troops and an attempt to cross the Dardanelles and a repercussion through the Moslem belt from Gibraltar to India without parallel.

An extraordinary Greek council was held in the Majestic hotel late Friday night. It was attended by Nicolas Politis, the new Greek foreign minister, the former commissioner of Smyrna, and many other Greek statesmen and soldiers. The question considered was M. Venizelos' answer to the appeal from Athens to save Thrace.

Depends on British.

The Greek council decided the success of M. Venizelos' effort would entirely depend on the British attitude toward the new Greek government and that the former premier himself had the best chance of winning this support.

The advent of M. Venizelos into the diplomatic game, in addition to the prospective armed conflict between the British and Turks at Chanak, caused Premier Poincare today to suddenly cancel an important engagement which would take him into the provinces.

The position in the near east further is complicated by the new Greek government rushing troops to eastern Thrace and enlisting the support of Jugo-Slavia and Roumania in keeping the Turks out of Europe.

WORK ON NEW STADIUM PROGRESSES RAPIDLY

The work of building the foundation for the new stadium which is being erected by the South Park commissioners in Grant park is nearing completion, as shown by this picture. When completed the stadium will afford a place for holding public events of all kinds.

NO FUN BEING KING NOWDAYS—CONSTANTINE

Blames Greek Revolt on U. S. Action.

recognize me. What kind of democracy is that?

"I think America ought to do something about this Smyrna situation. America is a big nation with a world of prestige. She should keep order in the world and see that the Turks do not conquer western civilization.

Twisted Wilson Around Fingers.

"You say America's policy is non-intervention? That policy is doing Europe a lot of harm, together with the foolish terms of the peace treaties, which messed up everything. Of course they twisted Woodrow Wilson around their fingers in Paris—have you read Keynes' book? But America could now do a good deal to restore order. She should put an army in Asia Minor and keep these uncivilized Turks from upsetting the world."

Constantine paused, produced a silver cigarette case, and lit a cigarette. He did not offer me one, but passed matches across the table when I produced my cigarettes.

"I hope the revolutionary army thoroughly defeats the Turks," he continued. "They must. The Turks are still the same uncivilized nomads who invaded Europe 500 years ago. They have not produced any culture or art. If they get Thrace there will be a constant menace to western Europe. Their policy is extermination of Greece. We can and must defeat them in order to preserve the Greek nation.

Glad to Be Rid of Job.

"How does it feel not to be king any more? Between you and me and the gatepost I do not care anything about not being king. Being king is no fun these days. It is a lot of hard work. The position is very difficult. I now want to live like a plain country gentleman."

The conversation had lasted one hour and twilight had fallen in the garden when the aid-de-camp appeared and halted at attention twenty paces distant and saluted. The former king beckoned him to approach.

Prince Gilicksbourg rose—a tall, bulky figure in the dusk—shaking hands as he thanked me for my bon voyage on his trip to Italy.

BRITISH AND TURKS STILL SPARRING

1—The British hold the Asiatic shore of the Dardanelles from Chanak to Kara Bournou. They have command of the water. Battleships stripped for action are massed in the strait.

2—The Turks have evacuated Erenkeni, a town near the shore of the Dardanelles. They hold a tight line about the British positions at Chanak.

3—Hopes are expressed that the Turk-British conference at Mudania may avert war.

4—Turks who crossed the Bosphorus into Thrace are reported to have attacked Safalan, Thrace, but were defeated by the Greeks.

74,000 SMYRNA REFUGEES TAKEN AWAY IN 2 DAYS

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Approximately 74,000 refugees were evacuated from Smyrna during Thursday and Friday, according to reports to the state department today from Admiral Bristol, American high commissioner at Constantinople.

It is understood that this considerable accomplishment was made possible through the work of Greek ships, allowed to enter Smyrna harbor as a result of American influence and also to the work of American destroyers and other vessels which are coöperating in the relief work.

Admiral Bristol estimated that there are at present between 20,000 and 50,000 refugees in Smyrna and its vicinity. Reports to the admiral from Mitylene show that there are now 145,000 refugees there.

Huge British Fleet Backs "Thin Red Line" at Chanak

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
(Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.)

CHANAK, Asia, Sept. 30.—This little town of 7,000 or 8,000 souls has heard the tocsin of war generation after generation since the days when the beautiful Helen of Troy caused one of history's most notable conflicts, but never before—even in the days of the world war—has it seen such preparations for battle.

The little band of Britishers who hold this key position to the Dardanelles are lying in a triple line of trenches, protected by heavy artillery and manned by light field pieces, machine guns, and rifles. Behind them in the waters of the straits lie the pride of Great Britain—the best of her majestic navy. Over their heads fly the newest and most powerful of war planes.

Great Britain is prepared to give the Turk the best she has in blood and steel if he starts a row. Every Tommy is confident of the outcome. There are Turks all about them — grinning through the British barbed wires, but the Tommies are not worried.

War Craft Jam Narrows.

The most modern post-Jutland dreadnaughts, the fleetest and most powerful battle cruisers, huge airplane carriers, a dozen destroyers and gunboats, and small auxiliary craft, including big coffee colored transports, jam the narrows.

Polished steel rifles thrust from the turrets and undraped with the usual mantles of canvas and the customary wooden, brass tipped plugs are grinning. The ships, stripped for action and with steam up, are ready to support the "thin red line" strung across the burning desert. The most powerful searchlights in the fleet are mounted to light up the scene, and fifty-two airplanes aboard the Argus are ready to direct the gunfire.

The fleet's presence is saving the British forces and the civilian population here from Turkish irregulars, who are drunk with victory and have blood in their eyes. The fleet prevents the Turks from bringing up artillery against Chanak on the high roads parallel with the sea from Eren Keui and Lapsaki. It would take Mustapha Kemal Pasha months to construct roads overland through the hills to bring up guns.

Machine Guns Awe Turks.

Last night Turk patrols infiltrated down the face of the hills, across the valley, past Geovese castle, directly in the center of the semicircle around Chanak. It was believed that the fleet would be unable to give protection there without shooting up the town in the line of fire. But the Turk found the Tommies wide awake at the machine guns and so withdrew.

In the west end of town the British dynamited houses and blew up the bridge near Eren Keui to prevent the Turks from making a surprise attack.

All the Turks seen inside the neutral zone are mounted on small native ponies, averaging less than thirteen hands high, but capable of going where British cavalry will be unable to follow. They are armed with sabers, rifles, and three bandoliers of ammunition. They apparently are disciplined.

Fire Madman Who Caused 7 Deaths Sought in N. Y.

New York, Sept. 30.—A madman whose mania for fires caused the deaths of seven persons early today is being sought tonight by the police acting on information that an attempt was made to set the building next door afire shortly before the apartment house at 241 West 109th street burst into flames. Mrs. Herman Hoff and William Hummell, whose two sons were lost in the fire, will probably die, it was said at the hospital tonight.

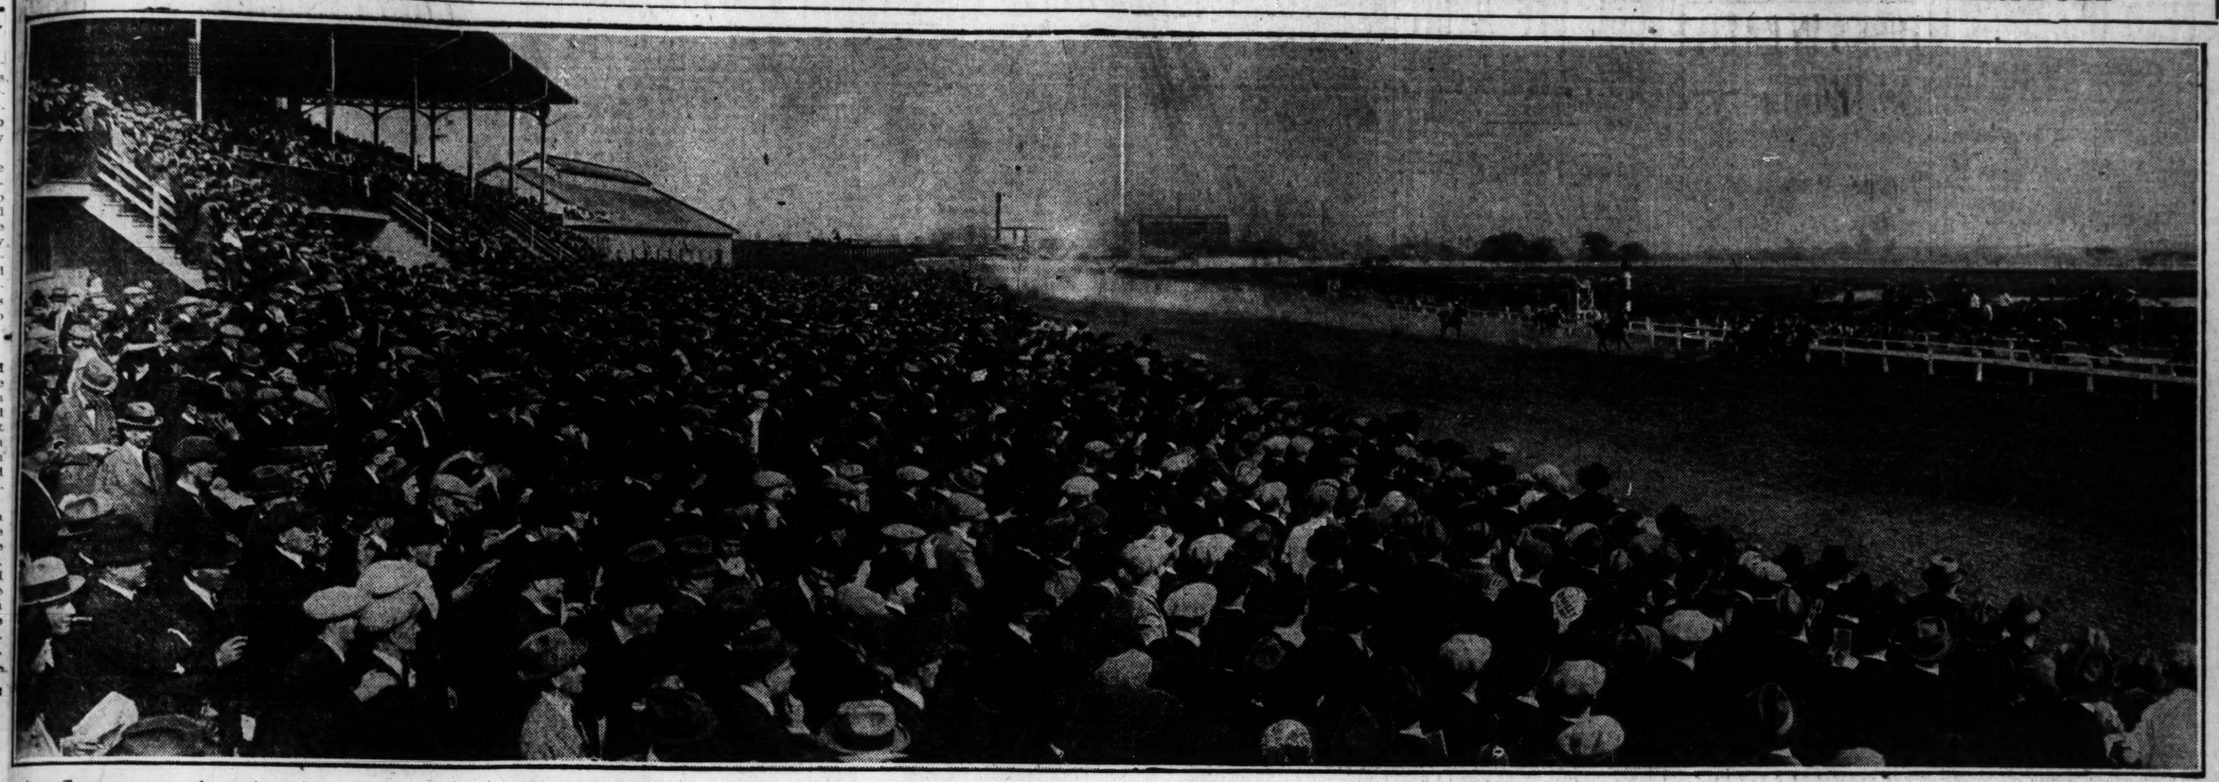
REVIVAL OF RACING FOR CHICAGO BRINGS CROWD TO HAWTHORNE TRACK



Twenty or more thousand people went by train, by auto, and by foot to be on hand for the opening day of a proposed twelve day race meeting at the famous old track built by Ed Corrigan. Fans packed the grandstand, the lawn, and overflowed on to the infield. Under the grandstand hundreds of the boys were trying to cheat a bit as regards betting, while hundreds of others were in the paddock sizing up the nags before and after they went to the post. The picture shows the crowd in the grandstand and on the lawn as the horses in the first race of the program were about to flash across the finish line.

The finish of the third race on the program was one of the most gruelling of many tight windups. The picture shows Tuscola leading the field of a fairly bunched group of horses and all of the jockeys bending every effort to force their mounts to the utmost. Try as they could, Tuscola's rivals were unable to head her and she romped home a fairly easy winner.

Here are some of the boys trying to figure out just which horse should win the race about to be run. The picture shows a familiar scene on the lawn and under the grandstand. Nearly every one at the track had a program, for they found it tough going unless they were hep to what horses were in the race and the handicaps with which they were burdened. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

CABINS FLOODED AS LINER FIGHTS THROUGH STORM

New York, Sept. 30.—[Special.]—After bucking what Capt. Sir James T. W. Charles, commander, said was the worst storm he had ever encountered in his forty-two years at sea, the steamship Aquitania, flagship of the Cunard fleet, steamed into port today with plenty of evidence of the violence of the twenty-two hour storm.

Windows and doors on B deck, seventy feet above the water line, were smashed, and more than forty passengers were virtually washed out of some of the first cabin rooms on that deck on Sept. 24 and 25.

Expected Disastrous End.

Many of the 1,852 passengers on board, among whom were the Hon. Reginald McKenna, formerly chancellor of the exchequer, and prominent British banker, and Sir Claude Hill, declared they looked for the worst last Monday.

Some of the women who were forced out of staterooms flooded by the seas became hysterical, several of them putting on life preservers, while others prayed.

Charles A. Peters, a millionaire oil man of Tulsa, Okla., with his family, occupied two of the most expensive suites on the big vessel.

Seas Pound Against Ship.

"I never again want to go through what I experienced on this trip from Cherbourg," Mr. Peters said today. "All last Sunday night tremendous seas were crashing against the vessel.

"I thought no seas could make an impression on such a liner as the Aquitania, but it was tossed about like a shingle."

KEMAL SON OF POOR PARENTS

Mustapha Kemal Pasha was born in Macedonia, then under the Turkish flag, forty-five years ago. His parents were obscure persons in the community.

Kemal received little schooling while a youngster. He was induced to enter the Imperial Military college at Constantinople where despite his scholastic handicap he made a brilliant record.

For some years previous to the outbreak of the European war he was associated with the young Turk movement. Always an ardent patriot he put forth all his vim in the fighting against the British. His leadership was responsible for the defeat of the British forces at Gallipoli.

Kemal was considered by the Germans as one of the best of the Turkish leaders. His success brought him the enmity of Enver Pasha, but Kemal was always able to best his rival. After the war he became the aide of the sultan.

In 1919 when a mutiny in the third army corps broke out, Kemal was sent to settle it. Instead he joined the mutineers who had risen against British dominance of the sultan, and soon enlisted an enormous following. He was instrumental in the formation of the nationalist government at Angora which had for its platform the restoration of the Turkish empire, dismembered by the treaty of Sevres. His government soon overshadowed the official government at Constantinople in importance.

While Kemal was carrying on his operations against the Greeks his cause gained considerable support from the upper classes in Constantinople. Kemal's mother lived in the capital and organized various enterprises to raise funds for the relatives of nationalists killed in the fighting. She gave several garden parties which were attended by many prominent Turks.

Kemal is a blonde with blue eyes. This has given rise to stories that he was actually a German. However, this is explained by the fact that he is a Nordic. All Nordics originally inhabitated the Baltic basin. Various tribes migrated from there years ago to different parts of the world, some settling in Turkey.

GET RICH QUICK PLAN LANDS AGED COUPLE IN JAIL

Pomeroy, Ohio, Sept. 30.—With bail fixed at $3,000 each, indications were today that Mrs. Susan Kraus, 63, and her husband, George Kraus, 68, who are alleged to have obtained between $200,000 and $300,000 from Pomeroy people, with the promise of a return of 10 per cent or better, would spend tonight and Sunday in the county jail. They were brought to jail last night, after having been arrested on a charge of embezzlement.

Holders of alleged promissory notes, said to have been given by Mrs. Kraus as security, continued to report to officials today.

There is much speculation as to what has become of supposedly large sums the woman is said to have obtained.

Mrs. Stahl was the daughter of John Mahon, former president of the South Side Trust and Savings bank.

Gilded Carriages of Rich New Yorkers Go for a Song

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 30.—Carriages which once belonged to Tim Sullivan, Anthony J. Drexel, Mrs. August Belmont II., and others of America's distinguished and aristocratic citizens—thirteen of them in all—were auctioned off here today for $20. They were fitted out in silk, velvet and leather with ivory and nickeled fittings, and are said to have cost $15,000. Several horses sold from $5 to $51 each. The inroads automobiles have made on the livery stable business caused the old horse drawn vehicles to be abandoned.

SCHWARTZ WILL SPEED HEARINGS ON SUBWAY PLAN

Holds All-Chicago Idea Is Big Step Forward.

The all-Chicago subway-traction plan, which promises to become one of the main issues of the spring mayoralty campaign, will be pushed with all possible speed by the council local transportation committee, according to an announcement yesterday by its chairman, Ald. U. S. Schwartz.

Public hearings on the plan will be staged as soon as possible, but it is doubtful if the public can be heard until after a full discussion of the plan is had by the committee this week. It will be impossible to get the plan in shape for presentation to the voters at the November elections, but every effort will be made to place the Schwartz plan for purchasing the elevated and surface lines systems on the ballot next April.

Await Action on Constitution.

One reason for delay is that the aldermen deem it best to await the fate of the proposed new state constitution to be voted on in December. While existing state laws make it possible for the city to acquire the traction properties through the Schwartz plan of issuing public utility certificates, the new constitution, if adopted, will give the city wider powers in the acquirement of public utilities.

"At last we have both a physical plan and a plan for financing before the subcommittee," Ald. Schwartz said, "and that is at least a hopeful sign that something concrete will be accomplished this time. Our attorneys are working out the details of the plan for financing with the advisory committee of bankers, and the subcommittee will take up the consideration of the physical plan next week.

Long Step Toward Subway.

"Of course, there will be minor changes in the All-Chicago council plan, but the general scheme, we believe, will be acceptable to all parties and factions. More than 100 business men's organizations evolved and ratified this plan, and that augurs well for its success. When you realize how difficult it is to bring all the conflicting parties together on a proposition of this kind—and we believe we have done that—you have an idea as to what a great step forward this means toward a subway goal."

The subcommittee also will take up the matter of seeing that the city obtains adequate compensation from the comprehensive bus system planned by John Hertz as a result of his acquirement of the property of the Chicago Motor Bus company. The subcommittee has had under consideration for some time the question of licensing the latter company, but no agreement has been reached.

The White Line Motor Bus company yesterday applied to the Illinois commerce commission for permission to extend the operation of that line from Park Ridge to Des Plaines by way of the Rand road, now known as Park avenue.

Mother Needed

Miss Granville and deserted baby.

In one of the many tiny white cribs at St. Vincent's orphanage, Huron and La Salle streets, is a crying 3 months old girl who wants her mother. She was taken there last evening by a policewoman of the Chicago avenue station.

Baby Jane Doe—that is the child's name for the moment—was deserted by her mother yesterday. Miss Gene Granville, a student at Moody Bible institute, Chicago avenue and La Salle street, was standing in front of the school, talking to several friends. A woman carrying a baby loitered nearby.

"Let me see the baby," Miss Granville said. The woman placed the baby in her arms, and Miss Granville turned to show her friends. When she turned around the woman who carried the baby was gone.

Officials of the Chicago and Alton railroad and representatives of striking shopmen were in session all day yesterday at Bloomington, Ill., in an endeavor to reach an agreement that would end the walkout. Receiver W. G. Bierd of the road had set 7 a. m. as the time limit on a proposal submitted to the men, but a coterie of business men of Bloomington intervened, with the result that the parleys were prolonged. It was hoped that terms might be reached by tomorrow morning.

Union Pacific officials meanwhile began an inspection of Alton properties that may lead to a $2,000,000 loan to the Alton. J. A. Hayes, H. A. Snyder, and Glenn Adams, all of Omaha, composed the Union Pacific committee.

A decision in the case of the dispatchers by the United States labor board is expected within a fortnight, it was announced yesterday at conclusion of evidence taking. The board also indicated that a decision in the new maintenance of way wage scale might be announced in a few days.

Grand Lodge of Elks Hold Session Here Today

With Grand Exalted Ruler J. Edgar Masters of Charleroi, Pa., more than 900 representative members of the grand lodge of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks will meet in the Congress hotel today at 11 o'clock. Plans of the national organization for the ensuing year will be discussed.

'MIKE' AND 'SAM' COOL OFF A BIT IN CITY HALL ROW

Both Sides Wring Comfort from Mayor's Words.

The Faherty-Ettelson imbroglio, which began as a heated mill crammed with action, personalities and threats of resignation, cooled down perceptibly yesterday with indications that a compromise is in sight upon which both battlers may compose their dignity.

On reflection both the president of the board of local improvements, Mr. Faherty, and Corporation Counsel Ettelson's friends appeared to find a reason for rejoicing at Mayor Thompson's decision that the controversy over the right to hire and fire lawyers for the board—a power which involves control of the South Water street litigation—be submitted to the courts.

"It is what I suggested to the mayor in my letter," said Mr. Faherty, wearing a broad grin, when asked for his opinion of the mayor's ultimatum.

How Ettelson Regards It.

Although when asked what attitude he will take toward the proposal that "the matter be ironed out in court," Mr. Ettelson said that he will "cross that bridge when it is reached." Those in close touch with him spoke in this wise:

"The mayor's court suggestion shows a trend toward Mr. Ettelson's view of the law. If the question goes to court for decision, Mr. Ettelson's opinion will govern until the courts decide the case. That may be many months."

"Meanwhile Attorney George P. Foster, for whom Mr. Ettelson has refused to approve pay vouchers, will be drawing no pay. Nor will the other Faherty attorneys unless they take orders from Ettelson. Foster has drawn no money since July 9. As long as he is off the pay roll Ettelson is the victor."

Takes No Chances.

But Mr. Ettelson is taking no chances on the compromise. He labored with five assistants until late in the afternoon perfecting his voluminous opinion supporting his view of the law. The opinion, comprising thirty pages, will be ready for the mayor tomorrow morning.

"This whole thing is simply a mare's nest," City Controller Harding declared. "There is no danger of anyone resigning, in my opinion. When the vouchers for the payment of these attorneys come to me, I'll follow the law. There will be no trouble."

Mr. Harding indicated that by "the law" he referred to Mr. Ettelson's interpretation of it.

Milk Producers Get Boost; No Retail Price Increase

Milk producers were granted an increase of 5 cents per hundred pounds for their product by the dealers yesterday after a heated conference lasting all day at Hotel La Salle. The boost is too slight to influence the present retail price, according to F. H. Kuhman, chairman of the dealers. The new rate is effective to December 1 when a new schedule of $1.90 per hundred pounds, or 10 cents less than the old rate, becomes effective December 31.

Exemptions for City Experts Open Doors for Quasi-Officials to Escape U. S. Tax

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Washinton, D. C., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—The internal revenue solicitor's opinion exempting from income taxes the $2,742,666 in fees paid to five real estate and building experts of the city of Chicago saves them the handsome sum of $1,450,830. That is the minimum. It was reckoned by a Washington income tax specialist at the request and expense of THE TRIBUNE. It may be, and possibly is, much more.

The latest opinion, reversing one written, published, and said more than a year ago by the same tax bureau, holding that these same experts on the same fees for the same services must pay income taxes, probably will be made public next Tuesday.

Decision Is Important.

It will be of country-wide interest if permitted to stand because it opens the door to income tax exemption to many others throughout the nation, as well as other friends of the Thompson-Lundin administration in Chicago. Its exact effect cannot be accurately forecast in advance, but this far it will go:

It will permit law firms, engineers, architects, court reporting agencies, real estate, building, and other experts to escape income taxes on income, in certain forms, made by cities, villages, towns, boroughs school boards, park boards, drainage districts, library boards, levee districts, municipal water systems, street railways, electric light plants, and harbor boards, township or other subdivisions of the state, as well as paid, itself.

In equity there will be thousands of persons entitled to a refund in their income taxes under this opinion. These refunds will probably run into millions of dollars, unless the opinion is made to apply exclusively to Chicago's five experts. And it can be reliable stated that it is not the present intention to limit the application of the opinon to the Thompson-Lundin experts.

A Lavish Reduction.

The saving of $1,450,830 to the five Chicago street specialists was reckoned on the basis of an arbitrary cut in their net assessible incomes, before this exemption ruling was made, of a full $340,000. This is a lavish reduction, perhaps more than even the experts themselves could justify.

But it was estimated that this amount would amply cover any deductions the experts might claim. It would supply them with a fund to pay for all employés they hired, buy added furniture needed, pay for paper, blueprints, carbon, pencils and other material, as well as telephone service, street car tickets, automobile hire, and other legitimate expenses.

In addition it also would cover any contributions to political campaigns or donations to the mayor's traveling or other parties the experts may have made. Above all that it was estimated that this sum was more than sufficient to include the ordinary exemptions which the experts might claim because of having a wife and children, contributions to charity, and payments in local taxes.

$340,000 Is Deducted.

Accordingly, $50,000 was deducted from the fees paid each of four experts and $140,000 from the fifth, Lyons, because he once made the claim that he spent about that much in earning his fees, although the nature of these expenditures have not been made public and may be open to dispute.

The following short tabulation shows the fees paid by the city to each expert and his saving in income taxes because of the reversal of opinion of the solicitor, together with the total fees and total savings:

Name. Kind of expert.	Fees paid.	Tax saving.
Frank H. Mescel, building	$ 460,418	$ 239,250
Austin J. Lynch, building	544,168	303,090
Arthur S. Merigold, real state	577,426	322,790
Edward C. Waller Jr., real estate	580,326	324,950
Ernest H. Lyons, real estate	580,326	260,750
Totals	$2,742,664	$1,450,830

This anticipated saving in income taxes is because the internal revenue solicitor has decided that these experts are city employés. If they are finally determined to be, there are other favorites of the city hall who, by the same reasoning, should be able to get a rebate in their income taxes.

Law Reporting Agency.

One of these is the Central Law Reporting agency. In this firm is reputed to be, at least, one Chicago politician, recently indicted in the school board scandal, who has sat in the inner councils of the Thompson-Lundin crowd. This agency has such a powerful political pull that it does all of the court reporting, not only for the Thompson bunch in city politics, but also for the Small bunch in state politics.

It is much more regular as a city employé and much more continuous in its service than the experts. The latter boasts of having a five year contract with the city, while this agency has been on the job for more than seven years. The agency's services can also be classed as an expert, as those of the building and real estate specialists and the money to pay both come from the same city treasury.

Lawyers May Benefit.

Other beneficiaries of the new ruling are all of the downstate lawyers living along the Illinois river, who have been hired from time to time to try court cases involving damages to farm land because overflow of water charged to the drainage canal. There are a large number of these gentlemen, who have flirted with the Thompson-Lundin organization. They ought to be able to get some correction from the government in the form of a refund.

Then, too, the Strauss Bridge company, which has one or more friends in the Thompson-Lundin organization, ought to be in a position to get a large bundle of currency from the United States. Their business is designing bridges and, so far as they get money from the city, they are as much city employés as the five experts.

In one pot they collected $433,000 from the city on a technical claim of infringement upon their designs of bridges. This they got from the present city administration although unable to collect anything from four previous administrations to which they presented these same claims.

Accountants May Profit.

Also the accounting firm of William E. Mason Jr., which has done some auditing for the city, should be in a position to get a reduction in income tax from the government. The late congressman, William E. Mason, Sr., was a staunch supporter of the Thompson-Lundin outfit, and no reason suggests itself why his son's accounting firm should not be classed as a city employe as much as any of the five real estate and building experts.

The Adams-Beatty-Francois corporation, who claimed to be industrial appraisers and engineers, was a protege of the city hall, who collected $190,254 from the city for one year's services. Of this at least $88,393 was "sugar" as an employee of the concern referred to the overcharge. The service of this corporation was an appraisal of the surface and elevated railroad properties for the city. They too were employes of the municipality in the sense that the experts were, and, accordingly are entitled to a refund in income taxes.

There are doubtless among the Thompson-Lundin favorites, who in equity should have a refund from the government, who probably have been overlooked at this distance from the City hall. But these illustrate the width of the door to be flung open by the solicitor's opinion.

BABY WINS NAME; FATHER, MOTHER, AND POULIN LOSE

All Three Adults Assailed in Judge's Verdict.

bench, "that the court is of the opinion that the only real innocent party to the case is the mysterious baby. This baby has been foremost in the mind of the court during the entire trial; but in the clamor and cries of the public the child had been almost forgotten."

After briefly outlining the facts in the evidence, the judge declared there were only two undisputed facts in the case—that there was a baby born on Nov. 28, 1921, and that the relatrix, Augusta Tiernan, "is the mother thereof." The remainder of the facts he found to be in "direct conflict."

Believes in Woman's Guilt.

Mrs. Tiernan was concentrating so desperately on the legal phrases being read that she seemed to be paying no attention, outwardly. Suddenly her name was sounded, the judge saying:

"The court believes the story of Mrs. Tiernan in reference to the conduct between herself and Harry Poulin; no woman could take the stand and tell a story to this court as told by Mrs. Tiernan and be wholly unbelieved."

It was the first word telling Mrs. Tiernan that the court believed her story of shame, and guilt, and passion. And it was the first word that made her cry.

She had been forced to stoop to conquer what little she won. In triumphing over Harry Poulin's charge that her story was a "frameup," she had lost, as a woman. And Harry Poulin seemed almost the victor as the judge stressed the veracity of her story regarding her compromising meetings with another woman's husband.

Discredits Unusual Claim.

But there was another part of Mrs. Tiernan's testimony, a part which the court felt compelled to disregard, the story that she and her husband, although living together in the same house, attending the same parties, during the first three months of 1921, had not lived together as man and wife from the first part of January until April 2.

Emphasizing the husband's lack of suspicion, Judge Ducomb said: "The husband knew, on or about the 2d of April, 1921, that his wife was to become a mother, and so far as the records show no doubt ever entered his mind until Jan. 8, 1922, as to the paternity of the child, when his wife confessed to him."

"I may ask here why it was that the husband, a man of wisdom and a professor of law, never doubted he was the father of the child until his wife told him on January 8, 1922, when the child was born less than eight months after natural relations were resumed?"

Professor Lifts His Head.

This time it was Prof. Tiernan who was aroused from his apathy. The words were a challenge to him. He wanted to meet the challenge with bowed head and numbed senses. But he forced himself to meet it, head up, with a sneer of repudiation.

The judge interjected a bit that was not in the written decision, the most important fragment, according to Mrs. Tiernan.

"I do not want this interpreted as a judgment that Harry Poulin is not guilty," he said, "or that Mrs. Tiernan told an untruth about her meetings with Harry Poulin. Mrs. Tiernan did not tell an untruth; it was a true story.

"If my sympathy would go out at this time to any one, it would go out to Mrs. Tiernan. I do not believe Harry Poulin's testimony when he said he didn't meet her."

Poulin shifted his weight from his right to his left leg as he flopped more heavily against the desk.

The judge returned to his reading, explaining how the conduct of the woman accusing the man should be considered in evaluating her testimony. He pointed out that she was "extremely passionate, sensitive, and quick tempered" and that she had shown 'no modesty or refinement in the court in the entire testimony."

Daubed Her Own Portrait.

Mrs. Tiernan had given the court the instruments with which to paint her picture. For ten days she had been striving to prove what the judge was hurling back at her. Impossible, by her own sworn statement, to be slandered, the woman who had fought to prove that she was as bad as the judge was limitting sat quiet—strangely, dangerously quiet—thinking.

And while she thought half formulated, confused things, Prof. Tiernan became the victim of the court's condemnation.

"Prof. Tiernan is also to blame. He is probably to blame for a large degree of the trouble. The blame lies there, and with Harry Poulin.

"John P. Tiernan has neglected his wife; he let his wife go out alone in society. He has not been her companion. John P. Tiernan shouldn't expect any other result."

Then the court, concluding as it had begun, thought of the baby, the defenseless baby, the real sufferer.

"Families Completely Smirched."

"There can be no further injury," said the judge, "done to the two families involved in the controversy with the exception of the injury the court might bring to the baby by labeling it illegitimate.

"I do not know now who is the father of this child. Mrs. Tiernan may conscientiously think she knows when she says Harry Poulin is the father. She may be right. Harry Poulin may be the father or John P. Tiernan may be the father.

"But this court will not be a party to any additional act or judgment which will bring this child into any further disgrace from the sin of the mother."

And William John Tiernan slept a wholesome, sound baby slumber as the court gave him a name, a father, and the possibility of a future.

Insists on Smirching Baby.

The baby had won, but its mother and its legal father had lost. Prosecutor Jellison made an immediate motion for a new trial. Prof. Tiernan half lifted his wife out of the room and up the stairs; the nurse followed, carrying the baby.

As she got to the door Mrs. Tiernan collapsed, a scorned, pitiable woman. She was no longer the heroine of a scarlet drama, and the loungers in the corridor no longer mingled pity with their curiosity. They had veered physically and psychologically from the defeated accuser to the victorious accused.

For the first time during the hearing Harry Poulin became the center of an interested and a sympathetic group.

Nobody assisted Prof. Tiernan as he carried his wife to a bench and tried to revive her. Nobody bothered to pick up the baby's bonnet as it fell from its mother's hand. Nobody helped Tiernan half carry, half drag the semi-conscious form of Mrs. Tiernan to the automobile.

Somebody called up Mrs. Poulin; the Tiernans drove away, and South Bend got back to normalcy.

All the way home Prof. Tiernan, slowly recovering from the first dull reaction to the decision, repeated:

"And so, Gussie, they didn't believe your story about our not really living together. They didn't believe, just because we went to parties together.

"Why, Gussie, you know and I know that it was hell for both of us, all that time, when we had to pretend to outsiders that we were happy. It was hell for both of us."

Prof. Tiernan feels that they "threw the case" by not testifying more definitely as to their family quarrels and estrangement.

"But I didn't want to, and neither did Mrs. Tiernan," he explained, "because I felt that it was Harry Poulin and not I that was on trial. But we lost because I tried to be decent about telling my family life. The next trial, I am afraid, will have to be different."

Tiernan, as soon as his wife leaves, will sell the little home on Diamond avenue and dispose of the furnishings, except the personal things which Mrs. Tiernan is to take with her.

Harry Poulin on leaving the courtroom made an enigmatic comment on the double edged decision: "Just what I expected."

Mrs. Poulin was "too nervous and too happy" to say much except that her faith in her husband had never wavered. Later Poulin was called to the bedside of his father, Elzear Poulin, who is ill and expected momentarily to die.

It was an old man and an uncomprehending woman that entered the Tiernan home. An old woman who had been taking care of the children came to the door. She didn't have to ask the decision. Mary and Irene, the two little girls, entered the room. Awed, almost afraid, they were, of the strange mother who sat looking down and seeing nothing, of the unnaturally quiet father, who paid no attention to them.

And in an alcove the baby began to cry, an unpleasant, fretful, querulous cry.

Later this afternoon Prof. Tiernan stated emphatically that there was no possibility of a reconciliation between himself and his wife.

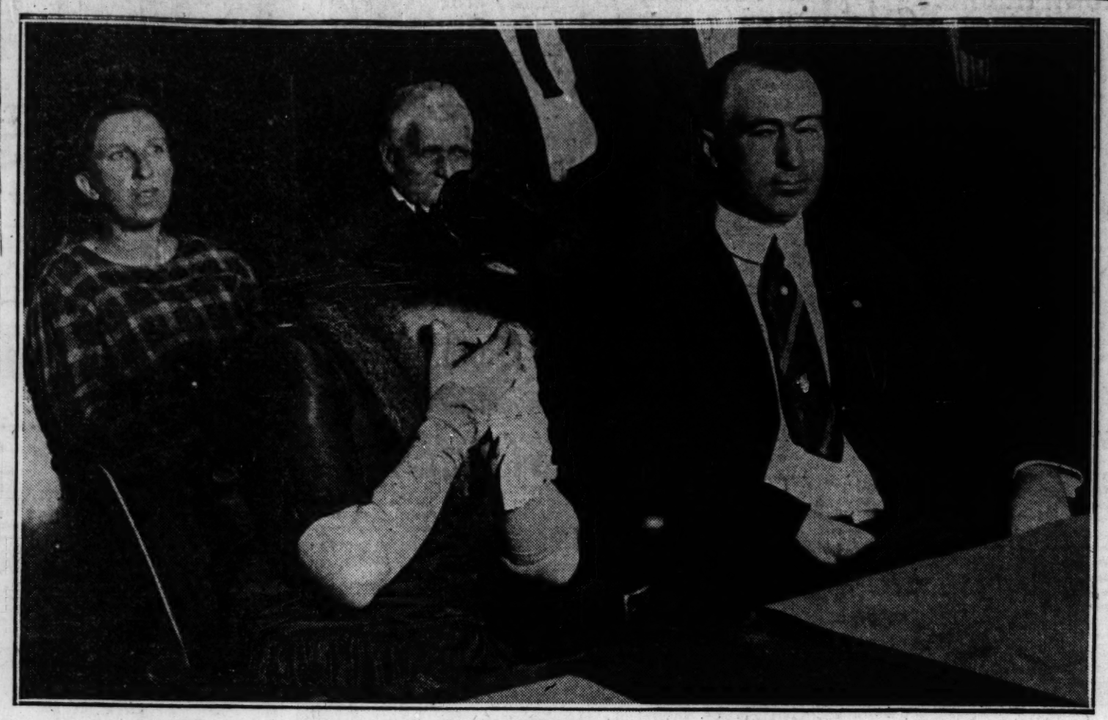
"My wife leaves tomorrow or Monday to visit her family in Bronson, Mich. I shall drive her there. When she leaves my house it will be the beginning of the separation, which will end, inevitably, in the divorce court.

Has a Good Word for Her.

"Gussie is lovable, pathetic; she has lots of good points. And, through it all, she was a good mother to the children. The children are too young to put in a home, so for the present at least I am going to let her have them. I am afraid if I took them away from her now it would cause a mental strain that might be too much for her to bear.

"What will I do? O, I'll work hard and try to forget," said the professor, who two years ago had worked too hard and "happened" to forget to think of his young wife.

DECISION AGAINST MRS. TIERNAN GREETED WITH TEARS



Judge Ducomb reads verdict clearing Harry Poulin, South Bend haberdasher, of the paternity charges filed against him by wife of Notre Dame law school professor. In the picture above Mrs. Tiernan is shown sobbing when she hears that her baby is legitimate.

Baby Tiernan Wins a Name; Parents and Poulin Are Denounced in Judge's Verdict

South Bend., Ind., Sept. 30.—In deciding the case brought by Mrs. Augusta M. Tiernan against Harry Poulin, Judge Ducomb said:

"This case has been given a great deal of notoriety. The testimony has been of most sensational character and has shocked the morals of the court as well as the entire country.

"I regret this incident of my life. I regret that it was my painful duty and that I was compelled to give my time in the trial of a case of such degrading nature."

"This is the case of the state of Indiana on relation of Augusta Tiernan against Harry Poulin to establish the paternity of the third born child of the relatrix," the court declared in opening its decision.

It's Only a Civil Case.

The statement then pointed out that the case was a civil one and that the only redress was a money judgment against the "father" for the support of the child.

"This is an unusual case of its kind, due to the fact that the mother of the child was a married woman and living with her husband at the time the child was begotten. She alleged in her complaint that Harry Poulin, who is not her husband, is the father thereof.

"The relatrix alleged that she and the defendant met at divers places and times and indulged in unlawful acts. That there was a baby born on Nov. 28, 1921, to the relatrix at her home; that the relatrix at the time was living with her husband, who was delighted with the fact that a boy had been born to him, and baptized and named the baby William John Tiernan.

Haberdasher Snubbed Her.

"That on Jan. 8, 1922, after the birth of the child, the defendant, Harry Poulin, refused to recognize the relatrix and she confessed to her husband the relations between her and the defendant.

"Afterwards the husband of the relatrix demanded of the defendant a sufficient sum of money for the maintenance and support of said child, which the defendant refused, and which resulted in the filing of this action.

"There are two undisputed facts. First, there was a baby born on the day mentioned. Second, that the relatrix, Augusta Tiernan, was the mother.

"The remainder of the material facts are in direct conflict.

Judge Believed Her Story.

"The case must either stand or fall on the testimony of the relatrix, and it might be well for me to say that the court in substance believed the testimony of the relatrix. No woman or witness could take the stand and unfold and portray to this court a story as told by Mrs. Tiernan and be wholly unbelieved."

The judge then went into the intimate details by which Mrs. Tiernan attempted to prove that her husband could not be the father of the child. She had claimed that during the period she associated with Poulin she did live with her husband as a wife. In this connection the decision stated:

"They both slept in the same house on the same floor. The doors of the chambers were only three or four feet apart.

"He was a normal man, 32 years old, and in good health. She was physically normal, 32 years old, and in good health.

They Did Live Together.

"The evidence disclosed that in all other respects they lived together as man and wife. There was no disclosure of any serious quarrels or family disagreements.

"The husband knew on or about April 2 that his wife was about to become a mother, even though her testimony showed that they had no relations with each other from January up until April 2, and yet no doubt ever entered the husband's mind that the baby was not his.

"I may ask here why it was that the husband, a man of wisdom, a professor of law, never doubted that he was the father of the child until his wife told him?

"There is no testimony outside of that of the relatrix that could illegitimatize the child. The child is not illegitimate until so decided by the court.

"The evidence shows that the relatrix's conduct with Harry Poulin was of the most licentious nature. Their conduct together was most degrading and carried on in places unbecoming and hardly believable of a mother.

Her Faults Remembered.

"Such conduct on the part of the accuser must be considered in determining the weight of the testimony.

"Further she was an extremely passionate, sensitive, and quick tempered woman, and has shown no modesty and refinement.

"She testified that she could deceive her husband and make him believe the baby was his.

"There is no doubt in the mind of the court that these acts took place between the relatrix and the defendant and that the relatrix had an uncontrollable passion for Harry Poulin, and that she would have sacrificed all that his desires might be satisfied.

"The court is further satisfied from all of the evidence that the relatrix and her husband were living together in every respect and detail as man and wife during the time the child was begotten.

She Cannot Decide Date.

"It is only by inference that a mother can fix the time of conception If she has been living with one individual there is no difficulty in drawing a direct conclusion, but if she has accepted the embraces of others she has placed it out of her power to draw a safe conclusion.

"The court believes that it is its duty to save the child any further disgrace. There can be no further injury done to the parties involved, with the exception of the injury the court might bring to the innocent child.

"This court will not be a party to any additional act or judgment which will bring this child into further disgrace from the moral sin of its mother.

"So, therefore, in considering all the evidence, the court considers the paternity of the child is too much in doubt to fix it upon the defendant.

"The defendant is therefore discharged."

U. of M. Dean Assails Abrams Blood Test Ideas

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Dr. Hugh Cabot, dean of the medical school of the University of Michigan, declares the theory proposed by Dr. Albert Abrams of San Francisco, Cal., embodying a blood test to determine the parentage of a child, or other physical characteristic, is "all bunk." He says his theory is based, "if it can be said to have a basis," purely upon assertions instead of demonstrations and proof.

GILDED YACHTS SPOILING RACES OF FISHERMEN?

Crews Drilled, "Ratlines" Gone—What's the Use!

BY JAMES B. CONNOLLY.

[Copyright: 1922: By the New York Herald.]

Boston, Mass., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Two years ago the city of Halifax, seeking a big feature for carnival week, invited the fishing vessels of Nova Scotia to hold a race off her harbor.

The Delawanna of Lunenberg won the race, and she made such an impression on Halifax that a committee of Halifax citizens challenged the port of Gloucester to send down a schooner to outsail her. Gloucester was to say yes or no to the challenge within one week, then name her vessel and have her in Halifax ready to race within another ten days.

Now Gloucester had not in port at that time what she rated her fastest vessel, nor her second, or third or fourth or fifth fastest vessel. Her best sailing vessels were out to sea, and no telling when they would be home, or, if one should happen in, whether she could be quickly enough put in her best trim for racing.

Couldn't Decline Challenge.

Caught at such disadvantage and also disliking the arbitrary conditions of the challenge, many Gloucester citizens were for telling Halifax to go to the devil or elsewhere; but there were others who asked if Gloucester could afford to decline the challenge.

Gloucester decided to race, and then came the job of finding a vessel.

They were still debating and searching when sailing into port came a 14 year old fishing schooner, the Esperanto. Charles Harty, retired captain and sailing expert on the Gloucester committee, squinted his eyes at her, and shouted: "There's our vessel!"

An Epic Victory.

How Charlie Harty in what time was left took the old Esperanto, windblown and sea-weary, from her three months of salt fishing on the Grand Banks, and put her in trim; how Ben Smith gave Harty all the material aid necessary; how Capt. Martin Welch was picked to sail her, and how he sailed her to two straight wins and victory, is an epic in Gloucester's annals now.

On both race days "Marty" Welch held the Esperanto's wheel from the time she left her dock in the morning until he brought her back again in the evening; besides doing that he gave every order and saw that every order was carried out; he watched the compass and all race marks, doing all this each race day without ever once letting go the wheel, not even to get a cup of coffee. And that is the Gloucester and Boston fishermen's notion of how a vessel should be sailed—the skipper at the wheel and in full command, with knowledge of the disposition of every sheet and every halyard and every sail in every slant of wind while the race is on.

The owners, from out of the prize money, bought souvenir watches for the crew, and they were pleased with the watches because inside each watch cover was an inscription testifying that the bearer had been a member of the Esperanto's crew in the international race.

Cup Is Real Prize.

But it was not for prizes or rewards that those men served in that race. An immense big cup set up on a high ebony pedestal was to go (and did go) to the winning vessel. All the time the Esperanto was in Halifax that cup was on exhibition in a big shop window on the main street.

After the race the Esperanto carried that cup back to Gloucester. With its pedestal it was tall as a man, and it came aboard in a big box and was carefully lowered into the hold. Throughout the passage back to Gloucester that box with the big prize cup in it lay in the hold of the vessel and not one man aboard was curious enough to ask to have the package opened for a look at the cup. Two-thirds of the crew never did see that cup till it was set up on the pedestal between the governor of the state and "Marty" Welch on the night of the big dinner in Gloucester after we got home.

The Second Race.

For the second year's racing—last year's, that is—the Nova Scotians built two new big vessels, vessels too big to be matched by anything Gloucester had. Gloucester made no more preparations for the race than it had the year before. As the time drew near for the second race the committee began to look around at the last hour. There were several willing to do their best for the reputation of Gloucester—the Arthur James, fresh in from a seining trip; the Ralph Brown, an auxiliary, but willing to seal up its engine and try it; the Elsie, fresh home, like the old Esperanto, from a season of salt fishing on the Grand Banks. A couple of smaller ones, fresh in from sea, not so well thought of, but with sporting captains and crews, also stood ready to give battle.

A trial race was decided upon; so they hove the seine boat from the James up on to the dock, took off the Brown's propellers, leaving its two big wooden shaft boxes sticking out under its quarter, hoisted the salt fish out of the Elsie, and in such rough seagoing trim they went at it.

The Elsie Outmatched.

The Elsie won the trial race; and then in the same rough and ready fashion of the Esperanto it sailed to Halifax to battle the Bluenose. (Her crew were also all volunteers and serving without hope of pay.) But the Elsie had a tough job ahead of it. The Delawanna and the Esperanto were of a size—the Delawanna a bit wider, the Esperanto a bit deeper, and both of the one length; but the Elsie was taking on a vessel that was nineteen feet or so longer over all, wider and deeper proportionately, and there is no such thing as time allowance in fishermen's races.

The Elsie was beaten. She made a great showing for her tonnage, holding her own for half the first race and leading for two-thirds of the course in the second race. But she couldn't win; she just did not have the length and depth to grip the water with the big fellow when it came to going to windward.

The Bluenose, a big, handsome, able vessel, which was also well handled, won two straight races.

The Gloucester Fisherman.

The Gloucester fisherman (and this holds for the men of the big Boston fleet, too,) is a professional seagoer if ever there was one. By reason of a natural aptitude and a long, hard experience, he wrests a living from rough waters; but in matters of sport he is the real amateur.

Don't imagine that the Gloucestermen do not understand all the fine points of getting a vessel in shape for to race. Nobody knows that game better, but they also think it ridiculous to race a vessel in any but a sea going condition. If they are challenged to race when not ready, why that is hard luck, but no reason for refusing to race. And if the other boat is a bit bigger, why that's part of it, too.

The Esperanto, when it raced off Halifax two years ago, had a mainsail four years old, a foresail that bellied scandalously, and a jib that was too small. Also her staysail could have been a lot bigger and no harm done. The Elsie when she raced a year ago also had sails that didn't fit; and both vessels carried the same spars, the same ballast in their holds that they would wish to have to meet a hard gale on the Grand Banks.

American Boat Barred.

Outside influence, not fishermen's influence, barred the Mayflower from racing last year; and seems to be barring her from the race this year. The Mayflower was the big vessel built in Boston to race the big Bluenose. Why she was not allowed to race, and why Gloucester did not build a big vessel to match the Bluenose, is too long a story to tell here, although some of us in Gloucester and Boston thought it should be told somewhere, and perhaps soon.

The America's cup race used to be a great sporting event. Clubhouse yachtsmen and publicity experts came to the helm and today the America's cup race is a joke. It may be hard to imagine this fishermen's race becoming a joke, but plenty of us here in New England can remember the time it would have been just as hard to imagine that the old America's cup would ever become a joke.

ASK PRESIDENT TO AID LEAGUE'S WAR ON CANCER

Nation-Wide Fight to Curb Disease.

BY GRAFTON WILCOX.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—The President of the United States is to be appealed to this week to lend his aid to a movement which will educate the public in protective measures against the ravages of cancer, a malady which is destroying more Americans annually than were killed in the world war.

Cancer is one of the preventable diseases threatening human life, and an organized drive against it is in preparation. President Harding will be appealed to for help in furthering the movement which will be instituted in November to arouse the American people to the dangers that lurk in the disease and to inform them of the precautions that can be taken to curb its destructive spread.

National War on Disease.

The destruction that cancer has been working upon life in the United States within recent years has been so alarming that the American Society for the Control of Cancer has determined upon a nation-wide campaign to curb its ravages.

With no thought of frightening the American people, but merely to call their attention to facts which must be faced, the society, in announcing the drive which will take place in the week of No. 12-20, asserts that whereas up to July, 1919, 76,433 American soldiers were killed or died of wounds or disease in the world war, no less than 180,000 persons died of cancer in the United States during the two years this country was involved in that war.

Cancer causes one out of every ten deaths above the age of 40 in this country, it is declared, and in persons above the age of 40 cancer is more prevalent than tuberculosis or pneumonia.

Would Tell Truth About Plague.

The American Society for the Control of Cancer does not believe, nor assert, that cancer is always curable, but it does hold that it may be cured in many instances, and that in practically all cases much can be gained by meeting the disease in its incipiency instead of delaying, as is so often done. The society's aim is to tear away the veil of mystery which surrounds cancer in the public eye and to tell the actual truth about it.

All over the country men who have spent their lives in cancer research will be in charge of localized campaigns and will disseminate information by means of lectures, personal work, and newspaper publicity.

The most eminent surgeons and practitioners and specialists in the United States will participate in the drive. Likewise the facts relating to the cures of cancer will be published. Dr. Howard Canning Taylor, vice president of the society, asserts that cancer is curable if taken early and properly treated. Dr. Will J. Mayo declares cancer curable if operated upon before adjacent glands are involved. Both these men, with hundreds of others of like reputation, will participate in the drive.

MOTHER FEARS HER MISSING SON OF 14 DROWNED

George Somora, a 14 year old schoolboy, disappeared on Aug. 5. He left home to go swimming and took with him a bathing suit which he carried in a satchel. His mother, Mrs. Catherine Somora, 362 North Avers avenue, fears he was drowned or so seriously injured he cannot identify himself. She has asked THE TRIBUNE to help find the boy, who is of average height and build, with blue-gray eyes and dark brown hair.

The judge declared his act was largely to give the woman treatment.

WINES AND BEER TO GO ON BALLOT, BRUNDAGE RULES

Decides Question Within Public Policy Law.

Attorney General E. J. Brundage yesterday delivered an opinion to Secretary of State L. L. Emmerson, holding that the "light wine and beer" question must go on the ballot for a state wide referendum on Nov. 7.

"It is your duty," was the conclusion of the chief law officer of the state, "to certify said question if the petition is in proper form and appears to have the proper number of signatures.

"I am inclined to the opinion that if you should refuse to certify said question to the county clerks for submission to the voters at the November election, the Supreme court, upon proper application, would order such certification."

More Than Enough Names.

As the petition contains more than 500,000 signatures and its form has not been seriously attacked, it is considered certain that all registered voters will have a chance to declare themselves as "moists" or "bone drys."

Although the referendum will not change the legal situation—will not modify the ban on intoxicants in the slightest—the campaign on this issue is expected to heat up immediately. The "demi-wets" are determined to make the Illinois demonstration so emphatic that, combined with similar displays of sentiment in other states, it will have its effect on congress.

The broad grounds of Attorney General Brundage's opinion, which, of course, did not comment on the desirability or undesirability of the referendum, were that the secretary of state could not go behind the face of the petition in determining whether the question shall go to the voters. The basis for the finding was the attitude of the Supreme court in similar matters in the past.

The exact form of the question on the ballot will be:

Duty to Certify It.

"Shall the existing state and federal prohibitory laws be modified so as to permit the manufacture, sale, and transportation of beer (containing less than 4 per cent by volume of alcohol) and light wines for home consumption?"

"It seems to me clear," said Attorney General Brundage, in his opinion, "that the secretary of state has little if any discretion in this matter and that, unless he can say that it is absolutely impossible to construe the question as one falling within the provisions of the law, it is his duty to certify the question to the various county clerks.

"It has been urged that the law does not and could not provide for the submission of an amendment to the federal constitution or laws even though the propositions petitioned for were legal. I am not inclined to think this contention is correct. The language of the statute, 'any question of public policy,' is very broad. There is nothing in the law which limits the question to be submitted to matters which may be legislated upon by the state or its subdivisions.

"The voters of this state form a part of the electors of the United States and are interested in all questions which affect the nation as a whole. In its broadest sense the public policy act was passed for the purpose of advising any or all of the legislative bodies of the opinions of the electors."

CAUGHT WITH ALLEGED "PONZI"

Phyllis Reed was found at a Philadelphia hotel with Raymond W. Ferguson, alleged Chicago "Ponzi," but was released when it was shown the ex-chorus girl had nothing to do with his alleged $50,000 peculations.

ALLEGED $50,000 "PONZI" BROUGHT BACK; PENNILESS

Ferguson Found Living with Chorus Girl.

Raymond W. Ferguson, promoter of a "build your own home" enterprise in the Majestic building, who disappeared last May, police say, with $50,000 in funds belonging to investors, was brought back to Chicago by police yesterday, penniless.

The man was arrested several weeks ago in a small hotel in Philadelphia, where he and Phyllis Reed, formerly a chorus girl, had been living, it is said, as man and wife. The girl was released when it was established that she had not been connected with Ferguson's activities in Chicago.

Fails to Obtain Writ.

When Ferguson was locked up in the Philadelphia jail he made several vain efforts to obtain release on a writ of habeas corpus. Several days ago Sergt. Edward Birmingham arrived in Philadelphia and Ferguson was turned over to him.

According to police records, Ferguson collected more than $60,000 from hundreds of residents of Chicago and Wilmette on his agreement to build homes for them. When the homes were completed the investors were to pay the balance due in small payments.

Some of the Complainants.

Among the complainants are Donald W. McAllister, 1215 Sunnyside avenue, who said he gave Ferguson $1,200; Martin E. Lynch, 2024 Cullom avenue, alleged to have lost $1,375; Walter S. Lane, 5231 Winchester avenue, and Edmund Weber, 6251 Rhodes avenue.

Case of Policeman Who Killed Timm Set for Oct. 19

Judge Theodore F. Ehler, in the Englewood court, set Oct. 19 as the date for the hearing of the case of Policeman John J. McEnroe, who shot and killed August Timm ten days ago. Albert Timm, 8848 Calumet avenue, and Henning Almcranz, 9351 Lyons avenue, both parties to the dispute, which originated over a lost dog, accuse the other of assault.

BRITISHERS ASK U. S. TO SIT IN THEIR COUNCILS

Mr. Spender is one of a party of distinguished English citizens, headed by Sir Charles Wakefield, former lord mayor of London, which is making a tour through America bearing a message of good will on behalf of the Sulgrave institute, organized to promote friendship among English speaking peoples.

The party includes Lady Wakefield and Miss Wakefield, Sir Arthur Adlington Haworth, president of the Manchester chamber of commerce and junior lord of the treasury, and Lady Haworth; Capt. Dovito, H. S. Perris, director of British Sulgrave, and secretary Watson Chair American History foundation, and Lieut. Gov. MacCallum Grant of Nova Scotia and Lady Grant. They arrived in Chicago in the morning and are being entertained during their two days' stay by the Chicago Association of Commerce, which gave the luncheon yesterday.

WOMAN SENTENCED, FINED.

Robbery Jury Deadlocks and "Fixing" Charges Fly

Judge Jacob Hopkins yesterday dismissed the jury trying Abe Schaffner and Thomas Flanagan on charges of robbing Benjamin Pearlstein, vice president of the Community Trust company, of $2,750. The jury was out nineteen hours and was said to stand six to six. After it was dismissed three jurors—Thomas Sexton, Roy Cramer, and Edward Swart—were taken into custody on orders from Assistant State's Attorneys John Sbarbaro and Thomas Reilly, who said they had received information that certain jurors were "fixed."

JUAREZ REBELS FLEE TO HILLS; CITY IS ORDERLY

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 30.—While loyal federal troops searched the hills around Juarez, Mex., tonight, for the 50 rebels still uneaptured after the sudden revolt of the garrison this morning, reinforcements from the south were hourly expected. American and Mexican patrols on both sides of the line were watching for attempts by revolutionists to cross the border. It was reported that groups of revolutionists in El Paso were preparing to cross. It is reported that ten on both sides were killed and a number including two Americans, wounded.

The town of Juarez was quiet. Small groups of Americans visited the city. American customs officials announced the bridges would remain open until midnight, as usual.

Informed of Revolt.

Informed that the 43rd regiment had revolted, Gen. Mendiz hurried to military headquarters where he found a captain and fifteen loyal men of the 43rd on guard duty.

Then the garrison commander got in touch with Capt. Val Verde by telephone.

"Well, general, we have decided to revolt," the captain replied.

"You know what that means. If you take this action you will regret it," the general warned the rebel leader.

"I don't give a damn; I have declared a revolution," Capt. Val Verde declared.

"As the rebels moved towards the customs house machine gun fire was directed at the loyal force commanded by Gen. Mendez.

Fighting lasted for two hours. Routed by the heavy fire of the federal forces and flank attacks, the rebels split into small groups as they fled toward the mountains. Two machine guns, 100 rifles and several mules loaded with ammunition were captured from the rebels.

Order Several Arrests.

Calexico, Cal., Sept. 30. — Mexican federal authorities in Mexicali today arrested several persons, held incommunicado on charges of conspiring against the Obregon government.

ORDERS REBELS TRIED.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

Mexico City, Sept. 30. — President Obregon and the minister of war have ordered immediate trial for the captured rebels who participated in the Juarez uprising.

Rebels who returned to the ranks report that the cause of the trouble was that the soldiers were on a spree and were easily seduced by Capt. Verde, himself half intoxicated President Obregon today wired the commander at Juarez to remove the garrison to a convenient distance from Juarez to avoid the temptations and dissipation to which the men stationed there are now subject

Early this morning eighteen rebels were arrested on a train near Colima, state of Colima, by military police. They had come from Guadalajara under leadership of Capt. Arturo Galindo, who was examined and a commission was found on him from rebel headquarters appointing him general and commander of rebel activities in the state of Colima. It is reported here that they had an understanding with certain military officers in the state of Colima. Other arrests are likely to follow.

THE WAY TO INDUSTRIAL PEACE.

The country is just emerging from the immediate effects of a labor controversy involving the efficiency of the entire railway system of the nation. It will be paying its cost for some time to come. So far as THE TRIBUNE can see, the shopmen's strike has been a loss to virtually every one concerned—to the strikers, to the managers, to the owners of the properties, to the public. Nothing has been gained and we believe nothing could have been gained and retained which might not have been accomplished by less costly and more reasonable means than a strike.

We do not contend that wage earners ought to give up the strike as a means of pressure for their protection or advantage. On the contrary. The strike is a lawful and useful resource in general industry. In service essential to public health and safety, the use of the strike ought to be strictly limited and in some cases prohibited. We think it is going to be sooner or later, and for the sake of the country we trust sooner rather than later. But the strike in private industry must be accepted under competitive conditions as a legitimate and necessary resource.

Nevertheless it is a weapon which ought to be used as a last resort. There are too many unnecessary strikes and too many unjustifiable ones. Strikes are called for the profit of false leaders and even for the profit of employers. These are cases when the weapon is turned against the wage earner. In such cases both the striker and the public are victimized.

But probably such abuses of the strike are to a great extent unavoidable, human nature being what it is. We may point them out, we may gather statistics on strikes that fail, we may demonstrate that the excessive number of strikes is a heavy drain not only upon capital but even more upon labor, yet when a strike vote is called the result is always all one way, and strikes of all kinds go on throughout the year and year after year.

This is one of the serious economic problems of our day and it cannot be solved by legislation. It cannot be solved by the open shop or by injunctions. In fact, we cannot even begin on its solution until we recognize that it is much more than an economic problem, that it is a social problem.

The most encouraging fact of recent industrial history, in our opinion, is that this recognition is appearing among employers. Some of the largest corporations in this age of enormous business units, challenged as soulless, and not without reason for many years, now possess constructive programs for improved relations between management and employés, and all such programs are based on social as well as economic factors.

This is not to shirk the wage factor over which most justifiable strikes occur. A program of relations should begin with acceptance of the principle that within the limits of economic necessity, wages should be such as to provide for the reasonable requirements of the average life in any given community; that is, for sufficient nourishment, clothing, and shelter, and for the common social needs of the employé and his dependents. Mr. Jewell's argument before the labor board in the shopmen's case shows how this principle can be perverted, but the protection of the industry from such perversion by a professional advocate lies in establishing sound relations with its employés by genuine constructive measures for their benefit.

Thus the enlightened employer interests himself in the conservation of the health of his employés and in their safety so far as he can provide them. Legislation has provided compulsory standards as to sanitation and safety, but many employers have passed beyond these when the prosperity of the enterprise and other conditions have permitted. Shop councils or welfare committees providing direct contact with the management are mutiplying agencies for improving working rules and conditions, and increasing attention is given to needs of the employé in the way of healthy entertainment, through clubs, outings, athletic competitions, etc.

An important addition to the program, we think, is the vacation on pay. There is a natural and almost irresistible desire in all of us to escape once in a while from the routine of daily work and we haven't any doubt it is the deciding motive in many a strike vote, at least among younger workers. It is a reasonable desire. The seventh day rest is not enough. Once a year a fortnight's change should be possible and industry should figure that into its costs.

Pensions, adequate retirement provisions for superannuated or disabled employés, sickness and death benefits, are essentials of the program, but it ought also to include plans under which employés will be encouraged to accumulate money or property. THE TRIBUNE is trying a building and loan plan which it hopes will succeed.

In this field there is much to be hoped from intelligent effort to induce investment by employés in the industry or business in which they are employed. Something has been done in this line by the greater corporations, the United Steel company being a leader in this policy. But not nearly enough has been done. Where the enterprise is well founded and prosperous employés invest savings in shares they make an investment which they can watch and help to make a paying one.

If the millions that have been lost in ill-advised strikes could have been invested in shares in the enterprise, the workers in many cases could have accomplished the benefits they sought. That would be direct action in a new sense, which no one could object to.

The bonus system or division of profits has its merits, but it is not altogether satisfactory to either party. Share-holding is fairer and produces a fairer attitude toward the problems of the industry. What is needed for the establishment of industrial peace is a better understanding by all parties to an enterprise, to industry in general, of the problems, the requirements, the rights and just interests of one another.

Progress is being made toward industrial peace along the lines we have roughly stated. They are the way out, the sane, constructive way which avoids the foolish waste of radical experiment, the costly breaches of economic law, the unhappy consequences of social injustice and human suffering.

THE NEW EXPERT SCANDAL.

Why should five beneficiaries of the city hall, who have received nearly $3,000,000 as real estate experts, escape paying an income tax on their gains?

An official of the income tax bureau has reversed a previous finding which held the tax payable. He has reversed the local collector's and district attorney's office. He says he has investigated all the facts and concludes that the experts were city empoyés and not liable to the tax. No one was allowed to appear before him to controvert the testimony of the experts.

That means that this official puts the $3,000,000 fees in the class with the mayor's salary or the pay of any other regular salaried worker in the city hall. It means that some one, the experts or whoever got the big money, goes scot free of the federal income tax, by the decision of a Washington official, arrived at after ex parte hearings with the beneficiaries of his decision and alleged study of all the facts. It means that not only the expert fee scandal is conveniently protected from thorough investigation but that under such a decision millions of taxation may be evaded by the device of making political favorites or beneficiaries contractors for personal service or municipal employés.

THE TRIBUNE asserts that this decision itself calls for investigation; that it is itself a scandal, and that the circumstances which brought about the reversal of the first decision of the bureau demand thorough exposure.

No influence, however impressive in the world of patronage, should succeed in shutting off the light in this case. No influence will.

There is one place, and only one, in which the questions raised in the tax proceedings and determined in camera upon ex parte hearings of the beneficiaries can be properly decided.

That is a court of law.

QUALITY VS. QUANTITY LIVING.

Dr. R. Norman Foster, for fifty years a physician in Chicago, dies in California at the age of 90. Ten years ago he told his Sunday school class in Chicago his formula for reaching that age. Apparently in his case it worked.

Reading his twelve rules for longevity, we are inclined to believe that Dr. Foster's ninety years could have been both pleasant to himself and profitable to others under such direction. That is a point which is too frequently overlooked in formulas for the attainment of old age. In too many instances the purpose seems to be entirely how long one may live, not how much. Old age in itself is no real distinction and no proper goal for a man or woman of intelligence.

By reducing life to a rigid formula probably most of us could lengthen our years. But it recalls the ancient wet jest of the camel which could go nine days without a drink. Who wants to be a camel? Who wants to live to be 90 if in the attainment of such years he ceases to be a normal human being capable of active enjoyment of the good things of life, including the betterment of the lives of others?

In the best sense, life should be measured not by how long but how well we live. Roosevelt probably crowded more life into sixty years than Methuselah did into 969.

For that reason most rules for the attainment of long life should be discounted. They are likely to restrict it to the point of worthlessness. But Dr. Foster's rules are all based upon moderation, and, as they allowed him quality as well as quantity of life, may be worth repeating:

Do not eat too much.

Do not drink too much, especially of intoxicants.

Do not work too hard.

Do not work too little—better to work for nothing than be idle.

Do work for the common good; all other is destructive.

Take just what sleep experience proves right.

Use recreation, not for its own sake, but for new vigor.

Do not always be in a hurry.

Dress first for comfort; then for style.

Avoid worry; it enfeebles mind and body.

Shun all trespass against the plain physiology of your existence.

And thus lay the surest foundation for life of the spirit here and herafter.

So much for moderation. We are definitely for it. And then comes Dr. James R. Wadel Ward of New York, 96 years old, announcing that he smokes sixty cigarets a day and drinks six or eight cups of coffee. That for rules.

SOMETHING WRONG ON THE FARM.

Reports on the situation of farmers in the middle west, based upon analytical investigation by country bankers, county agents, federal government officials, and farm bureau representatives, indicate that on our farms, the natural source of most of our material wealth, we now meet with a depressive rather than a stimulative condition.

Many farmers are said to be penniless. The spread between what the farmer receives for his products and what he must pay for commodities is reported to be greater now than it was a month or a year ago. That is an unfortunate situation. The farmer generally blames it upon bad systems of marketing or distribution. He says too much of his product is consumed by the marketing machinery, including middlemen and transportation. That may be true. But it is also true that his market is hampered by conditions fostered by himself or his representatives, such as tariff provisions which, by discouraging imports of foreign goods, prevent foreign countries from buying our surplus farm products in normal quantities.

The plea that the farmer is in a bad way financially is very similar to the plea of industrialists heard a year ago. But there is this difference: The persons dependent upon industry for livelihood were almost completely without resources when industry closed down. They not only had no money but they had no food and no proper shelter. The farmer, on the other hand, is both a laborer and a capitalist. When his farm ceases to produce at a profit he can still enjoy shelter thereon, and a sufficiency of food.

Unlike the ordinary factory, the farm may even improve through a shutdown. Fields which cannot grow wheat at a profit can be planted to alfalfa, turned over to hogs or stock, or plowed under, with benefit to fertility. Corn which cannot be sold at a profit can be turned into hogs, which will preserve it and perhaps return a profit upon it a year hence. Or cattle may be used to tide over for perhaps two or three years until a profitable market is found. Of course, such operations assume some reserve or capital, which many farmers lack. But the best farmers have it. The result may be the concentration of farms in fewer but more skillful and provident hands. It will be hard on the unsuccessful farmer, and the period of transition may be hard upon general prosperity, but the ultimate result is not likely to be disastrous.

If it can be escaped or mitigated through improved marketing systems and the elimination of present marketing wastes, so much the better. A system which would assure cheaper food to consumers while at the same time giving better returns to the producers would be an unmixed blessing. But so far such a system has not been put into successful operation. The government has provided high protective tariffs at the farmers' request. It has provided an extensive system of farm credits. It has passed almost every sort of legislation asked by the agrarian bloc. Yet the farmers do not prosper.

We hesitate to suggest it, but it seems possible that there may be something wrong on the farms, either in management, policy, or political and economic action.

THE COMMUTER'S TICKET.

The harvest moon and the countryside ripe in its fruits and grains; corn in the silo or in shock or standing in spreading fields, a motionless army which has done its work, worn its green uniforms to shredded yellow, given its treasures to the country and now is silent and massed for the great demobilization.

Orchards specked, colored, and bent by the great burden of fruit; pumpkins yellow in fields where the corn is in shock; the chaff from the harvester blown into the air. Fields yellow with stubble or still green with alfalfa. Fat fowl in the stubble. Full red barns brilliant in the first October sunlight. The shag-bark hickory with tattered dried leaves but giving its crop of nuts.

Heavy dew at night when the harvest moon shines on the harvest landscape; any night a frost which will blacken the asters, the cosmos and the dahlias. Wild asters spreading over the fields and vesper sparrows billowing over them. Yellow snap dragons by the wayside. Mists in the valleys. Flaming maples on the hillsides. Wine in the air. Cider in the cellar. Early dusk and early candle light.

The year sits down to its final accounting and soon will doze as the brightly colored days run—and fall asleep over a closed book.

A POINTED QUIP.

Former Vice President Marshall, who likes often to dress his wisdom in motley, remarks that while he is not opposed to admitting the oppressed who knock at our door, they ought to stop knocking after they are let in.

A barbed jest, which we think will go home when a solemn assertion will not. Mr. Marshall voices the resentment of Americans against imported grouches. We admit millions to the rich opportunities of American life on the implied understanding that they have come to make the most of them, not to make away with them. Fortunately the great majority fulfill that expectation and many more would, if we were more intelligent in helping them to do so. But there are not a few who bring their memories of social wrongs and conceptions of reform into the country and have no intention of getting rid of either. They do not believe in American principles, they do not try to make them effective. These are leaders of unintelligent discontent, at war not only with what is wrong in American conditions but with American means of correcting them. Unconsciously at work with them is a more ponderous body which, unassimilated to Americanism, weighs upon American progress and weakens American institutions.

We need years for assimilation. If we are to keep free to work out the American conception of progress and well being we must protect ourselves from infiltration or inundation from foreign lands far removed from our own. Superficial campaigns of Americanism will not give adequate protection. Many years of living in this country to absorb its spirit and thought are required, and this is a more important consideration than any economic need for cheap labor.

ANOTHER ASPECT OF "PITTSBURGH PLUS."

[Superior, Wis., Telegram.]

Very naturally the most obvious injustice of the "Pittsburgh plus" system has been most discussed and it is quite possible that many people suppose that the whole thing is summed up in the statement that this system imposes a wholly unwarranted and unnecessary increase in the cost of steel products from factories outside of the Pittsburgh district when sold to western and southern customers.

But there is another aspect of the case, less obvious, but it may be, in the end, even more serious.

"Pittsburgh plus" not only imposes tribute on the west and the south for the benefit of the east but it delays the development of western and southern steel plants.

This aspect of the case has been glanced at but it has never been sufficiently emphasized.

The defenders of the system have only one argument, the argument that western and southern plants cannot supply the demands of their territories in full, that a part of the supply must come from the Pittsburgh region anyway and that the same price for the same article, regardless of differences in cost of production, is essential to smoothly running commerce.

But, with the "Pittsburg plus" system out of the way, the trade of western and southern plants would be stimulated to such an extent that they would soon be in a position to supply their own territories adequately.

As long as the customer must pay the same price no matter where the goods come from he is indifferent as to whether he buys Pittsburgh steel or steel manufactured next door.

But lower the price of the steel manufactured next door by doing away with the artificial item added to make up for the freight charge from Pittsburgh and he will buy the local steel as long as it is to be had and will make such an insistent demand for local steel that the local plant will be forced to expand and to develop to its fullest capacity.

It is not impossible that the eastern steel interests are even more interested in delaying the development of eastern and western plants and keeping as much of the manufacturing as possible at home than they are in the easy money which comes to them from the addition of an imaginary freight charge when there is no real freight charge to pay.

PROPORTION.

A traveler who was renowned for his tall stories, on being asked out to dinner made arrangements with his friends, who were to accompany him, that they should kick him if he began to go too far.

Quite early in the evening he started off.

"That reminds me," he said to the hostess, "of a friend of mine who had a rose garden over ten miles long and—" he felt a kick—"and two inches wide."—Houston Post.

OLD MAN SOL, M. D.

SUNLIGHT is employed in the cure of more than one disease. While we read a great deal of its use in the cure of scrofula, tubercular glands and bone tuberculosis, there is a literature dealing with its employment of rickets, puerperal-sepsis and other forms of sepsis, secondary anemias, some skin diseases, old ulcers and consumption.

This is the way it is used by Dr. H. J. Bendes at a tuberculosis sanitarium in Minnesota.

The treatments are given daily. The times to be avoided are the midday on hot days, and half an hour before and an hour after meals. The patient is shielded against strong breezes. The patient, dressed in pajamas, wearing goggles, and with his head covered by some sort of a sunbonnet, is garbed for the treatment.

The first day the feet are exposed to sunlight for five minutes only. Both the front and the back of the feet are exposed. This ends the treatment for that day.

The second day the feet are exposed for ten minutes. The legs, from the knees down, are exposed five minutes. Both front and back are exposed.

The third day the feet are exposed fifteen minutes, the lower legs ten minutes and the thighs five minutes.

On the sixth day the feet are exposed fifty minutes, the lower legs forty-five minutes, the thighs forty minutes, the trunk below the umbilicus thirty-five minutes, the upper abdomen and lower arms thirty minutes, the chest and upper arms twenty-five minutes.

The increase in the length of exposure is gradual until such time as all the body and limbs are exposed for three to four hours daily. In this way all the skin is gradually turned to a mahogany brown in color, without having been inflamed.

Since blondes and red headed persons are much more apt to burn without satisfactory preliminary turning brown, it is advised that their skin be first pigmented by feeding them plenty of carrots and spinach. Possibly it would be better first to hennaize the skin as the beach beauties were doing this year.

On cloudy days, sunlight not being available, general air baths and treatments with the light from a mercury quartz vapor lamp are employed.

In cases of scrofula, tubercular glands, fistula and abscesses, the sunlight is not used on the diseased area until the general skin surface has been well bronzed.

After that has been accomplished, the patient can stand exposure to heat and light and also to cold. Also, after that time, light can be advantageously used right on the sinus, or ulcer, or enlarged gland, or the local lesion, whatever it may be.

Where there are open sores, a large sun glass may be used to concentrate the light on the sinus or open sore. For this purpose, a special biconvex sun glass, twelve inches in diameter, has been devised. This must be used with care, else it will cauterize.

It is held seventy-two inches from the wound, and at that distance throws a ray seven inches in diameter. Held closer, it does harm. Held farther away it does no good.

DON'T BE AN ENEMA SLAVE.

W. H. writes: "I would like to know why you think enemas are bad to take. I think like 'H. F.' I have taken enemas for over a year now—sometimes twice a day.

"I had a pretty bad case of stomach trouble, and I take enemas to help the trouble. I was home sick ninety days last year with stomach trouble. My weight was 100 pounds, and now I have gained twenty-five pounds in six months, so I can't see where enemas are bad."

REPLY.

As between constipation and enemas, the latter is the lesser evil.

But when a person gets the enema habit he is chained to the wheel.

First, he takes one a day, then two, then he adds salts to the enema—and so forth.

MARKED! OF COURSE NOT.

Mrs. M. L. writes: "I am now in my third month of pregnancy and have been going to a dentist to have teeth filled from the very first month.

"Now, any one to whom I tell this thinks it is about the worst thing I could have done, and I am now very much worried and would be very thankful to you, doctor, if you would let me know whether or not my going to the dentist will mark my baby."

REPLY.

Have your teeth put in order and kept in order.

The next time these ignorant crape hangers come around call the police or the dog wagon.

HAD WASSERMANN TEST.

C. S. writes: "I noticed in your column recently that your definition of a Wassermann test was a test for syphilis.

"A few months ago I had the 'sleeping sickness.' During the period of my sickness a Wassermann was taken.

"Could you tell me the purpose of this test? I understood that it was taken for a purpose other than to discover syphilis."

REPLY.

I judge your physician wanted to make no mistake. In addition to syphilis, the Wassermann tests sometimes give some information as to other conditions.

The test is not specific in the sence that nothing reacts except the syphilis organism and its products.

DIET AND ECZEMA.

A. S. writes: "I have been troubled with eczema on my hands and limbs for more than a year. Consulted a physician and used the prescribed ointments without much effect, although it improved for a time.

"I would like to know what causes eczema and just how much the diet has to do with it. Have had indigestion, more or less, for years, but it is no better now. Please tell me what articles of food I shall avoid, and advise me as to treatment."

REPLY.

Eczema is a term used to designate a group of skin troubles. Somewhere about half of these are due to diet.

The next largest group is that due to something in the occupation—for instance, too much soap on the hands.

The offending foods vary. As a rule, the food responsible in a given case is something which is wholesome to the general run of people.

The only way to discover the food responsible in a given case is to experiment with the diet or to have skin tests made.

WARM THERMOS MILK BAD.

O. B. M. writes: "1. Will you please advise me if it is safe to carry warm milk for bottle babies in a thermos bottle? I have been told that babies have been poisoned by doing this.

"2. I am anticipating a trip with a baby 11 months old and will be traveling all night and next day on the train."

REPLY.

1. It is not.

2. Use milk from the diner. Have it boiled, or at least heated until it simmers.

If you must carry your own supply in a thermos bottle, chill the milk almost to the freezing point and put it in the bottle cold.

NOTICE TO VACATE.

Chicago, Sept. 24.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I paid my rent on the 15th of the month, when it was due. The landlord took the money in one hand and with the other hand gave me a notice which was a sixty day notice to vacate. My rent is paid to the 15th of October. I have no lease. Two days later, on the 17th, I rented an apartment. Can I demand the return of the rent up to October 15? W. D.

No. You remain legally liable for rent accruing to the end of the tenancy in accordance with the sixty day notice.

SUING A MINOR.

Chicago, Sept. 25.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Two years ago, at the age of 16, I signed for a correspondence course for $110, and received five lessons and paid $12. Then I notified the school I was going to quit.

Today I have received a letter from them threatening me with suit for the balance of $100. Can they sue me? I signed when I was a minor. I simply cannot pay, as I haven't $5 to my name. M. A. D.

Of course, they can sue you. You should be in court with your birth certificate on the return day.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Sept. 30.—This community was thrown into a state of indignation that it is impossible to describe by the jury in the case of Mrs. Laura D. Fair this morning bringing in a verdict of "not guilty." The circumstances of this case are well remembered. Mrs. Fair, who, it is alleged, was the mistress of the Hon. A. P. Cristendes, shot him in the presence of his own wife on a steamer near this city in November, 1870, and deliberately shot him dead. She was arrested, and in the summer of 1871 was tried, convicted and sentenced to be hanged. A new trial was asked for and granted, and now she is acquitted and discharged from custody. It was plainly a case of deliberate, premeditated murder, and the fact that she killed her victim is undoubted

"ONWARD, CHRISTIAN SOLDIERS."

River Forest, Ill., Sept. 25.—The unspeakable Turk has spoken and the victors of the world war are to give him what he wants. Invite him back to Europe. Give him back what he unjustly took by force and justly lost by force. A reward of (de)merit for the centuries of oppression, persecution, and massacre suffered by the Christians of Armenia. This is the unspeakable and unthinkable shame. For the hope of Christian civilization, what has become of executive Christendom's backbone? What is the matter with the victorious veterans of the allied hosts that they cry out in the present peace and security of their home lands that they have enough of war?

It is God's pity and the world's distinct loss that civilized statesmanship and Christian tolerance have not sufficiently unified the people of Europe in thought and action to make the alleged Mohammendan peril and the present cringing attitude toward it both impossible. J. D. JONES.

A COAL DEALER'S ADVICE.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—I note with interest the resolution of the aldermanic committee to investigate coal prices in Chicago, both wholesale and retail. I also note with considerable amusement the remarks made that retail coal associations are in collusion with coal operators to restrict production and inflict high prices on the public. So far as the Chicago retailers are concerned, I do not believe that any of them would hesitate to show what they are making, or rather what they are not making, at this time. During last spring and summer most of our supplies were cut off on account of the miners' strike and more recently by the railroad shopmen's strike, which, by the way, is hardly settled as yet. We have also been confronted with a buyers' strike, which is still on. During the spring and most of the early summer the consumer could have purchased and stored the best grades of smokeless coal at prices ranging from $7 to $7.50 per ton, a fair price for this coal, taking everything into consideration, but the coal user would not buy; he would wait for lower prices. At that time the smokeless coal fields were about the only ones in operation, their miners not being unionized only in a small degree, but shipments of this coal to the Chicago market had to be greatly curtailed because the building owner would not buy. Since the settlement of the miners' strike the available cars are being distributed over the entire coal producing sections of the country, and on account of the poor condition of the equipment, due to the shopmen's strike, the best any coal operator can do is to run his mine from two to three days a week. That being the case, the coal operator has raised his price on what coal he is able to market, to offset his losses on account of restricted production, which is no fault of his. Smokeless coal, as well as other high grade coals, are now in demand all over the country, and it is a poor merchant who does not ship to the best paying market. There is available at this time in Chicago plenty of coals that could be bought considerably below smokeless and the high grade western coals, but mister coal buyer does not want them. He wants porterhouse steak at round steak prices.

I would advise the public not to pay too much attention to the remarks and advice of sorehead automobile manufacturers and politicians that play to the grandstand, but accept the present situation with good grace, as they are largely responsible for it.

MEMBER CHICAGO COAL MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION.

SPEAKING FOR THE MINORITY, ACCORDING TO CHICAGO'S REFERENDUM.

Chicago, Sept. 23.—Now that we have come to the end of another daylight saving season there are doubtless many people who are wondering if the game is worth the candle. Is there any one in all this land who has not stubbed his toe against this nuisance in some way or other? "Daylight saving in spots" expresses it mildly, though justly. Many of us have gone to the station in a moment of forgetfulness and had to wait an hour for the train—better, of course, than being an hour late, and yet "bother. Seriously, is it worth while? If we cannot have this imaginary time everywhere, why not abolish it altogether? Why should not Illinois set an example of sobriety in this regard, and officially put its stamp of disapproval on what, after all, is of debatable value? It seems to me that the gain would far more than neutralize whatever of individual convenience may result under the present system, which is far from systematic. Having to look two ways continuously for five months every year is not conducive to peace and quietness.

POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

By Gen. William H. Lytle.

I am dying, Egypt, dying!
Ebbs the crimson life-tide fast,
And the dark Plutonian shadows
Gather on the evening blast.
Let thine arms, O Queen, enfold me;
Hush thy sobs and bow thine ear.
Listen to the great heart secrets
Thou, and thou alone, must hear.

Though my scarred and veteran legions
Bear their eagles high no more,
And my wrecked and scattered galleys
Strew dark Actium's fatal shore;
Though no glittering guards surround me,
Prompt to do their master's will,
I must perish like a Roman—
Die the great Triumvir still!

Let not Cæsar's servile minions
Mock the lion thus laid low;
'Twas no foeman's arm that felled him;
'Twas his own that struck the blow—
His who, pillowed on thy bosom,
Turned aside from glory's ray—
His who, drunk with thy caresses,
Madly threw a world away.

Should the base plebeian rabble
Dare assail my name at Rome,
Where my noble spouse, Octavia,
Weeps within her widowed home,
Seek her; say the gods bear witness—
Altars, augurs, circling wings—
That her blood, with mine commingled,
Yet shall mount the throne of kings.

As for thee, star-eyed Egyptian!
Glorious sorceress of the Nile!
Light the path to Stygian horrors
With the splendors of thy smile.
Give to Cæsar crowns and arches,
Let his brow the laurel twine;
I can scorn the Senate's triumphs,
Triumphing in love like thine.

I am dying, Egypt, dying;
Hark! the insulting foeman's cry.
They are coming—quick, my falchion!
Let me front them ere I die.
Ah! No more amid the battle
Shall my heart exulting swell;
Isis and Osiris guard thee!
Cleopatra—Rome—farewell!

SCHOOL GRAND JURY CONTINUED TO PUSH INQUIRY

Metzger, O'Leary, and Walsh Are Indicted.

Chief Justice McKinley of the Criminal court yesterday reimpaneled the school board grand jury as a special body, that it may continue its investigation of alleged irregularities in the conduct of the board of education for another month.

Immediately before the continuance, which was made necessary by the ending of the September term, the jury returned the three true bills which it voted recently against Andrew Metzger, Thompson committeeman of the Seventh ward, and head of the Acme Steam Heating and Ventilating company; Jeremiah M. O'Leary, proprietor of the Jackson Park tavern, and David Walsh, Metzger's partner in the Acme company.

Conspiracy to Defraud.

The indictment charges the defendants with conspiracy to defraud the school board of $3,406.93 on July 12, 1921, by the use of a spurious invoice for plumbing and heating supplies and labor, and with persuading officials of the board to make dishonest use of public funds. The bonds for each defendant were fixed at $10,000 by the jury.

Mrs. William S. Hefferan, chairman of the educational committee of the Woman's City club, and Glenn Edwards, head of the efficiency bureau of the Chicago City club, visited Chief Justice McKinley yesterday to personally express the interest their organizations are taking in the school board investigation.

Jury Meets Tomorrow.

The jury will meet tomorrow and take up insurance transactions by the board. Virtus Rohm, nephew of Fred Lundin and patronage dispenser for the city hall, who is interested in an insurance firm which has dealt largely with the board, has been subpoenaed to testify.

KEEP HANDS OFF

Members of the school board advisory committee will not, either individually or collectively, advise the removal of Trustees Albert H. Severinghaus and Edwin S. Davis from office. They so decided yesterday at a meeting held in the office of Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the board.

To advise Mayor Thompson that it would be in the best interests of the school children that he accept the resignations of the two trustees, obtained before Davis was indicted on charges of accepting a bribe, and former Vice President Severinghaus on several charges of alleged fraud, would be politics, the advisers said.

The advisors present were David Kinley, president of the University of Illinois, who was chosen chairman; Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern university; Col. Harry Abel's of the Morgan Park Military academy, E. E. Gore, Livingston C. Lord, C. H. Judd, Mrs. E. F. Bailey, Dr. W. A. Evans, and Dr. C. N. Johnson.

Statement by Kinlay.

The meeting was secret. Upon its conclusion, President Kinlay was asked if the committee had taken any action on the request of women's clubs who had asked that a formal resolution be presented to the mayor recommending that Davis and Severinghaus be ousted. Mr. Kinlay said the committee did not consider the matter came within its scope.

A statement issued by President Kinlay, to prevent misapprehension, said that the commission considered itself created to discuss and give advice upon large problems of educational policy. They will not, according to the statement, participate in discussions concerning appointments or expenditures, and will have nothing to do with partisan politics.

"We are not passing the buck," said Prof. Scott. "We merely feel that it is not our busin ."

MISSING '61 VETERAN DEAD.

Fails to Save Boy

MRS. H. T. ROCKWELL.
[Moffett Photo.]

When helping to erect a radio aerial, Roger Latta, 16 years old, 41 North Madison avenue, La Grange, was burned to death. He was erecting the aerial at the home of a chum, Kenneth Elwell Jr., 35 North 5th avenue. Mrs. Harvey T. Rockwell, a neighbor, who sought to rescue Latta, was burned so badly that physicians fear she may die.

Electrocution resulted when Latta threw a wire for the aerial over live wires of the Public Service company.

Mrs. Rockwell, hastening to the side of Latta, probably would have suffered a like fate had not Mrs. Elwell, donning rubber gloves, released her.

PACIFIC CROSSED IN FISHING JUNK BY OLD SEA DOG

Brings Chinese Wife, Son, Along.

Victoria, B. C., Sept. 30.—Details of the ninety-one day voyage of the Amoy, the twenty-three ton Chinese fishing junk that brought Capt. Waard, his Chinese wife and their 9 year old son safely across a 5,300 mile expanse of the Pacific, were told by the old sailor today as he helped his wife hang washing on the yardarm.

"Jes' decided I wanted to come back to Canada," he began. "Steamships! Lordy, how I hate 'em, the dirt an' the smell an' all. A feller meets sailors only on a sailing ship. So I went down to Amoy and built this here junk that brought us along.

No Fresh Grub Aboard.

"There were some folks in Shanghai what wanted to come, but I told 'em no—we were comin' without a doctor, no ice chest, an' no fresh provisions.

"We had plenty of water for drinking, but not a drop for bathin' or the washin' of clothes. We had a crew of three Chinese, and they didn't worry about that."

The Amoy ran into many storms, Capt. Waard continued, but the calms caused the most trouble. The Amoy floundered about helplessly in them, lost time and went off its course. Twice the rudder was carried away, and he had to rig a jury rudder, which cut down the junk's headway.

The course mapped out was northward to Hakodate, Japan, and thence to cross the Pacific on the 42d or 43d parallel of latitude.

Port Anchor Breaks.

The port anchor broke at the ring and the captain had to buy two new anchors at the Japanese port, reached on July 12. Hakodate was left behind on July 18, when the weather moderated, but the lull proved to be only temporary.

The Amoy bumped into a succession of easterly winds and gales from the south, which drove the vessel up into latitude 54 to the Aleutian islands and Bering sea.

With good weather the Amoy was making eight and nine miles an hour. In one day it did with a beam wind 180 miles. But it never properly had a fair day's wind. Often it would make twenty-five miles with a good breeze and drift back fifty at night, becalmed.

"The Amoy'll ride anything," Capt. Waard said, "but it brought me on the roughest voyage I ever made."

CALL CULLERTON AND O'CONNOR TO MARSHALS' TRIAL

Stormy Session Expected at Fire Hearing.

Service of subpoenas on Fire Chief Thomas O'Connor and Business Manager John F. Cullerton and Ald. Arthur F. Albert yesterday, requiring their presence before the city civil service commission tomorrow, when the trial of five assistant marshals is resumed, gave promise that the hearing will be replete with fireworks.

The subpoena servers were in the employ of Edgar A. Bancroft, attorney for Assistant Marshals McDonnell and McAuliffe and retained by ten large real estate and civic organizations to represent "the public's interest" in the trial.

When Mr. Bancroft attempted to delve into conditions in the fire marshal's office, including the modus operandi of fire department business during the period of Chief O'Connor's ill health, he was stopped at Friday's hearing by President Charles E. Frazier of the merit board, who declared that such questions were not pertinent.

Ald. Albert's repeated charges that there is graft in the purchase of fire department supplies accounts for the issuance of a subpoena for him, it is believed.

Expect Stormy Session.

That Mr. Bancroft may meet with obstacles in his new attempt to probe conditions in the fire chief's office by putting the chief and Mr. Cullerton on the witness stand was indicated by a statement from Mr. Frazier.

"As is our practice, we told Mr. Bancroft he could have all the blank subpoenas he wanted," Mr. Frazier said. "However, I intend to see that the scope of trial is kept narrowed to the issue, which is the guilt or innocence of the five defendants.

The report that Mayor Thompson has selected Mr. Cullerton to become fire commissioner with full control over the department and with an experienced fire fighter subject to the commissioner's orders in direct charge of the department's personnel, brought a buzz of excitement throughout the department and among aldermen.

The report was received with delight among Democratic members of the city council, and a canvas of aldermen who appeared at the city hall indicated there will be votes to spare if the mayor sends Mr. Cullerton's name to the council for confirmation.

These aldermen pointed to Cullerton's organization of the drill school, at which all members of the department up to and including the rank of captain must demonstrate their physical and mental alertness at stated periods; his plans for the motorization of the department, which are almost completed, and the proposal that the fire stations be "respotted" to reduce fire hazards, as evidence of the business manager's executive ability.

Albert to Fight Appointment.

Ald. Albert, who fought Mr. Cullerton throughout the council investigation of the fire department last June, proved a belligerent exception to the pro-Cullerton sentiment among aldermen.

"I'll fight the elevation of Cullerton to the last ditch," he declared. "I'll keep on fighting him until he comes before the council and tells why certain aldermen on the finance committee are representing fire apparatus companies."

Mr. Cullerton refused to discuss at length the mayor's reported decision to promote him.

"I issued a statement that I am not a candidate for chief of the fire department; neither am I a candidate for a commissionership," Mr. Cullerton said.

Mr. Cullerton said that the per capita cost of Chicago's fire protection is now $2.15 a year, or much less than 1 cent a day. With the completion of the motorization program and reorganization of both personnel and stations the per capita cost will drop to $2.10, the business manager predicted.

In loving memory of

Sergeant Pilot,
Lafayette Escadrille,
Killed in combat,
Fargny, France,
Oct. 1, 1917.
Above the strife his spirit took its flight,
While at his feet the warring world was spread,
He died, a smiling martyr to a cause where he Had borne the nobler part—had led.

The starry heavens of the night were his.
The rosy dawn, the gleaming sunset's glare.
Perhaps he seemed so near God beckoned him
And bade him leave the world of strife and care.

They cannot die, these men who sleep today.
Remembered in the nation's grateful heart;
The tears and love and gratitude we give
Are but just tributes to their larger part.

Sometimes when thoughts of other scenes and days
Bring back the knowledge that he is not here,
A whisper comes from out the Unseen World,
And says, "Be comforted, my God is near."

5,000 SEAMEN ON LAKES STRIKE FOR 8 HOUR DAY

Serious Situation Faced by Northwest.

Protesting against the twelve hour work day, 5,000 members of the Sailors' Union of the Great Lakes employed on ore vessels controlled by the Lake Carriers' association went on strike this morning. Final efforts of union officials to get the association to reopen negotiations on the eight hour work day failed last night.

South Chicago, Gary, and Indiana Harbor, where large steel plants are located, are the principal nearby cities affected by the walkout. About 20 per cent of the iron ore from the upper ports of Lakes Superior and Huron is shipped to steel plants in these cities; 80 per cent of the ore is sent to ports on Lake Erie. Coal cargoes are taken on at Lake Erie ports by one-third of the boats returning to the northwest country.

Hampers Grain Movements.

The tieup not only will affect coal shipments to the northwest but likewise will hamper the present flow of grain from the western farms to the seaboard and will add to transportation difficulties due to freight car shortage.

Adding to the ominous situation faced by the northwest in the seamen's strike, several more railroads declared embargoes on coal yesterday.

"Installation of the eight hour day for seamen doesn't mean an increase in the number of men employed on vessels of the Lake Carriers' association," said K. B. Nolan, secretary of the sailors' union, last night.

"Taking all the lake boats, large and small, the eight hour day would mean an additional expense of $30 per month."

Union Leaders Hopeful.

Union leaders at the seamen's headquarters were optimistic last night thta a large number of the members of the carriers' association would grant the shorter work day.

At Detroit Capt. William Livingstone, president of the Lake Carriers' association declared that the places of the sailors quitting work would be filled rapidly and that his company expected to do business as usual. He said the ore boats would continue to carry coal to the iron regions of the northwest.

Mrs. Trotter is awarded sole title to the property on which their former home stood, $5,000 in cash and household goods. Mr. Trotter also is directed to pay $200 court costs and $1,400 as her attorney fees.

Accused of Fraud

MARGARET GAINOR.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

After an investigation which led her to some sixty of Chicago's stores, Nola Walker, store detective, succeeded in running down Margaret Gainor, 3055 Washington boulevard, who, it is alleged, has for two years systematically defrauded store after store.

The prisoner, whose name is Mrs. Peggy Hughes, and who has been an actress, it is charged, obtained positions as cashier at various stores by means of false names and forged references. Remaining for two or three days, she would then abscond with varying sums, police say.

Her father is Police Sergeant Patrick Gainor of Lawndale avenue station. It is alleged that her husband knew of her thefts and Marshall Field & Co. has taken out a summons against him.

Sangamon County Pays Lake for Small Trial

Waukegan, Ill., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Sangamon county today paid to Lake county $10,073.35, the full amount of Lake county's bill for the costs of holding the trial of Gov. Small at Waukegan, in a change of venue from Springfield. The warrant was received by Roy W. Bracher, Lake county treasurer, and was signed by Charles W. Byers, county clerk, and George W. Fish, county treasurer of Sangamon county. This amount includes only Lake county's expense and does not include other heavy expense to which Sangamon county was subjected, nor the cost for special attorneys. The largest items in the bill of Lake county were jurors' services, $4,465.20, and bailiffs' services, $2,085.

EXPECT TRADES COUNCIL TO OUST MADER FRIDAY

A. F. L. Removes Obstacle to Reorganization.

The ousting of Fred [Frenchy] Mader as president of the building trades council was brought a step nearer yesterday, according to other leaders in the council. For several weeks the proposed reorganization of the council has been blocked by a complaint filed by a painters' union with the American Federation of Labor.

This complaint has been satisfactorily settled, according to John Donlin, president of the building trades department of the A. F. L., who arrived in Chicago yesterday. The painters had complained it was unethical for international presidents of the building trades unions to attempt to adjust the Landis award controversy in which nineteen unions are working on a "closed shop" basis, thirteen on an "open shop" basis.

As a result of Donlin's announcement leaders of Landis award unions stated they will hold a caucus on Monday or Tuesday to perfect plans for the ousting of Mader and election of new trades council officers on Friday night.

Knocks Out Plumbing Ordinance.

Judge Joel C. Fitch of Albion, Ill., sitting in the Chicago Municipal court, yesterday held that two plumbing ordinances of the city are void.

The ordinances require that plumbers working in Chicago obtain permits from the local municipal examining board and that a bond of $10,000 be executed to the city before a journeyman is qualified to make connections to the city water system. These ordinances, the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award maintained, have been used to keep nonunion plumbers out of Chicago and to give the plumbers' union a practical monopoly.

Judge Fitch held that all regulation of plumbers must be done by the state board or registration and education instead of the city.

Effect of Decision.

The effect of Judge Fitch's decision, it was said, is to invalidate the present board of plumbing examiners of the city and the plumbing inspectors appointed by that board. These plumbing inspectors, citizens' committee contractors have complained, are invariably union men, who have been unfair in their inspection of Landis award plumbing work.

"The decision," said Fred W. Armstrong, general manager of the citizens' committee, "is of widespread importance to every homeowner and builder in Chicago."

The case originated in the arrest of four Landis award mechanics on June 8 on charges of working without a city certificate and with making water connections without having arranged for a bond of $10,000. It is expected the city will appeal.

DROPS CHARGE AGAINST BOOMER.

BATTLES BOOZE CREW; REGAINS STOLEN YACHT

Millionaire Leads Men in Fight on Dock.

Bay City, Mich., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—How a wealthy Bay City manufacturer recovered his stolen $20,000 yacht in a fight in a Canadian port with a gang of rum runners who were using it to smuggle liquor into the United States has just come to light.

Several weeks ago a man posing as a wealthy Detroiter and driving an expensive touring car called on William J. Sovereign, president of the Aladdin company here, to charter the Sovereign yacht, a seventy foot cruiser, for two weeks for a cruise for himself and family, with the understanding that if the craft suited him he would buy it.

The "wealthy Detroiter" paid Mr. Sovereign $1,300, with the provision that $1,000 was to apply on the purchase price if he concluded to buy the yacht. As a measure of security for the yacht, the charterer left his automobile with Mr. Sovereign.

Asks for Automobile.

About two weeks had passed when the charterer returned to Bay City told Mr. Sovereign that the yacht was in dry dock at Detroit for some minor repairs to the hull, and, since he had concluded not to buy it, asked for the return of his automobile.

His suspicions aroused, Mr. Sovereign went to Detroit. The yacht was not in dry dock, but marine records showed that it had registered going down through the Welland canal to Port Colborne, Canada, Sept. 10. Telegrams asking Canadian authorities to hold the yacht were at once sent to Port Colborne and other Canadian ports, and Mr. Sovereign himself continued the search. The yacht was located at Toronto, but its recovery became a problem. Admiralty lawyers told Mr. Sovereign that since the yacht had entered the port illegally, it probably would be seized by the government and it might take him six months to a year through legal proceeding to get the boat back.

"Then I'll take it by force," Sovereign told the lawyers.

Roustabouts Charge Yacht.

From the wharfs of the port Mr. Sovereign gathered a gang of roustabouts who loved a fight for the fun of it as the reward that was offered them, and they swooped down on the yacht just as it was preparing to take on a cargo of 500 cases of whisky.

But there wasn't much of a fight. The rum runner skipper and his crew soon yielded, and the Bay City manufacturer was once more in possession of his boat.

Mr. Sovereign has affidavits from one rum runner that the yacht made several trips loaded to the deck rails with liquor, and made a profit of $20,000 for the smugglers.

Scores Canadian Officials.

"Canadian officials connive with smugglers every day. Toronto police denied receipt of my wire. The officials along the Welland canal showed me a copy of it, but said that would never interfere with a liquor runner who 'treated them right.'

"I acted on that on the way home. Posing as a runner returning with a cargo, I had not the slightest difficulty navigating the Canadian waterways. Every one was friendly, even cordial," said Sovereign.

STATE MAY STEP IN TO END WAR OF ZION CHURCHES

Waukegan, Ill., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Action will be taken Monday in the Lake County Circuit court by State's Attorney A. V. Smith to compel Overseer Voliva to take down the large signboards attacking other religious denominations that have caused many minor riots, resulting in injury to scores of both independents and Volivaites and clashes with the police, it was reported this afternoon.

Volivaites apparently are anticipating action, as two of the large signboards, just completed, in front of the East Benton Methodist church, were being removed today. This is the church of which the Rev. Robert E. O'Brien, recently arrested on a charge of having hired a man to splatter the signs with paint, is pastor.

The October grand jury convenes next Monday, and it is expected that Prosecutor Smith will conduct an investigation into conditions which have brought on Zion's religious war. There are scores of cases on the Circuit court docket.

TWO HOLDUP MEN CAPTURED AFTER SHOOTING VICTIM

Cigar Store Owner May Die of Wound.

Less than an hour after they had shot and perhaps fatally wounded Frank O'Connell, owner of a cigar store at 2140 South Halste street, and stole over $1,000 from his till two robbers were captured yesterday by the Maxwell police "flivver" squad when the bandit automobile crashed into the iron work of the Halsted street bridge.

JAMES SMITH. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

O'Connell, who cashes checks for workmen employed in the neighborhood, had between $2,000 and $3,000 on hand. The bandits entered, one standing guard at the door, the other advancing toward the proprietor and Miss J. A. Schirp, a clerk.

The cigar man grappled with the robber, who walked behind the counter. A moment later he lay on the floor, a bullet below his heart. Stooping up the money, the bandits fled in their car.

William J. Walsh, bailiff in the court of Judge Charles A. Williams, leaping on the running board, fell to the street, bruised.

Pursuit started by the flivver squad was successful. One of the robbers, attempting flight, was shot. Both were taken. O'Connell was taken to the Mercy hospital, where his condition is said to be serious.

The prisoners gave their names as James Smith and James Butler. O'Connell's money was found in Smith's possession.

Geneva Holdup Fails.

After Phil Stroud, superintendent of construction of a new community high school at Geneva, Ill., had drawn $2,500 from a bank with which to pay his men, and had driven a block in his car, another automobile, holding four men, drew up alongside.

"Throw 'em up!" they commanded, producing revolvers.

Instead of complying, Stroud crouched in his seat, stepped on the gas, and fled down the street. The bandits pursued. Reaching a gasoline filling station, Stroud leaped out, abandoned his car, and escaped.

BANKERS GATHER IN NEW YORK FOR ANNUAL SESSION

New York, Sept. 30.—[Special.]—The largest conference of financiers which this continent has ever seen will be the forty-eighth annual convention of the American Bankers' association, which will open Monday and continue until Friday, with fully 7,500 delegates and their guests. The attendance will be nearly twice that of 1920, the banner year.

An unusual effort has been made to bring here as many representatives of the 23,000 members of the association as possible, as there are numerous matters of national and international importance to discuss.

Although the main purpose of the congress relates to domestic interests, the bankers expect to gain much information at first hand regarding Europe. The Rt. Hon. Reginald McKenna, formerly chancellor of the British exchequer and now at the head of the largest banking institution on the globe, the London Joint City and Midland bank, Ltd., will address the association Wednesday on "Reparations and International Debts."

Thomas W. Lamont of J. P. Morgan & Co., will speak on "The American Banker's Responsibility." Gov. Henry J. Allen of Kansas will take up labor problems.

SIX MONTHS FOR THEFT.

PITTSBURGH PLUS HALTS PLANS FOR NEW FACTORIES

Steel Consumers Point to Shackling of Industry.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

"Pittsburgh plus" is blocking the construction of industrial plants to cost between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 in the South Chicago-Gary mill region, to say nothing of unloading a bill of $75,000,000 a year in normal times on western consumers of steel. So the Western Association of Rolled Steel Consumers, which launched the fight against "plus" in 1919, declared in an estimate issued yesterday.

The hearings of the federal trade commission are to be resumed within a fortnight at Pittsburgh, where the United States Steel corporation is to give its arguments in support of the plus practice. The association deems that the fight is rapidly reaching a critical stage, and it is launching a campaign for funds for the redoubling of its efforts.

What the Term Means.

Pittsburgh plus is the practice of selling steel no matter where manufactured f. o. b. Pittsburgh. Under the system when plus is operating in times of normal business, steel made at Gary or South Chicago, where costs of production are low, is sold for the mill price plus the freight from Pittsburgh.

It now amounts to about $7 a ton. Before the freight rate cuts it was $7.60 a ton. When the system is working, if a Chicago manufacturer bought a ton of steel at Gary and hauled it to his plant in a truck, he would still be obliged to pay the freight just as if it had been hauled from Pittsburgh.

If this tax levied on the west for the protection of industries established in Pittsburgh were lifted, the Association of Rolled Steel Consumers sets forth that within two or three years a tremendous expansion would strike the Calumet mill section.

Some Construction Blocked.

The association lists the following items of proposed construction:

The Jones & Laughlin company has a site of over 1,000 acres at Hammond, Ind., for a plant estimated to cost $40,000,000. Construction of the plant as the trade views it, is continent upon whether "Pittsburgh plus" is abolished.

The Inland Steel company is supposed to have in vision the building of an industrial city along the shore. For three or four years the company has been purchasing land along Lake Michigan just east of Gary, and now it owns some two miles of lake front. Recently it filed two plans for record in the office of the county recorder at Valparaiso, Ind. Officials of the company declare that no development work is planned for the immediate future.

Smaller Plants Mark Time.

In addition dozens of smaller concerns are declared to have been picking up options on land or buying outright, and several extensive areas are held under cover, with a view of building if "plus" is wiped out for good and all.

According to the estimate of the association more than 200 fabricators, large and small, would establish plants in the district within two years after the abolition of "Pittsburgh plus," and their plants would represent an expenditure of between $50,000,000 and $100,000,000.

"It is a life and death fight for western industry," said W. E. McCollum, secretary of the association.

"It is time for all business interests in Chicago to awaken to the possibilities of development if plus is wiped out."

SISTERS, ENGAGED ON SAME DAY, TO BE WED TOGETHER

The culmination of a double romance will come on Oct. 21, when two sisters who plighted their troth the same day will be married in a double ceremony. The two girls, Jeannette Mary and Florence Loretta, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert B. Winter, 924 South Wenonah avenue, Oak Park, became engaged several months ago. Jeannette is to marry Norbert J. O'Bryan and spend her honeymoon in California. Florence is to become the bride of Thomas Daly and go on a wedding trip to the Ozark mountains. The double ceremony will be performed in St. Bernadine church, in Oak Park.

BORAH DEMANDS RECOGNITION FOR SOVIET RUSSIA

Speaking at a Press club luncheon yesterday, United States Senator William E. Borah of Idaho brought to Chicago his oft repeated demand for the recognition of soviet Russia.

"There can be no such thing as peace in Europe until Russia is brought into the family," he said. "There can be no such thing as disarmament—no such thing as readjustment. Then why not, in the name of God, risk something? Just as we risked something in war, why not risk something in the name of peace?"

Demand for Justice.

But he contended that, even though the United States would be risking little in acknowledging the present Russian government, the real basis of his insistence was a demand for justice.

"I am in favor of recognizing those 170,000,000 people," he said, "and of saying to them: 'While we do not favor your theory of government, you have our best wishes and what counsel we can give you the great republic of the west stands ready to give and to help you work out your destiny.'

In Contrast With French.

He argued that the road over which the French nation traveled during the revolutionary days was the only one that could have led to its salvation.

"And just as sure as night follows day," he continued, "the road over which they are now traveling in Russia is the only road over which they can travel to reach a sane and orderly government."

Senator Borah will speak at an open massmeeting at the Auditorium at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The meeting is under the auspices of a committee advocating amnesty for political prisoners.

NOVEL PARADE TO PRECEDE SESSION OF TRACTION MEN

5,000 Due to Attend Railways Meeting.

Five thousand traction experts and executives from all parts of the United States and Canada are expected to attend the forty-first annual convention of the American Electric Railway association, which opens tomorrow morning at the municipal pier.

Financing of public utilities, public relations, taxation, the weekly pass innovation, and other subjects of pertinent interest both to traction men and the general public of Chicago just at this time will be discussed by bankers, economists and engineers.

Novel Parade in Morning.

Preceding the opening of the convention a parade depicting the evolution of travel from the lowly ox cart to the modern systems of rapid transit, will pass along Michigan avenue. The procession, led by mounted Indians dragging their baggage behind them on poles attached to the ponies, will form at the Monroe street entrance to Grant park, and proceed from there northward in the boulevard and east to the pier.

There will be an ox team hauling a prairie schooner, an old stage coach used by one of the express companies across the prairies in pioneer days, a high wheel bicycle which is being ridden from Indianapolis to Chicago—a distance of 240 miles—at a speed of six miles an hour, and one of the first horse drawn street cars in Chicago. At the pier will be exhibits of all sorts of appliances used in modern electric locomotion.

H. A. Wheeler to Speak.

Among those who will address the convention are H. A. Wheeler, vice president of the Union Trust company, and Judge Walter Warwick, assistant director of the federal budget. A group of traction officials from Brooklyn, N. Y., are expected to arrive today. They include Clinton E. Morgan, general manager of the Brooklyn City Railway company; William Siebert, superintendent of transportation; James T. Grady, director of public relations; L. J. Davis, engineer, and E. H. Reed, auditor. Mr. Morgan is well known throughout the middle west, having directed traction companies in Michigan, Indiana, and Ohio. The Brooklyn Rapid Transit company will be represented by W. G. Gove, superintendent of equipment.

Robert I. Todd, president of the Indianapolis Street Railway company, is president of the association. The convention will close Friday.

Sheik Must Work Out Contract, N. Y. Judge Holds

New York, Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Rodolf Valentino must continue to struggle along on a paltry $1,250 a week acting in the movies for the Famous Players'Lasky corporation. Supreme Court Justice Wasservogel today granted the motion of the film producers for an injunction restraining Valentino from acting for any one else until his contract expires in February, 1924. Valentino claimed the film producers had followed a long drawn out method of breaking his spirit to make him tractable during the period of his contract.

FETE WILL MARK 70TH YEAR OF RAILROAD'S LIFE

Details for the observance on Tuesday, Oct. 10, of the seventieth anniversary of the Rock Island railroad have been completed. The first Rock Island train was operated on Oct. 10, 1852.

The "first run" will be reenacted on Oct. 10 by the operation of a special train from Chicago to Joliet—the route of forty miles over which the original train was run seventy years ago. This special will leave the La Salle station about 10 a. m. Charles Hayden of New York, chairman of the board of directors of the Rock Island lines, will be at the throttle of the engine.

The train will carry as passengers members of the board of directors, who will meet in Chicago, President Gorman and other officials of the railroad, and invited guests, including Mrs. W. W. Stevens of Hubbard Woods, who was a passenger on the first train of 1852.

TEACHERS PLAN CONVENTION.

The executive committee of the Central Association of Science and Mathematics Teachers met in Hotel La Salle yesterday to make arrangements for their national convention to be held at Hyde Park High school next December.

An Individual Oyster Stew—40c

[One of the specialties which has made this the most distinctive sea-food restaurant since Rector's]

No Wonder
this is Chicago's most popular dining place

Pork Tenderloin . . . 40c

Fried Chicken, dark meat, with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce 55c

Breast of Chicken [all white meat] with bacon and cream gravy or giblet sauce . . . 65c

And for Breakfast

Honey Waffles, with 3 strips of bacon, or Mickelberry's old farm sausage, butter and pure maple sap or honey 25c

Bacon and Eggs: 2 fresh eggs fried in butter and 4 strips of bacon . . 30c

In the old days when lovers of good food wanted fish or sea-food they naturally went to Rector's. Today the North American Restaurant, which is under the same ownership and management, enjoys that distinction.

Here your oyster stew is cooked especially for you, in an individual dish—right before your eyes. In it we put 7 New York Counts [the finest oysters for stews] an entire bottle of certified milk, and a big piece of butter. With it we include crackers. We know you can't get a better stew anywhere, at any price. In fact, in most other places you will pay far more and even then the stew you get won't compare with ours either in size or goodness.

Or we will fry 7 big New York Counts to your order for only 40 cents. And that price includes Tartar or Chili sauce or Ketchup. It is also here that you get, at low prices, the finest Fish, Frogs Legs, Shrimps, Scallops and Lobster. For instance, the big portion of Halibut [including Peas] which we give you for 35 cents is acknowledged to be the finest piece of fish obtainable in Chicago at any price.

As nearly as we can estimate we sell four times as much sea-food and fish as any other Chicago restaurant or hotel. Yet we also make a specialty of all the other good things you love to eat—juicy steaks—fried chicken—chops.

And here the quality is always the finest and the portions big. But you serve yourself—pay nothing at all for "service"—and so our prices are astonishingly low.

OLD STATUTE BINDS FILM STAR TO SCREEN TUTOR

Girl Only an Apprentice, N. Y. Judge Decides.

New York, Sept. 30.—[Special.]—The old legal form of indenturing an apprentice, even if the apprentice be a 17 year old girl, has not passed out of existence, it was disclosed today when Supreme Court Justice McCook upheld, under the ancient "master and man" statutes, a contract made by Harry Durant, an official of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation with the father of Mary Astor, screen favorite, whose real name is Lucille Langhanke.

Durant, who is a lawyer, perceiving screen possibilities in Miss Langhanke, undertook to obtain employment for her as a motion picture actress about a year ago.

Under the contract she was bound to him as an apprentice, to study and learn the screen art, and he agreed to instruct her and find her places until she could earn $100 a week.

After that the contract which her father signed, provided that Durant should receive 25 per cent of all her earnings over $100 until she reached the age of 21.

Now as Miss Astor, she has been offered a contract for $1,000 a week and Durant demands his quarter of $900 a week. The father brought suit to annul the contract as not binding on a minor, but after examining the carefully drawn contract, Justice McCook, who said such a case had not arisen in these courts since 1804, decided that it is binding unless, on trial, the parents can prove that Durant is not qualified to teach Miss Langhanke the motion picture art.

Since her indenture to him she has been starred in "Beggar Maid," "Hope," "The Young Painter," and has been leading woman with Eugene O'Brien and Glenn Hunter.

INTELLIGENT PURCHASING

The shoppers and buyers of the City of Chicago are saying that "quality" is the basis of intelligent purchasing.

Quality and value have the same meaning in their eyes and must always be associated with one another.

The concerns that transact business in this manner are to be preferred.

Is it strange then that the old established firms are careful to see that their stocks are free from anything upon which the mark of quality cannot be placed?

DENIES MANDATE VIOLATIONS BY LEAGUE MEMBERS

Lord Cecil Talks About Recent Charges.

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

GENEVA, Sept. 30.—Categoric denials that members of the league of nations have violated the terms of their mandates and that any member of the league induced the Greeks to fight the Turks were made today by Lord Robert Cecil in answer to a series of questions submitted by THE TRIBUNE correspondent.

Lord Cecil was asked if America joined the league what steps he would advise to take to prevent aggressions and abuses on the part of members delegated to special tasks or mandates.

Specific instances of reported aggressions were mentioned, such as the alleged violation of the mandatory terms on the island of Nauru, the Hottentot rebellion, inducing the Greeks to fight the Turks, and the insurrection in Upper Silesia, where a member of the league, according to both British and Italian officers, aided the insurrectionary forces, never throwing authority on the league itself.

No Advice for U. S.

"I cannot in any circumstances undertake to give advice to America," Lord Cecil replied. "The first assumption in the question is not justified. There has been no violation of the mandatory terms in Nauru island nor anything like it. The league obviously could not have prevented the Hottentot rebellion, and in reference made to allegations about its suppressions a full inquiry is being made into these allegations and until the inquiry is reported it is premature to express any opinion.

"I have no grounds to suggest that the Greeks were induced to fight the Turks by any member of the league. As to the reference about Upper Silesia I am not sufficiently familiar with the actual circumstances referred to to give any opinion."

Silent on Suez Canal.

Lord Cecil presumed that the status of American shipping in the straits would be the same as that of all other shipping using these waters even though they were controlled by the league.

The question of the nationalization or internationalization of the Suez canal and the straits at Gibraltar never has been raised, Lord Cecil said, and hence there was no way to know what the disposition of the league on the freedom of the Mediterranean is. The Egyptians declare they will take up the question of the internationalization of the Suez canal as soon as they are admitted to the league.

Among the 200 delegates, representing fifty nations, Lord Cecil is easily the most outstanding personality of the assembly. He has been one of the leading advocates of America's joining the league, maintaining that until it does so the league cannot do really effective work.

League's Strongest Champion.

No one knowing Lord Cecil questions his sincerity and idealism, and members of the league as well as impartial observers are free to admit that to him, more than any other single member, belongs the credit for the growing prestige of this body. It was for these reasons that THE TRIBUNE submitted to him the questions designed to clear up the principal American objections to the league.

As to the impotence of the league, all the members realize the league's inability to compel any nation to do anything, to consider international disputes until invited, or to force acceptance of these decisions even after they have been requested.

J. H. BARNHART, DRY LEGAL AID, RESIGNS HIS POST

JOS. H. BARNHART.

Joseph H. Barnhart, chief legal adviser and first assistant to Prohibition Director Charles A. Gregory, announced yesterday that he has forwarded his resignation to Washington to take effect today. Mr. Barnhart has been connected with the local office for more than a year.

In that time he was instrumental in obtaining injunctions prohibiting the sale of liquor in more than 200 saloons and drug stores in the state. Mr. Barnhart was also the leader in the recent war by local authorities against bootleggers using fake and counterfeit booze prescriptions with the result that more than 300 drug stores lost their permits to sell whisky.

He will retire to private practice with offices in the Marquette building. Mr. Barnhart was for seventeen years an attorney at Danville, Ill., and is well known in downstate politics and judiciary circles.

If You Must Sleep, Don't Do It in This Courtroom

It's almost as cheap to sleep in a hotel—if you've gotta sleep in the daytime—as in Judge John K. Prindiville's court. Yesterday he fined Ralph Cunningham, 1037 West Madison street, for the privilege of slumbering in the courtroom.

MAN WHO FLED TO ITALY DENIES CHICAGO KILLING

BY V. DE SANTO.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

ROME, Sept. 30.—I saw Tony Caponnigro, who is accused of murdering Fiore Stabile in Chicago in April of last year, in the Salerno jail today. He declared emphatically that he did not kill Fiore.

Looking at the enchanting spectacle of nature around Salerno bay and the surrounding green hills studded with bright colored villas, he said, with his eyes full of tears:

"I do not see why they are keeping me here like a caged bird when the outside is so beautiful. I did not kill Fiore, who was my best friend.

"The story is like this: Fiore and I lived together. He was a wagon driver and I worked in a boathouse in a park in Chicago. We bought grapes and made wine in our leisure time for ourselves, and to sell friends.

Wouldn't Sell Wine.

"On April 3 an American woman, about 50, who was from Pittsburgh, and whose name I do not remember, came to our house. She was Fiore's friend. Her son, who was always drunk, was with her, and also four American men and one Italian whom I did not know.

"They wanted wine, but seeing that they already were drunk, I refused to give them any. Fiore was also drunk, and he told me to give them wine, but I still refused, being afraid of the consequences, and told them all they should get out of our house. One of the Americans became furious, cursed me, and grabbed a bottle and broke it over my head. At first I tried to defend myself, but soon my face was covered with blood and I felt dizzy. I ran out to go to a hospital. When I reached the sidewalk I heard a pistol shot in our house, but the pain was too great, so I continued to the hospital.

Feared False Arrest.

"After my wounds were bandaged I went to the house of Fiore's uncle, near by, who told me that Fiore had been shot dead and the police were looking for me. Afraid of being falsely accused and put in jail, I took a train for New York and later sailed for Italy.

"I wish the Chicago police would soon catch the murderer so I may be freed. I have a big family to care for."

ACCUSED BY VICTIM'S CHILDREN.

On Sept. 23 in the court of Chief Justice McKinley of the Criminal court here, the two children of Stabile testified that Caponnigro and their father had quarreled, that there were shots, and that Caponnigro had fled.

The terms of a treaty between the United States and Italy provide that no Italian accused of a crime here, who has taken refuge in his country, may be tried on evidence furnished by the American authorities.

AUSTRALIA TO BACK UP BRITISH, HUGHES INSISTS

BY JACK MYERS.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MELBOURNE, Sept. 30. — Prime Minister Hughes today made a further explanation of Australia's attitude on the near east crisis. The commonwealth is satisfied that Great Britain is doing everything possible to prevent war and Australia's intention to assist is unqualified, he said.

"Australia, with the other nations who signed the Sevres treaty, is in duty bound to uphold the provisions of the treaty, unless they are modified by a conference or the league of nations," he said. "Australia has only a small population of 5,500,000, but it could put more troops in the field than Turkey could maintain today.

"The Kemalists met the Australians at Gallipoli with the odds in their favor and they met in Palestine in open fighting and they know the result. It is futile for Australia and Great Britain to speak in two voices, but if war came we would be with Great Britain."

JAIL OPENS FOR FRADY, ALLEGED SLAYER OF WIFE

Miami, Fla., Sept. 30.—Counsel for Edgar C. Frady, Chicago automobile man, charged with the murder of his wife, Dorothy Frady, last February, said today that Frady will probably be released from the Dade county jail next Monday under arrangements by which local bondsmen will be given a $50,000 cash guarantee to cover the bond pending his trial Jan. 3.

The necessary papers were sent last night to the manager of Frady's automobile business in Chicago, he said, and the $50,000 cash guarantee to be placed in a local bank is expected to be wired here Monday.

STATE TROOPERS START TRAILING CHURCH SLAYERS

Woman Helped Kill Rector and Singer, Theory.

New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Three detectives of the New Jersey state constabulary arrived today on orders from Gov. Edwards to aid in the investigation of the murder of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, his choir leader.

The arrival of the state troopers, coming on top of the publication of Gov. Edwards' letter to Charlotte Mills, 18, daughter of the murdered woman, stimulated the county authorities to more activity than they had shown at any time during the two weeks since the discovery of the bodies in a field.

Troopers Skilled in Chase.

The state troopers were Sergt. Lamb and Troopers Dickman and Spearman. They have a reputation in New Jersey for investigating difficult murder cases. Some months ago they assisted County Detective Ellis Parker of Burlington county in solving the mystery of the death of "Honest John" Brunen, a showman, who was shot with a shotgun through a kitchen window.

Shortly after the state troopers, in civilian clothes, arrived and conferred with Prosecutor Joseph E. Stricker of Midlesex county, the county detectives began to take steps that had been neglected hitherto.

Admitting that they had failed to canvass the people who lived in the vicinity of the old Phillips farm, where the bodies were found, the authorities sent for Mike Suits, a farmer, who lives about a quarter mile from the Phillips farmhouse.

Slayer Aided by Woman.

Dr. E. I. Cronk, health officer, whose controversy with County Physician Willian H. Long of Somerset county regarding the condition of the body lead to the second autopsy on Mrs. Mills, discussed the significance of the new autopsy tonight.

"The autopsy," he said, "makes it appear as if these murders were committed by an extraordinarily strong man, probably aided by a woman.

After Mrs. Mills was shot, it is likely that the assassin knelt upon her and drew the knife across her throat, almost cutting off her head."

COAL OUTPUT FOR WEEK SHORT OF NORMAL DEMAND

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Production of both bituminous and anthracite appears to have found a temporary level, bituminous at around 8,700,000 net tons and anthracite at 1,850,000 tons a week, according to the weekly report of the United States geological survey.

The total of all coal raised is therefore about 11,600,000 net tons, still somewhat less than the amount required to meet current consumption and the heavy movement up the lakes and at the same time to rebuild consumer stocks.

The total production of anthracite during the present week, Sept. 25-30, will be from 1,800,000 to 1,900,000 net tons, as against 1,856,000 tons in the week preceding. The output of bituminous coal for the present week is estimated at from 9,600,000 to 9,900,000 tons.

GOLDEN YEARS

There will be a reception for relatives and friends and a reunion of the immediate family, including four children and eight grandchildren. Mr. Eischen is 74 years old and his wife is 68. He is a retired painter and contractor. Both have been residents of Chicago for fifty-two years.

GIRL STRUCK BY MORRIS ELLER'S CAR IS DEAD

Miss Blanche Sommer, 24, 1310 South Millard avenue, who was struck by an automobile owned by Morris Eller, sanitary board trustee, and driven by Abe Klass, chauffeur, on Friday, died yesterday at Mount Sinai hospital.

Crossing Irving Park boulevard bridge over the drainage canal, 4 year old Catherine Stossie, 4118 North Francisco avenue, was struck by a car in which Fred Hilker of Racine, Wis., and his son James were riding. The little girl was taken to the Montrose hospital, where her condition is said to be serious. James Hilker, who was driving the car, was arrested and booked at the North Robey street station.

BRUNDAGE'S IDEA OF HERRIN TRIAL AROUSES JUDGE

Says He Knows His Duty and Will Do It.

Marion, Ill., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Circuit Judge D. T. Hartwell insists that the Herrin massacre trials must be taken up in the order upon which he decided, a decision which won the disapproval of Attorney General Brundage.

"I have not said that the attorney general agreed to any time for trial or that he agreed to any order of trial," the judge said today. "The court called both sides together last Thursday to hear their desires as to the order and date of trial.

"I refused the application of the defense for a continuance until the February term and fixed Wednesday, Nov. 8 as the date when the trials should commence."

"I thought and think now that the time I fixed was very short, I also thought that the indictment in which the largest number of defendants are joined should be the first case to be tried. That is the best way to give the largest number a speedy trial. I set the cases known as individual cases, that is, where there is only one person indicted, for the same day as the three large group cases.

"If there are defendants in the first three cases against whom the evidence is not strong, such persons can be eliminated from the indictment. If the evidence against them warrants conviction, I see no reason why they could not be as easily convicted as if they were tried separately.

"I take no offense at any one for asking and contending for a different order of trial. I have no excuses to offer. I have no quarrel with the attorney general."

BUSINESS SHOWS BOOM IN MONTH; WORK INCREASES

Federal Reserve Report Is Optimistic.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—A highly optimistic summary of general business and financial conditions throughout the country for the month of September was issued by the federal reserve board today.

The chief development of the month, says the report, has been the improvement in the labor situation. The amount of voluntary unemployment has been greatly reduced, and wages have shown a distinct upward tendency.

Other outstanding features of the situation, as revealed by the board's report, were:

Mining output increased about 3 per cent during August, and has shown a tremendous expansion during September, due to the reopening of most of the bituminous and anthracite coal mines.

Production Is Increased.

Manufacturing is also being maintained at relatively high levels, increased production being reported in most important industries.

The crop prospects are somewhat less encouraging than a month ago, as there has been a rather general deterioration of the growing crops.

Both wholesale and retail trade showed marked expansion during August.

Financial conditions continue to be very sound, while domestic money rates show a slight upward tendency.

The general level of prices has remained constant during the last month, the August index number of the federal reserve board being the same as that for July.

"Manufacturing was slightly curtailed in August, but has recovered during September," said the report.

Metal Markets Strong.

"Iron furnaces and steel mills are increasing their rate of production to satisfy the continued large demand of railroads and automobile companies. The market for nonferrous metals continues reasonably strong.

"Cotton mills and knit goods factories have increased their output and woolen machinery is slightly more active, while August silk consumption was the largest for any month since 1919.

"The volume of employment has increased during September in consequence of the return to work of several hundred thousand coal miners, railroad shopmen, and textile workers. The period from Aug. 15 to Sept. 15, moreover, contained by far the largest number of wage increases reported in any month since the decline of business activity in 1920.

Crop Conditions Decline.

"The average condition of farm crops declined somewhat during August. The cotton crop has suffered severe damage from boll weevils and from drought. The grain crops are being marketed more slowly than last year.

"Wholesale trade improved substantially. Every district reported increases in dry goods sales. Sales of furniture and shoes were also much larger.

DUKE'S ISLANDS FOR SALE

LONDON.—The Duke of Argyll has decided to dispose of his island estates of Tiree, Lismore, and Benmore, extending to more than 51,000 acres.

Tiree has great archæological interest; around its coast are some remarkable Celtic forts. The island is about twelve miles in length and from five to one miles in breadth, and extends to over 21,400 acres. It is extremely fertile, and is known as "the granary and flower of the Hebrides." The snipe shooting is considered the finest in Europe.

Lismore island was in ancient times the residence of the bishops of Argyll and the isles, and the remains of their castle still exist. There are also to be seen the remains of two Danish or Scandinavian forts. The estate extends to 2,300 acres.

Benmore estate is in the Island of Mull, and includes deer forest, shootings, and fishings.

The property will be offered for sale this year.

REBUILDING OF FIELD MUSEUM WING UNDER WAY

Work of rebuilding a part of the Field museum in Jackson park with a view of showing the public the attraction it can become to the city if finished completely is progressing rapidly, according to Lorado Taft, noted Chicago sculptor, in charge of the work.

Mr. Taft is using a composition devised by himself and which is said to resemble marble and is handsomer and more durable than granite. One wall is to be covered with the material, it is planned.

It is hoped that the rehabilitation of a section of the building will result in the rebuilding of the whole structure. Already a number of local people have become interested in the project. A donation of $5 was forwarded to THE TRIBUNE yesterday by William J. Linn of Tonawanda, N. Y., to be added to the fund.

HEARST SUPPORT FOR DEMOCRATS DESPITE DEFEAT

White House Dreams May Be Amity Reason.

New York, Sept. 30.—[Special.]—In a note to the editor of the New York American William Randolph Hearst tonight directed support of Alfred E. Smith, Democratic nominee for governor, and the rest of the Democratic ticket, ending all talk that he would put a third ticket in the field.

In Democratic circles Mr. Hearst's support of former Gov. Smith, who has assailed him bitterly and prevented not only his nomination for governor but also consideration of his name as a candidate for United States senator, was taken to indicate that Mr. Hearst still cherished presidential aspirations.

Swallows His Grievance.

His desire to achieve a record of party regularity during the next two years, it is believed, outweighed his hostility to Mr. Smith and any grievance he might have against Tammany Hall or the Democratic party of the state.

Mr. Hearst's letter to the editor of the American follows:

"To the editor of the New York American: I wish you would kindly support with all sincerity the Democratic ticket and with some discrimination the Democratic platform.

"It is doubtless true that Mr. Smith is a conservative and represents to some extent the same interests as Mr. Miller, while our publications are distinctly progressive.

He Favors Democrats.

"Still, the Democratic party as a whole is naturally and essentially more progressive than the Republican party, and any Democrat in office is compelled by circumstances and surroundings to be more nearly in accord with popular requirements than a Republican, who has practically no other support than the special interests.

"Our campaign for genuine Democratic principles and policies must be conducted without personal prejudice. We may entertain regrets that progressive ideals did not have what we consider fullest expression, but we should harbor no resentment.

"We must select at any time the men and measures which offer the best opportunity for accomplishing the utmost in the public interest, and after careful comparison of both tickets and platforms, the opportunity on this occasion would seem to lie with the Democratic party.

"WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST."

Third Ticket Denied.

As a forerunner of Mr. Hearst's statement of his position, William J. Conners of Buffalo, manager of his campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor, said earlier in the day that there would be no third ticket.

Mr. Conners denied that Mr. Hearst would have accepted the nomination for United States senator and said that if his name had been presented to the convention he would have received the votes of 155 upstate delegates.

Asked if the failure to get Mr. Hearst nominated for governor would affect his candidacy for President, if he should decide to try for the Democratic nomination in 1924, Mr. Conners said:

"You never can keep a good man down. I believe he is the greatest living American. He stands for the plain people and is always sincere. He could get recognition as the greatest man in America had he played to the predatory interests."

FINES DRY LAW VIOLATOR.

Jassimer Walinowski, shoemaker, 1444 Altgeld street, was fined $100 and costs yesterday by Judge Richardson for violation of the liquor laws.

BEG PARDON!

Relatives of John Kane, formerly an inmate of Washington Park hospital, stated he fainted and fell into the lagoon at Washington park and was drowned. They deny he purposely jumped into the water, as stated in THE TRIBUNE on Thursday.

MUNDELEIN TO DEDICATE ROSARY COLLEGE TODAY

Archbishop George W. Mundelein will perform the solemn dedication, opening, and blessing of Rosary college for women at River Forest, the new educational institution under the direction of the Dominican sisters, with elaborate ceremonies this afternoon at the college. County Clerk Robest M. Sweitzer will preside at the ceremonies.

Meanwhile, cablegrams and letters, expressing good will and wishes for success, are being received by the faculty, and plans are being laid for the tag day tomorrow, when the first part of the needed $500,000 is expected to be raised.

More than 5,000 women, headed by Mrs. Edward H. Grant, will be stationed in the loop tomorrow, ready to affix tags on the coat lapels of every contributor toward the college. In addition to these, other taggers will be active in outlying districts.

In his dedicator address the archbishop will stress the importance of making college education accessible to every young woman, and will make a plea for the training of Christian women. Vocal and instrumental music will follow Archbishop Mundelein's appeal. All the Catholic organizations of the city, both men and women's, will take part.

ALLEGED FORGER MAY ALSO FACE BIGAMY CHARGE

Charges of having forged eighty-two checks for approximately $20,000 against Delbert F. Sponey, 2221 East 70th street, were sidetracked temporarily yesterday when detectives began investigating allegations that Sponey is a bigamist.

According to these charges, Sponey was married in Lincoln, Neb., before he married Miss Irma Updike in Chicago a year ago. Sponey has no divorce papers for the first marriage, it is said. Suspicion was aroused when it was learned that Sponey, a $30 a week bookkeeper in the employ of the Modern Garment Manufacturers' plant, 30 East 26th street, maintained a $125 a month apartment and drove a $4,200 automobile. His confession of check forging followed his arrest.

One out of FIVE for Hot Water

Will the "Tape-worm"* in Your Furnace Get One-Fifth of This Winter's Coal?

Here's what it actually costs you to heat water with the ordinary furnace coil. One-fifth of your coal pile. One ton out of every five you burn. Can you afford that this winter with coal so scarce and high?

The estimate is not our own. It is the standard, published recommendation of the National Association of Furnace Manufacturers. It is the minimum allowance they make for the fuel greed of the water coil.

Big Coal Bill or a Cold House

Which means just this: You must add one-fifth to the cost of your Winter coal supply or else run your house a number of degrees below the temperature that is comfortable and safe for the health of your family.

Instead of getting your hot water for nothing, as you may have supposed, from the coil in your furnace, you actually pay more than any other way. The coal you burn to heat water doesn't help heat your home.

And it's a costly and wasteful way to heat water. You have water at boiling temperature when you have no use for it and many times, when you want it badly, there's no hot water at all. The drain on your coal pile never lets up, but your hot water frequently fails you.

Save on Fuel — More Hot Water

You can save a lot on fuel and at the same time change from a haphazard, insufficient hot water supply to one that is always ready and reliable by installing a

BIG ARMS STEAL STIRS POLITICAL STORM IN JAPAN

Siberian Munitions Stores Sold to Chinese.

BY RODERICK MATHESON.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1922: By The Chicago Tribune.]

YOKOHAMA, Sept. 30.—Japan is in the throes of an internal political quarrel involving the alleged sale to Gen. Chang Tso Lin, war lord of Manchuria, of a number of carloads of Czech arms which were left in Vladivostok after the Czechs had evacuated Siberia. The chief of the general staff, Gen. Uyehara, spokesman of the Satsuma clan, and Gen. Tanaka, spokesman of the Choshu clan, are the leaders of the two factions, while the parliamentary opposition leaders gleefully are striving to precipitate a clash between Premier Kato, who heads the navy, and the minister of war.

Allege Officers Aided Sale.

Charges are freely made by the opposition press that high army officers connived at the sale of arms to Gen. Chang through Gen. Diedrichs, head of the Vladivostok Russian Whites, the ultimate object being the creation of a Vladivostok and Manchurian combination against the Reds and the creation of a buffer state in Siberia. Whatever happened, the arms disappeared. However, it is known that thirty-two truckloads of arms from the big store have reached Mukden.

The foreign office is attempting to trace the rest and to prevent their falling into Gen. Chang's hand. The sale of arms to the Chinese factions constitutes a breach of a formal agreement. The Japanese authorities have arrested the officer who was responsible for the arms.

"Unless it is shown that Czecho-Slovakia agreed to the sale through Gen. Diedrich, we will strive to prevent delivery," is the statement of the foreign office.

For Use in Siberia.

These are not the main munitions the Japanese have been guarding, but they are the latest that have been intrusted to them. It is believed the disappearance of the arms is connected with the expected revolution in Siberia to establish a democracy, which Gen. Chang is known to favor, fearing a possible descent of the Reds on Manchuria.

The soviet envoy, M. Joffe, is seriously ill in Changchung. A Japanese doctor from Dairen and a German doctor from Peking have been summoned.

FIRE PREVENTION WEEK WILL OPEN AFTER MIDNIGHT

Fire prevention week in Chicago will begin at one minute after midnight tonight and will end at midnight Oct. 9, the fifty-first anniversary of the great Chicago fire. The Chicago safety council of the Association of Commerce is directing the observance in this city with active cooperation of civic, religious, fraternal, industrial, state, and municipal organizations.

"During 'No Accident—No Fire' week last year the total number of fire alarms were cut 24 per cent and the average weekly fire loss was cut from $150,000 to $124,000, a saving of $126,000 to the public," said President William Otter of the safety council. "This year we have a weekly average fire loss of $226,928 to overcome.

"The greatest public saving will result from a general cleaning up of every home in the city. Industrial and mercantile interests already are at work preparing for 'Fire Prevention week.'"

RIO DE JANEIRO, Sept. 30.—Brazil's leading newspaper, the Jornal de Commercio, in a three column editorial today protests against any attempt to extend to Brazil the Washington conference on limitation of armaments. After referring to the naval holiday agreed on as regards capital ships and the status quo of naval bases, it asserts:

"It appears these are regulations which the powers are trying to extend to Brazil. Their adoption would mean that we would be limited to our two first line battleships, and we would be definitely deprived of any naval base, since hitherto none has been built.

"A fundamental objection to any extension of these plans to limit Brazil's activities rests on the fact that we were not invited to the Washington deliberations. The decisions of these five powers cannot be blindly applied to Brazil, which has already suspended its building program which, during the war, gave up warships already contracted for and which, because of the extension of its shore line through the activities of its merchant marine, needs a more powerful one than the present."

The editorial was in reply to an article on armaments in the recent South American issue of an American newspaper. The article raised a storm of vigorous protest in all the Brazilian newspapers. The Jornal de Commercio calls the writing erroneous and exaggerated and points out several misstatements on well known South American facts and intimates that the writer's conclusions regarding Brazil's armaments are equally incorrect.

STILLMAN FIGHT ON 'FIFI' AND GUY TO PARIS, RUMOR

Ex-Banker Plans Protest Against Decision.

New York, Sept. 30.—[Special.]—The only intimation that came today from James A. Stillman's side in the divorce battle won by Mrs. Anne U. Stillman was that Stillman would fight the referee's decision. One of his intimates said:

"Stillman is a peculiar man. When he gets a thing in his mind it becomes an obsession and he hangs on to the bitter end."

May Bring Suit in Paris.

It was rumored today that if Stillman loses in his appeal, he may go to Paris and bring another suit. He has a residence there. He was in his office yesterday, but declined to make any statement.

Hope that "even at this late day" Stillman will make reparation to his wife for the mental agony and strain which came to her from fighting his charges, and thus avoid further litigation, was expressed by John F. Brennan, chief counsel for Mrs. Stillman in her husband's divorce action, in a statement issued today.

"I have just received and read the opinion of Referee Gleason," he said. "It goes without saying that it gives us much pleasure.

Opinion Logical, He Says.

"The opinion itself is a careful and well considered review of the evidence and is convincing in the logic which leads to the finding of the legitimacy of Baby Guy and the innocence of Mrs. Stillman."

Mr. Brennan refused to say whether telegrams which he sent last night to Mrs. Stillman at Grand Anse, Que., had been answered.

"But naturally," he added, "I expect she will hurry back here."

STARDOM WAXES IRONIC AT BEBAN'S DUMBBELL TALK

Who Is This Person? They Ask.

BY EDWARD DOHERTY.

Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—"George Beban is a big piece of cheese."

It was Miss Viola Dana, one of the loveliest and littlest of the movie stars, defending her sex and her calling against the dictum of Mr. Beban.

Mr. Beban recently gave out an interview in which he declared that 80 per cent of the actors and actresses in the movies are dumbbells.

"The beautiful and the dumb," he called them.

George Hasn't a Friend.

And Hollywood doesn't like it a bit. The girls are talking and it seems George hasn't a friend in town. They are not all as outspoken as Miss Dana, but they say what they mean.

Yeah, dumb or not, they speak, and in no uncertain manner. And their beautiful hands have taken all his pictures down from coveted places, and beautiful eyes have decided never to look at them again.

"Beban," inquired Miss Bebe Daniels, when she heard the news. "Who is Beban? An actor? Really? And he said that about us? I cannot understand it. Why should he say a thing like that? It never pays to say unkind things. And it is ridiculous to say all of us are dumb. I don't know any dumbbells at all. I don't know Mr. Beban."

Helen Is So Sarcastic.

"What a lot of delightful friends Mr. Beban must have made out here," said Miss Helen Ferguson. "Judging by the company he must have kept, I feel sure he is a charming person."

Miss Lois Wilson, whom everybody calls "the nicest girl in Hollywood," thinks Beban's views are terrible.

"I'm not a dumbbell," she said. "And the motion picture people with whom I associate are not dumb, either. They are as intelligent and highbrow a lot of people as one could meet anywhere. By the way, who is this Mr. Beban?"

Are You the Man We Seek?

THERE is a man in Chicago who is looking for an opening in a business institution, with more than $7,000,000.00 in resources.

You may be that man.

This is the kind of man we want:

He must be intelligent; and, in addition to that, he must have the moral courage required to interview business men and give them important information, which they are glad to receive—when it is presented properly.

We do not want a man who boasts of having "selling experience," because many such men only have had "selling experience" that has resulted in failure; they have been disillusioned without having their illusions replaced by realities.

The man we seek will not "sell" anything.

We do not want business men to "be sold."

All we ask of our representative is this:

Tell those upon whom you call about the service we are prepared to render them; ask them if they consider such service to be profitable to them; and let them make decision of their own free will.

You may have been "rubber stamped" as a bookkeeper, an office clerk, a school teacher, a dentist, a physician, or in almost any relation into which you may have slipped.

We do not care what your experience may have been; that will not count either for you, or against you.

We will judge you solely upon your merit, as a MAN. It's the MAN we want, and not his experience.

We know what we want and, if you are THE MAN, you will furnish the evidence of that fact in your letter of application.

Tell us about YOURSELF, your hopes not realized, your sincere desire, and what YOUR CONFIDENCE in YOURSELF is based upon.

If your letter appeals to us, an interview will be arranged at mutual convenience.

This may mean a new start on the road to progress, prosperity and happiness, because the MAN we want is more than 30 years of age.

Tell us the whole story about yourself.

BUSINESS MEN FORM LEAGUE TO AID DEMOCRATS

Announce Policy Is to End City Hall Plunder.

The Democratic Business Men's League of Cook County will hold its initial meeting in the clubroom of the Hotel Sherman next Tuesday afternoon. The league has a membership of over 1,500 business and professional men, and, according to Richard S. Folsom, its president, who was the first corporation counsel of the Thompson administration, its numbers are increasing with extraordinary rapidity. Frank Wisner, a west side realtor, is secretary of the league. The letter calling the meeting says among other things:

Call It "Democratic Year."

"We believe that active, intelligent coöperation of Democrats, who are not intimately or professionally connected with political activities, in the campaign which is now in full swing, will exercise a powerful influence in hereafter improving the quality and character of the public service. It is our judgment that this is a Democratic year.

"The Republican party has registered failure in everything it has undertaken. The business and professional men of Cook county who are Democrats can render an important public service by entering this fight for better government."

Object to the League.

Mr. Folsom said yesterday in explaining the genesis of the league that it was suggested by business men who feel that it is up to them to do something in their own behalf to end the orgy of plunder and waste that is disgracing Chicago.

"These men," said Mr. Folsom, "are not playing politics in the usual way. They feel that they are engaging in a very important civic duty. They have made up their minds that the only way Chicago can be rescued from the forces which are now exploiting us is to destray their power to do further evil. The success of the Democratic party in Cook county in November will constitute a repudiation of the Lundin-Thompson organization and that is an end we all are devoutly praying to achieve."

CROSSED WIRES CAUSE BLAZE.

Fire thought to have originated from crossed wires resulted in damage estimated at $500 on the second floor of the Meade Cycle company, 83 North Canal street, early yesterday.

POLITICAL NEWS

County Judge Righeimer has ordered an investigation of charges that four Republicans were appointed as Democratic judges and clerks in the new Thirty-first ward. They are John Lorenz, 831 Rose street; Anton Prokuski, 1244 Fry street; L. Biernacki, and Charles Murray.

With Sanitary Trustee William J. Healy as its candidate for ward committeeman, the Thirtieth Ward Regular Republican club was organized at a meeting in its headquarters, 4813 West Harrison street, Friday night. The officers include Dr. R. C. O'Holloran, president; H. E. Redmann and R. E. Hampton, vice presidents, and George J. Fitzpatrick, secretary and treasurer.

Medard A. Kunz announced the organization of the Thirty-second Ward Regular Democratic club with himself as president. Other officers are Joseph Tadelski, vice president, and Edward Scheffler, secretary.

A Republican organization of the Twenty-ninth ward has been formed with headquarters at 2942 West Madison street. The officers are David W. Clark, committeeman and president; John P. Lenehan, vice president; George E. Nye, treasurer, and W. W. Smith, secretary. A resolution proposed by State's Attorney Crowe supporting the entire Republican ticket was unanimously adopted recently.

Frank Helander has been elected president of the Eighth Ward National Republican club with Harry C. Hrone and Dr. F. C. Warne as vice presidents, Henry Justesen as treasurer, and A. J. Becker as secretary.

The Du Page county Bar association yesterday unanimously indorsed Judge Mazzini Slusser as a candidate for one of the Supreme court justiceships in the Chicago district under the new constitution.

Ald. A. J. Cermak, Democratic nominee for sheriff, denounced the Anti-Saloon league for its efforts to limit the representation of Cook county in the legislature under the provisions of the new constitution.

The Fortieth Ward Regular Republican club will hold its opening meeting at its headquarters, 3145 Irving Park boulevard, Tuesday night.

Quesse and Nine Freed on Bond Pending Appeal

William F. Quesse, president of the Flat Janitors' union, and the nine other officials of the union sentenced recently to the penitentiary for from one to five years for conspiracy, yesterday filed bonds of $10,000 each with Sheriff Peters. The bonds were given on the order of Judge John A. Swanson, who stayed the mittimuses of the defendants pending their appeal to the Appellate court.

LOWDEN BRANDS "FEDERAL AID" A BRIBE TO STATES

Bureaucracy is a target for former Gov. Frank O. Lowden in an article he has contributed to the monthly bulletin of the Woman's City club, now in the mails.

"Let the proportion of public employés continue to increase as rapily as it has in late years," reads his concluding paragraph, "and within a reasonable time we shall witness this phenomenon:

"Our population divided into two classes, those holding office—still a minority, it is true—and all others working to support the minority in office.

"From that condition to the soviet form of government is but a single step."

Assails U. S. Invasion of States.

The subject of Col. Lowden's article is "Federal Aid," and he criticizes the manner in which the national government invaded the functions of the state during the war.

"The federal government engaged in all sorts of activities which theretofore had been carried on by the states," he says. "This perhaps was inevitable. The bureaus in Washington then tasted the delights of power over fields which before had been exclusively occupied by the states. They were loath to give up this power. Propaganda, that new-found weapon of all causes, was employed to perpetuate these new powers.

"'Federal aid' was the potent phrase with which they conjured. They sought to break down the opposition which naturally existed among state officials to encroachment upon their own proper fields of activity. They found the most effective weapon at their hands was the offer of 'federal aid.'

Calls "Federal Aid" a Bribe.

"'Federal aid,' generally speaking, is a bribe offered to state governments to surrender their own proper functions. There is scarce a domain in the field of government properly belonging to the municipality or the state which the federal government is not seeking to invade by the use of the specious phrase 'federal aid.' Education, public health, private employment are a few instances which come readily to mind.

"The bureaucrats who initiate these movements for an extension of their own power draw great strength from the class specially affected. This rapid extension of federal administration not only means greatly increased expenses but it means the gradual breaking down of local self-government in America."

The former governor also condemned the multiplicity of taxing bodies and their aggregate of "confiscatory" taxation.

GLASS CASKET STOCK SELLERS IN NEW TROUBLE

Fraud and misrepresentation used in the preparation of its application for articles of incorporation are argued by Attorney General Edward Brundage as cause for the dissolution of the Manufacturers' Discount company, in quo warranto proceedings begun yesterday in the Circuit court.

The petition, filed by Assistant Attorney General William C. Clausen, is directed against William Schlen, J. Beckett and John W. Wuerth, as officers of the company, which acted as a sales agency for securities of the Glass Casket corporation and the Crager System, Inc.

The luxurious offices of the three companies, furnished at a cost of about $40,000 and raided last Wednesday by postal inspectors and deputy marshals, are said to be the headquarters of a $4,000,000 stock selling scheme which originated in New York.

In the petition filed yesterday it is charged by Mr. Brundage that, although the Manufacturers' Discount corporation professed to have been capitalized for $250,000, none of the capital stock had been subscribed or paid for.

Aged Couple in Suicide Pact, Belief; Man Dead

Richard Melcher, 91 years old, and his 88 year old wife were found unconscious, overcome by gas which was escaping from two open jets in a bedroom of their home at 461 East 46th street yesterday afternoon. The old man died on the way to Mercy hospital, while physicians are battling to revive the woman.

A neighbor, passing by, smelled gas and forced an entrance into the apartment. Wabash avenue police answered his call and found other jets open in the kitchen range. They believe the act to have been an attempted double suicide.

CHEAPER FLATS SCARCE; COSTLY ONES NUMEROUS

Literally hundreds of high priced flats vacant, but a shortage of apartments ranging from $60 down, will be the situation confronting myriads of residents next Monday, official fall moving day in Chicago.

"Steady falling off in salaries, compelling cheaper living quarters, is the explanation for scarcity of cheap flats," was the way one man put it.

Arthur E. Cottington, manager of Hebard's Storage Warehouse company, denied yesterday that the larger moving concerns are advancing prices.

"The standard charge is $5.75 per hour for a truck and the services of three men, plus $1 per mile each way," he said. "The moving rush this fall appears big as usual.

Complaints have been made that an attempt to obtain a city ordinance requiring movers to pay a $100 license fee was fathered by the big moving concerns to freeze the little fellow out.

DEAR PORCH:

You tell 'em!

Tell 'em you've got to stand the weather, and therefore floor paint won't do.

Tell 'em you've got to stand wear, and therefore house paint won't do.

Tell 'em that floors are not subjected to snow and rain and sun the way you are; that they don't walk on the side of the house, gallop around on it in rocking-chairs, pound it with snow-shovels, treat it in general the way they treat you.

Tell 'em you want a paint that will protect you not only from weather but from wear—not only from wear but from weather.

In other words tell 'em about me.

Most truly,

How Andrew Burg Provided for a Continuation of Paydays

Everything was right for Andrew Burg to go into business for himself, except one possibility. His family would be left, nothing short of poor, should he not live to realize success.

Then he found that under the American Bond Life Budget Plan, he could create a self-sustaining estate, large enough to assure his family an adequate income, by reserving a very little of his capital from his business. So he increased his chances of success in putting his mind at rest, once for all time, by providing his family a continuation of paydays, whenever the "grim reaper" should tap him on the shoulder.

This plan also assured him that his children would have educational and cultural opportunities, and through the good offices of a trust company that all legal tangles would be avoided in settling his business affairs to the best interest of his family after his death.

What About 1930?

The Fourth of a Series of Six Intimate Discussions on Real Estate—

By Frank K. Reilly

Did you ever hear of a family moving into a poorer neighborhood?

Where the practice of economy becomes necessary, the average family cuts the food budget. If still greater economy is required, clothing receives the next cut; if still more, amusements.

The very last thing which any family is willing to cut down on—the last retrenchment—and what is popularly looked upon as the waving of the white flag of surrender—is moving into a cheaper house in a lesser neighborhood.

No prying outsider knows when the family rations are cut short; few people note the neatly patched lining on the old overcoat, and who is there to register one's less frequent attendance at the theater and movie?—this is intimate inside knowledge that can be kept sacredly secret.

But to move into a cheaper house!—that is a dead give away. One might as well put it in the newspapers.

* * * * * * *

Every day we hear of the house shortage in Chicago. As a matter of fact there are thousands of vacant and untenanted flats and upper floors. It is simply that nobody wants to live in them. Everybody is "Grading Up." Everybody demands a little better house in a little better neighborhood. There is no going backward; the movement is altogether forward, in the matter of homes. The poorer districts are becoming further deserted; the better districts the more greatly congested.

Add to this the fact that 1,600 families immigrate to Chicago each thirty days—most of them seeking desirable homes. Where will we house the three-quarters of a million of new population within the next eight years?

At least one out of every 1,000 city people come into sudden riches every year; some through inheritance, others through a lucky turn in the market, and still others by virtue of business prosperity. Most of them immediately acquire fine homes. Here alone is a potential annual market for 3,000 fine residence lots and expensive dwellings.

There is no way to increase the supply of these choice locations. When they are gone—and the end is plainly in sight—the answer is to be given in Miss Barrymore's histrionic words—"There isn't any more."

Only four alternatives can be suggested for the accommodation of the present and future home purchaser in the five to six figure class:

(1) The possible development, under ample restrictions, of virgin tracts lying within an area readily accessible to the loop. The shrewdest observer would be unable to find more than one or two such parcels in Chicago.

(2) The possible reclamation of some of the deserted "older" sections. To accomplish this in a sufficiently adequate way to positively insure the desired objective, some person or persons of unheard-of courage and vast finances, yet to be found, would have to buy up forty or fifty blocks of costly city property—and with no assurance that their plan would prove attractive to the intending purchasers of residence plots. For such property, these imaginative operators would have to bid against the greatest "bull" factor in the realty market today—the industrial plant. Much of our most valuable land is already surrendered to industrial usage, and industrial property is today topping the market in price. An industrial site in a city like Chicago, while very necessary, is a veritable Chinese wall of exclusion as far as concerns the availability of land adjacent to it for fine residence purposes.

(3) The adoption of strict zoning readjustments within a district of early-day grandeur which has suffered the effects of decay for want of reasonable restrictions in the beginning. Here the Supreme Court has dealt a death-blow to our hopes by ruling that the adoption of property restrictions cannot be forced upon the individual owner. He would be brave unto foolhardiness who would attempt to line up a thousand owners into a legal agreement of property restrictions—considering that his plan would be completely frustrated by one dissenting owner among the thousand.

(4) The fourth and final possible source of supply is the present owner of a fine home.

Two obstacles immediately confront the prospective purchaser who pursues this trail. First, the uncertainty of the future value of the property; and, second, the matter of price. If the owner is willing to sell at all, it will be to sell at the seller's figure. He is not ignorant of the scarcity of the commodity. And if he should sell to you, he would simply trade places with you, and must, in turn, take up the quest where you left off. But—and here enters the tremendous objection—very few of even our finest sections are legally "restricted," and gradually most of the unrestricted sections are going the way of the fine old sections of other days. Many stately mansions of a generation or two back are today being dismanteled and junked—the buildings bringing nothing but the cost of wrecking. Surely this lesson of the past will not be lost upon the thoughtful purchaser of 1922.

* * * * * * *

The problem of the $15,000 to $50,000 future homeowner is still unsettled. It is hard to see ahead. On two points, however, he is thoroughly set. First, that somehow or other, he will ultimately own a home that squares with his means, that meets his tastes, that is in keeping with his business and social standing. Secondly, that home will be in Chicago, to which he is anchored by his prided and prosperous business and by innumerable ties.

Most men can see ahead ten years or more in their businesses. In fact, the real business man is daily laying plans for 1930. He cannot possibly foresee all the detours and little details, but he has the main plan of the thing in mind and his eyes pierce down the future miles of main road with clear vision and an unobstructive view.

Where will your home be, and what the conditions of your home life in 1930 if you don't start to solve the problem now?

SCHICK LOSES FIGHT TO RAISE LEGION DEBT HERE

Cook County Posts Vote Down Drive Plan.

Commander Charles W. Schick's plan to have the Cook County Association of the American Legion raise $70,000 to pay off the deficit of the state department of the Legion met with a serious rebuff yesterday. The association, which is at present pushing a drive to raise money for a clubhouse and home in this county, refused to take over the debt of the state department and referred the matter to the state executive committee.

Refusal was voted after a majority of members of the association had announced themselves in accord with Maj. Reed Landis, who asserted that "the state debt is for the state to pay, and, while Cook county will be glad to pay its share, we do not feel we should pay the entire amount."

Debt of Whole State.

The movement by Commander Schick was the first important step he has taken since his election in the Rock Island convention last Tuesday.

Fifty county Legion officers met yesterday in the drive headquarters, 21 North La Salle street.

"The debt must be cleared," said Commander Schick. "I believe we can raise it in Cook county. Some of my friends have already offered me $17,000. We can raise it here."

"Why should Cook county pay the state's debt?" asked Reed Landis. "We'll pay our share."

"I know that there will be trouble in seating the Illinois delegates to the national convention if the notes to the national department are not paid," said Col. Horatio B. Hackett. "They have told us they will seat us, but there will be arguments. The debt must be paid, but it is not for Cook county to pay it. It is the debt of the state, and an assessment should be levied upon every post. That's the way to settle it."

Debt Put Up to State.

Immediately Maj. Landis made a motion that the executive committee, which meets in Bloomington next Sunday, be notified that the debt should be paid at once and that it is the opinion of the Cook county association that it is a state debt.

The resolution was passed.

1,000 INDUSTRIES PUSH S. A. DRIVE; $5,000 ALREADY IN

With opening of the Salvation Army's annual home service appeal set for two weeks from today, the industrial division has jumped into the lead with more than $5,000 in cash turned in and agreements from the heads of more than 1,000 industrial plants personally to solicit contributions from employés.

"Let's make it 100 per cent for the benefit of those who are not on a pay-roll," is the slogan of the industrial division. The heads of plants who will solicit from their employés represent more than 200,000 workers, and their aim is an average contribution of $1 from each worker. "One hundred per cent" cards will be given to all plants that obtain contributions of any amount from all employés.

"This record is unusually gratifying," said Cyrus McCormick Jr., chairman of the general executive committee which is handling the appeal. "This is far ahead of any previous campaign by the industrial division, and should spur all other divisions to try for as good a record."

POLACCO BACK; HAS STARS FOR CHICAGO OPERA

New York, Sept. 30.—Giorgio Polacco, conductor of the Chicago Opera company, arrived here today on the Aquitania with Mrs. Polacco, known on the operatic stage as Miss Edith Mason, after an unsuccessful search for new opera stars in Italy. Polacco said he was able to find only a few promising singers, because American opera companies had been absorbing all the young stars.

Among the singers Conductor Polacco said he engaged are Giulio Crimi, tenor; Cesare Formichi, an Italian baritone, who sings in French, German, and Italian, and Angelo Minghetti, lyric tenor. He declared Rosa Raisa and Claudia Muzio will be with his company, and that Chaliapin, the Russian basso, will sing several times in Chicago. The Chicago company will not come to New York this season, Polacco said.

FARMERS START BUYING STRIKE AS U. S. AID FADES

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Cold water that Washington threw on the country bankers' and farmers' scheme of financing foreign buyers so the American producer could have an outlet for his surplus crops merely served to stimulate a greater interest in the movement to bring prices for raw and finished products closer together.

Country bankers and farm leaders have formed even a closer alliance during the last few days, and W. L. Gould, Kewanee, Ill. ,banker, chief agitator of the farm products price boost campaign, has added new recruits to his forces. Great pressure will be brought on representatives and congressmen to bring relief to the farmers.

Others States Assisting.

Other states are in sympathy with the movement and are doing everything they can in various ways, working through different groups and factions to create opposition to the present high prices that farmers have to pay for things they must buy.

Fifteen hundred copies of articles recently appearing in THE TRIBUNE, outlining the present situation of the farmers and relief measures suggested by country bankers and agricultural leaders, have been mailed to senators and representatives at Washington by leading bankers of the middle west. Washington officials are being urged to dig into the agricultural situation that is working a hardship particularly on the grain farmers throughout the United States.

Northwestern grain farmers are calling on Washington for help. L. B. Hanna, formerly governor of North Dakota, and Walter R. Reed of Fargo, N. D., have been in Washington during the last few days serving as a commission for the farm bureau of North Dakota, trying to find some relief for the agriculturalists. They have been conferring with various heads of the governmental departments, including Secretaries Wallace and Hoover, concerning ways and means of improving the wheat market and the general agricultural situation.

Foreigners Buy Sparingly.

When the commission reached Washington, Mr. Reed frankly stated his purpose. "We are here to study the statistics to see why the market does not recover," he said. "So far as I have been able to learn, there is no longer group buying by foreign governments or the pooling of operations by foreign individuals who might come into the market periodically for the purpose of hammering down the prices. We appreciate that foreigners are purchasing only sparingly. We have come to Washington to see what help we can secure from the War Finance corporation, either in financing foreign exports or financing the country elevators which are holding our wheat."

Scores of letters coming to Mr. Gould indicate that, since country bankers have been shown an unusual interest in the farmers' affairs and a willingness to help all they can, farm advisers are hopeful that they will be able to get relief. Melvin Thomas, Cole county's farm adviser at Charleston, Ill., writes that since prices for farm machinery, groceries and especially coal and lumber continue high, "farmers are buying only those materials which are absolutely necessary."

Help in Adjustment.

"This non-buying policy," he said, "will help as much as anything I know of to bring closer relative prices between the products a farmer has to sell and the things he must purchase Manufacturers could aid materially in bringing about this adjustment by being willing to take their losses as the farmers have done," he said.

He adds, however, there is now a much more hopeful tone among farmers in his county than there was six months ago. "If the railroad and coal strikes had not given business in general such an added load to carry, farmers here would feel that they were getting started on the upward grade toward normal conditions," he said.

Along with news of the threatened buying strike among farmers, market experts of the Chicago live stock exchange point out that live stock farmers resent the statements that farmers are broke and are unable to pay their rent, taxes, and running expenses. The live stock exchange bureau of information's expert, who signs his initials J. E. P., writes to THE TRIBUNE that "this periodical issue of propaganda concerning the bankruptcy of the agrarian element is resented by farmers, as it affects their credit adversely. It is concocted by men who for personal reasons are trying to create false psychology. It will be admitted that grain farmers are suffering, but the live stock operators, especially those in the corn belt, have had a phenominally prosperous season."

LEGION NOTES

Sergt. Samuel Woodfill, the war's greatest hero, and Col. Alvin Owsley, chairman of the national Americanization committee of the American Legion will be the speakers at the usual Monday luncheon of the Advertising Men's post tomorrow at Mandel Bros. Other guests will be Gen. Wood, Gen. Davis, Col. Clinnin, State Commander Daddy Schick, Past Commander McCauley and many others.

The Oak Park post of the American Legion will hold its October meeting at the River Forest Tennis club next Tuesday. There will be an entertainment and dance after the business session.

DRUG OVERDOSE FATAL.

An overdose of morphine is believed to have caused the death of Charles Johns, 482 Lake Park avenue, yesterday.

35,000 PULLMAN EMPLOYES GIVEN FREE INSURANCE

Free industrial insurance for the 35,000 employés of the Pullman company was announced yesterday in the October issue of the Pullman News. The group insurance plan is set up without cost to the workers in conjunction with the system of employé representation which was installed two years ago.

Under this plan there are 203 local joint committees and fourteen general joint committees. Forty mechanical crafts and ten other vocations are represented on the committees by workers elected by the employés, and the joint committees handle questions involving wages, working conditions, welfare, improvements in methods and facilities and petitions and grievances.

"Two years' actual experience," says the industrial relations department, "has demonstrated that by submitting cases of this character to joint councils for thorough investigation and friendly adjudication, the employés and the management are able to settle such matters on a fair and square basis and in an amicable spirit and without interruption of industry."

Annoyer of Small Pupils Fined on Mothers' Charge

After several mothers had testified how he had molested their small children while on the way to school, James Wallace, colored, 2533 South State street, was fined $100 and costs by Judge John F. Haas at the South Clark street court yesterday. Mrs. Carmen Idano, 3144 South Wells street; Mrs. Anna Carso, 3149 Princeton avenue, and Mrs. Sophie Albert, 3136 South Wells street, were the complaining matrons.

Choose a Piano from the Hundreds Returned from Summer Homes!

OCTOBER again brings its great event in piano offerings to the women of Chicago. A golden opportunity to save on an exquisite instrument! You who have wanted a piano of character will be delighted by this display. It is an event of marked importance. Beautiful grands, uprights, and players at a decided discount from their original prices.

How it is possible

Each year in the early part of summer we rent pianos for use in summer homes. Thus we send pianos to such resorts as Lake Geneva, Charlevoix, Oconomowoc, Onekama, Petoskey, Lake Beulah, etc., etc. At such places they add music to the round of pleasures. When the season ends and country homes are closed the pianos are returned to us.

It is obvious that their short service has not impaired their tone or appearance. For practical purposes they are as good as new. Having been but briefly the center of merry groups in cultured homes they are now exceptional values. As used pianos their worth is high but prices, according to custom, are greatly reduced.

Pianos to suit all tastes

This is your opportunity to gratify your desire to beautify your home. Place in it a fine piano bearing a famous maker's name. Here you will find such a one, pleasing in every respect and ideally suited for your home. Come in to see the display. It includes hundreds of exceptional values.

Dainty little grands, the latest designs in piano construction, form a group of especial interest. Inexpensive instruments suitable for students are shown in profusion. In addition there are many exchanged, odd style, and new pianos at attractive prices.

Repaired, refinished, tuned

The pianos returned from summer homes have been carefully overhauled. Four shops have been engaged for weeks in preparing for this event. Any scratches or blemishes have been repaired. Case and action have been restored to perfection. As a result the instruments save for the fact that they have been in use, look and are as good as new.

If you have no objection to past ownership, are interested in value and merit, you can buy here safely and save considerable. In perfect tune and enjoying a fine tone these pianos will bring music and happiness into many homes this winter.

Nothing down— 30 months to pay

Terms are such that they should sweep away any obstacles. They are truly remarkable. You need pay no money down on the piano of your choice. Delivery will be made at once. GLENNA COLLETT IS WOMEN'S GOLF CHAMP

YANKS FINALLY LAND AMERICAN LEAGUE PENNANT

CINCH BUNTING BY 3-1 TRIUMPH OVER RED HOSE

Hoyt and Witt Feature in Hugmen's Clincher.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 30.—New York won the American league pennant by defeating Boston 3 to 1, today. The Yankees can lose their game in Washington tomorrow and still finish first. The league leaders went in to win today, and did so in the first inning.

With Alex Ferguson pitching for Boston, Witt led off with a single too wide for Pratt. Dugan singled and Ruth bunted down third base line and was credited with a hit when O'Rourke fumbled as he slipped in fielding the ball. With the bases full, Wallie Pipp's single to right scored Witt and Dugan. Pennock replaced Ferguson, and Ruth scored off Meusel's sacrifice fly.

For the balance of the game New York succeeded in making but three hits. Boston scored its run in the seventh when O'Rourke singled, took third on John Collins' third straight hit, and scored as Mitchell forced Collins at second.

As the Yankees galloped off the field in high glee, First Baseman Pipp tossed the last ball to the veteran umpire, Tommy Connolly. Score:

YANKEES SET FOR SERIES

New York, Sept. 30.—New York's fandom marshaled its opposing forces tonight for the battle of Coogan's Bluff—the second straight world's series between the Yankees and Giants. Both teams were in the championship fold tonight, when the Yankees, after hovering for nearly a week on the "brink of the mathematical certainty," clinched the American league title by defeating Boston, 3 to 1. The season closes tomorrow with the Yankees playing Washington and the Browns again opposing Chicago. Should the Yankees lose and the Browns win the final standing would be as follows:

	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
New York	94	60	.610
St. Louis	93	61	.604

Hoyt, Witt Are Stars.

Oddly enough, two heroes of the Yankees' decisive victory today were Waite Hoyt, star of last year's series, and Whitey Witt, whose bat turned the tide in the final game of the famous series with St. Louis recently.

The first game of the series will be played next Wednesday, Oct. 4, at the polo grounds, with the Giants as the "home club." The first six games will be played on consecutive days, with the teams alternating as the "home club." If a seventh game is necessary to decide the series, it will be played after an interval of a day, a toss of the coin to decide the "home club."

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question Hodden Leaf, statesman, Wisconsin, was awarded $5.

The Question.

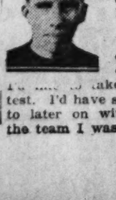
Would you like to see more intersectional football games between the large universities?

Where Asked.

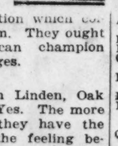
Of students attending Chicago Latin school, 18 East Division street.

The Answers.

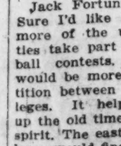
Wells Sinclair, 459 Deming place—I should imagine every one interested in college sports would be glad if intersectional football games were an annual affair between the various universities. They have already had a good start in the Chicago-Princeton game last year, and this year there will be many more.



Robert Kocks, 509 Wellington avenue.—Well, I know I'd like to see more intersectional football games. They help keep up the spirit of friendly rivalry between the various colleges, especially between the east and the west. It always has been a question which college has the better team. They ought to have an all-American champion team among the colleges.



Ted Noel, 406 North Linden, Oak Park.—Yes. The more games they have the better the feeling between the east and the west. The Chicago-Princeton game last year was a good start. The players would enjoy the contests, the general public would enjoy reading about them, and it would be a good thing for everybody concerned.



Jack Fortune, 1451 Astor street.—Sure I'd like to see more of the universities take part in football contests. There would be more competition between the colleges. It helps keep up the old time college spirit. The eastern colleges would find out that they are not the only ones that know how to play football. They'd find that there are some good teams in the middle west.

James Hadley, 4750 Woodlawn avenue. — Intersectional activities develop a spirit of mutual interest between the colleges in the different parts of the country. You see what the Chicago-Princeton game did in that line. I know I'd take part in such a contest. I'd have something to look back to later on with pride, especially if the team I was with won.

CARNEGIE TECH DROPSY AIDS ELI TO 13-0 VICTORY

Techs Twice Threaten Yale Goal.

ALUMNI OFFICIALS

PRINCETON, N. J., Sept. 30.—Special.]—A joint board of football referees for Harvard, Yale and Princeton, recruited from the alumni bodies of the Big Three is the suggestion of The Daily Princetonian, this morning.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Carnegie Tech held Yale to a 13 to 0 count this afternoon, twice penetrating to the Yale 30 yard mark before the defense of Tad Jones' men stiffened enough to nullify the end running and forward passing game which featured Steffens' team's play. Yale scored three times, but displayed no consistent ground gaining rallies.

Neidlinger's touchdown, which was followed by George Becket's field goal and two drop kicks by O'Hearn, was the direct result of Carnegie's juggling. Robertson, whose backfield game scintillated for the Pittsburghers, was the chief offender.

The first and second periods exhibited both elevens with their offensive game completely breaking down their opponents' defense, the third and fourth chapters showing the defensive stamina so stoutly developed that both teams resorted to a punting game. The lineup:

PRINCETON, 30; HOPKINS, 0

Princeton, N. J., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Princeton easily defeated the Johns Hopkins football team in the opening game of the season today, 30 to 0, and displayed surprising abundance of material. The Tiger attack netted four touchdowns and the defense prevented the visitors from earning a first down or playing once in Princeton territory.

The weather was too warm for ideal football conditions, but the Tigers played tirelessly, and, led by their newly elected captain, Melville Dickinson, could not be halted. Princeton's heavy line repeatedly opened wide gaps.

In the second period Chum took the ball from the 15 yard line to the 5 yard line, and Wingate went through center for the first score. In the third quarter Gorman, quarter back, passed to Gray, who scored.

The ball was on the 3 yard line as the fourth period opened and Princeton was penalized 15 yards as Van Gerbig carried the ball over in vain. On the fourth down Baker drop kicked the goal. Gains, at end, shortly after the play began recovered a fumble and scored. Lineup:

HARVARD WINS 20-0

Boston, Mass., Sept. 30.—Harvard defeated Middlebury in the season's opening game today, 20 to 0, but the Vermont visitors played the Crimson closer than the score would indicate. In the opening five minutes George Owen, Harvard's plunging fullback, registered two touchdowns after savage rushes, one of them following a 40 yard run by Roscoe Fitts. Capt. Buell drop kicked one goal and missed another.

The last seven points came in the third quarter. Middlebury's sustained march carried the ball to Harvard's 33 yard line, where Ashley threw a flat pass to unprotected territory, and Karl Pfaffman grabbed it and raced 75 yards for a touchdown and then kicked the extra point. Lineup:

LINDBLOM HIGH BEATS DEERFIELD IN STIFF BATTLE

Good; and at times brilliant football, mixed with loose mechanical play and headwork, marked a thrilling football battle yesterday at Highland Park when Lindblom High of the Chicago league vanquished Deerfield, 1921 Suburban champion, 26 to 20. It was a hectic struggle, fortune first favoring one team and then another, and the result was in doubt until the final whistle.

Deerfield started in the first period as if bent on crushing Lindblom, scoring thirteen points to none. Then Lindblom tightened on defense and drove down the field on successive line plunges that could not be stopped, turning the tables in the second quarter, scoring two touchdowns and kicking two goals and making the score 14 to 13 at the half. The Chicagoans continued their direful attack in the third period for two more touchdowns.

Deerfield Stages Rally.

With the count 26 to 13 against them, the weary but scrappy Deerfield lads rallied in the last quarter. Taking the ball from midfield, they duplicated Lindblom's marches in the previous two quarters and scored a touchdown. They were again headed for the Lindblom goal when Coach E. L. Moore's desperate line held, and though Lindblom gave ground slowly further scoring was prevented.

Lindblom resorted entirely to straight football. Conley and Marks made repeated long gains by smashing off tackle and Heidorn several times bucked through for needed yardage. Bruce's splendid interference, Carlson's all-around game and Rouse's good play in the line were other important factors in their victory.

Lindblom Line Stronger.

Deerfield varied its attack well, but failure to withstand the charging Lindblom line was costly. Standing out in the play of the commuters' circuit lads was that of Sandwick, Ted Watt, Allen and Steele. Lineup:

LINDBLOM [26].		DEERFIELD [20].
R. E.	Trimble	Sandwick, Emerson L. E.
R. T.	Hickman	T. Watt, Mann L. T.
R. G.	McConnell	Stipes, F. Watt L. G.
C.	Baumier, Rouse	Reichelt, P. Watt C.
L. G.	Rouse, De Koker	Mann, Simmons, S'pple, Dreicke R. G.
L. T.	Varley	Spellman R. T.

R. H.	Conley	Dyer, Harvey L. H.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

RACING AND BETTING.

BETTING is a necessary adjunct of horse racing.

Without some method of speculation—either mutuel machines, open booking with odds displayed, oral wagers, or stakeholders—it is not possible commercially to conduct a race meeting and pay the valuable purses and stakes necessary to stimulate breeding and attract a high class of horses.

Some may consider this an indictment of the sport. Rather it is an indictment of human nature, if it be an indictment at all. People will not attend in sufficient numbers unless they can wager. They would turn out possibly for big stake days, but they would not turn out on so-called "ordinary" days. There must be ordinary days intervening between stake events.

To determine stake horses we must have others for them to contend against and show their superiority. If there had been nothing but stake races we never would have had the "iron horse" Exterminator in his present development, for he was an ordinary 2 year old which raced to real greatness after his 3 year form.

In 1904 city officials announced betting would be suppressed at Washington Park. Derby day attendance was below average. Betting was stopped so far as possible in such a vast crowd. On Monday attendance was scarcely more than 2,000 and the betting ring was practically deserted except by detectives. On Tuesday jockeys and trainers were more numerous than spectators. Washington Park then closed its gates, never to reopen.

Success of the Hawthorne meeting, which opened yesterday, depends upon the extent to which individual wagering may be conducted without running afoul of the law.

CHICAGO WANTS RACING; 20,000 CROWD IS PROOF

BY FRANK SMITH.

Does Chicago want horse racing? We'll say it does. And about 20,000 to 25,000 other people are of the same opinion, judging by the attendance at the opening day of the twelve day meeting at Hawthorne yesterday.

Some of our best people and some of our worst people were on hand, but the crowd of worsts was infinitesimal as compared to the crowd of bests.

People of stability, people who have real red blood in their veins, people who believe in horse racing as a sport, people who believe they are at liberty to spend their afternoons as they see fit and not as some reformers would dictate—these made up the great majority that by its every act indicated that it was having the time of its life.

Fair Spectators Bet.

While some arrests of bookies are reported, a good guess is that not more than 5 per cent of the fans in the grandstand, in the paddock, and on the lawn placed wagers with the roving bookmakers, who were watched by eagle eyed plain clothes men for any infraction of the betting law.

There were bets made, yes. Some of the boys got caught. A good many others didn't. It is a good guess to state that in the stands and on the lawn there was little more wagering between individuals than at any major league baseball game in this or any other city.

Gang Wants Racing.

Aside from the meager betting, the gang indicated it wants racing. The old rush to the fence at the finish of each event was enough to thrill the most cold blooded opponent of the sport of kings. Men and women hung on the railing, stretching their necks to the very limit in order not to miss the winning number as it flashed across the finish line.

The shout, "Come on you Coyne," "come on you Dantzic," as the two horses raced neck and neck past the judges' stand in the fourth event sent the blood to the checks of those who were thrilled by the super efforts of each horse.

Old Custom Resumed.

The old custom of crowding about the winner on the return to the judges stand was in evidence. The fans poured on the track, gathered about the victor and, when permitted by the attendants, stroked the neck and flanks of the fretting, prancing equine. When the victor was led away the crowd backed into the lawn and the infield and waited for the next event. After each race this program was repeated.

It was an orderly crowd. Folks went to Hawthorne to see some good racing, and good racing was furnished. The handicapping seemed almost perfect, making most of the events nip and tuck from start to finish.

Does Chicago want racing? We'll say it does.

BY HUGH FULLERTON.

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Glenna Collett, the 19 year old Providence lassie, swept to an overwhelming victory over Mrs. William A. Gavin, now playing for Britain, today in the finals and became one of the youngest women's champions in the history of golf. Miss Collett's winning margin was 5 and 4, for the thirty-six hole route.

Her long, clean driving, outdistancing the former New Yorker from almost every tee, broke the game of Mrs. Gavin and started her forcing from the ninth hole in the morning to the finish of the preluncheon round. Mrs. Gavin looked to be the worst outclassed finalist in the history of women's golf.

Glenna Shows Gameness.

But Miss Collett's victory was not accomplished without a scare, for the British star, stymied in her long ambition to win the American championship, rallied desperately in the afternoon and fought her way back until one time she was but 4 down.

In the face of this determined assault and with the luck breaking against her on two putts which stopped just at the lip of the cup, the girl did not waver. She kept outdistancing her rival on almost every drive, forcing Mrs. Gavin to press her shots, and on the fourteenth hole she broke.

The English woman's drive was short and her approach shot dropped into a trap in front of the green. Her pitch out of the trap lifted high and ran far across the green; she putted back bravely, but could not drop the putt, and Miss Collett, playing carefully, ran her ball close up, steadied and tapped it gently, and, as it fell, there was a rush from all sides, and a new queen of the golfing world was crowned.

Glenna Modest in Victory.

In the center of the cheering group the slender, tired girl, her face showing the strain of six days of constant contest, stood smiling shyly as if half frightened. At 19 she had accomplished the feat thousands of women had battled for years to attain.

A few minutes later, in the center of a cheering crowd banked on the green and hill below the club house, she received the great cup emblematic of the women's golf championship, the highest honor in American golf.

Since Alexa Stirling, then eighteen, first won the honor, no champion has held the popularity of the slender, quiet girl. The daughter of parents of moderate circumstances, she had won the hearts even of those jealous of her golf, and tonight, loaded with flowers and honors, she was simply a tired, happy little girl, who wanted to be with her mother and who tried to flee from the social celebration which followed.

Final Match Below Standard.

As for the golf played today, it was below the standard of either of the finalists. Mrs. Gavin smashed all to pieces in the morning, and with the match safe and her opponent 6 down Miss Colelt started in the afternoon as if to finish it up a rush, then wavered.

Her approach shots and putts, which had been bold all week, weakened and she seldom got the ball up to the cup, while Mrs. Gavin, facing almost certain defeat, rallied and with her deadly approaching and by two fine putts strove to turn the tide.

True, fortune favored Mrs. Gavin, but in these matches the winner needs luck. Twice lucky "kicks" saved her from going into deep trouble, another shot struck the top of a mound behind which the green was concealed and glided down to within easy putting distance. But against the long, straight tee shots of the Providence girl she could not prevail.

The morning round developed into a slaughter when, after a brief period of unsteadiness, Miss Collett started and came through the morning round trip six up. So bad was Mrs. Gavin's game that had Miss Collett played at the gait she had been going this week, she would have been eight and perhaps nine up at luncheon time.

For the first five holes Mrs. Gavin was up and doing, but the value of distance driving in women's golf began to tell. She was forcing her shots to get distance, and always the Providence girl was yards in the lead, and Miss Collett was but one up. Then the Providence girl started and won hole after hole, pulling her lead up to 6 up at the half way mark.

Mrs. Gavin Gains a Bit.

They started the afternoon round with the gallery sympathizing with the invader, expecting her to succumb quickly, since she had finished the morning in bad style. Miss Collett cracked a long, clean drive straight down, and Mrs. Gavin hooked over to the edge near a tree. Her out from the difficult position was fine, while Miss Collett for the third time in two days rolled her fine second into a little sand trap, and both putted all over the lot, halving in sixes. They halved the second and third.

Miss Collett was out of luck on the fourth, her fine second shot rolling into a trap. She failed to get out on the first try, the second was short, and, although Mrs. Gavin played badly, she won the hole, 6 and 7, and the next, 5 and 4.

Glenna Starts to Wabble.

Glenna won the sixth when Mrs. Gavin missed a short putt. Miss Collett should have won the seventh, yet was forced to be satisfied with a half, and she lost eight because her long downhill putt from the back of the green hung on the edge of the cup and dropped the ninth by weak approaching.

But the tenth and eleventh were halved and Miss Collett won the long hole, 5 and 6, Mrs. Gavin's third shot being still at the bottom of the hill. However, on the next the British woman made a sensational second shot onto the green and, when Miss Collett's long drive almost to the edge of the 310 yard green, forced Mrs. Gavin to press, and she was beaten amid cheers of those who rooted for her to overcome the tremendous handicap she faced in the afternoon.

GIANTS SPLIT TWIN BILL WITH BOSTON, 5-1, 5-3

New York, Sept. 30.—The New York Giants divided a double header with Boston today, the visitors winning the first game, 5 to 1, while the champions took the second, 5 to 3. Czvengross, a Polish righthander from Little Rock of the Southern Association, pitched the first game for the Giants, and Clinton Blume, former Colgate university star, the second. McGraw put in a substitute lineup in the second game. Scores:

RED SOX-TYGER DEAL IS DENIED

Boston, Mass., Sept. 30.—Larry Graber, secretary of the Boston Red Sox, denied that a deal is under way with the Detroit Tigers in which Derrill Pratt and Warren (Rip) Collins might be traded, but the belief persists here that a dicker of some kind is pending with an American league club, probably for cash.

GREAT WELCOME TO RACE MEET AT HAWTHORNE

race and read on message. It said: "$5 Dixie Dick to win. J. B." Somewhere in the loop last night, J. B. was entitled to $40 winnings on his $5 at 8 to 1.

Occasionally one of these much sought individuals was seen eaving the ring, apparently under protest. One suspected he might be in tow of a deputy sheriff. There were six such exits.

These betting ring scenes were for the minority. The great majority of those present attempted no betting except through "hat pools" which prevailed among occupants of boxes and where groups of friends were congregated in the stands. Method of selection often was by drawing lots.

Exterminator the Feature.

From the racing standpoint of class, Exterminator's appearance was the feature of the day. "As the bugle sounded, calling the "iron horse" from the paddock gate where he had halted after a mild canter from his stable, a great shout arose. It was repeated as this king of the American turf, with Jockey A. Johnson aboard, paraded past crowded stand and judges.

Because owners of horses measuring up to Exterminator's standard refused the issue and declined to ship here for a special race, Willis Sharpe Kilmer's gelding, Kentucky Derby winner of 1918, with an earnings record of nearly $250,000, appeared in an exhibition journey of a mile and one-quarter so as not to disappoint the holiday seeking crowd.

Shows Burst of Speed.

Breaking from the quarter pole, Exterminator came past the stand the first time with tail whisking as if in protest against the absence of competition. Jockey Johnson took a stout pull on his mount and rated him to the half in :51 4-5. It was not fast. Down the back stretch, around the far turn, and into the stretch galloped the clean cut chestnut gelding, still under wraps.

Then, as experienced racegoers were ready to voice disappointment, Johnson loosened his hold a trifle and Exterminator bounded forward with that finishing burst of speed familiar to turf communities more fortunate than Chicago. It was the burst of speed, the indication of stamina under weight, which makes Exterminator the "Iron Horse."

The time posted was 2:10, which shows how slow was the pace except for that final furlong.

As Exterminator returned to the judges' stand after his finish a floral piece went about his neck while Brig. Gen. George V. H. Moseley presented a silver cup in behalf of the Illinois Jockey club to the owner, who preferred to remain in obscurity while Trainer Wayland received the trophy.

Fourth Race a Thriller.

Perhaps the best contest of the day from the spectators' viewpoint came in the Cudahy handicap, fourth on the card, distance one and one-sixteenth miles. Coyne went out in front and opened up a gap of four lengths. On the far turn Dantzic, which Murphy was rating in third position, moved to second place, passing the favorite, Ten Can. Entering the stretch, Dantzic challenged under his jockey's skillful guidance.

Dantzic soon was at Coyne's saddle girth, then at his neck, and then on even terms. Coyne's rider went to the gad and the Dick Fennell colt responded as if he would come on again and win. For fifty yards these two measured strides. Then Coyne faltered and Dantzic sped under the imaginary wire a winner to the shouts of a thrilled throng—a throng thrilled despite the fact that a vast majority did not have a wager down on the result.

FEW ARRESTS

So mildly incidental were the arrests made by the detectives sent from the office of State's Attorney Crowe the news of these matters hardly percolated beyond the immediate groups from which the bettors were taken. The old betting ring under the grandstand contained large numbers of men gathered in interested knots. But there were no betting stands, no boards bearing the chalked odds, no bookmakers in the ancient sense taking bets, no ticket writers nor sheet writers nor any of the paraphernalia of the old days; only spectacled gentlemen discussing figures and chances.

Only the initiated knew that certain men standing before the iron pillars were bookmakers. A man feels impelled to make a wager. A friend leads him to one of these calm bookies. There is a whispered word, a notation on a card and the thing is done.

Detectives in the Crowd.

Trickling about through the throng are numbers of detectives under command of Sergt. Tom O'Malley of the state's attorney's office. Word of this has gone swiftly from mouth to mouth; usually out of the corners of mouths.

"What's the matter with the state's attorney," mutters a keen-eyed spectator. "Ain't we never goin' to smile again? Never?"

What can Tom O'Malley and his fifteen men from the state's attorney's office do?

"Well, we will pinch them," said Tom.

So he started in wherever he could get evidence. For instance, Sergt. E. R. Martin arrested Rudolph Held, bookmaker, and Lee H. Meyer, 1319 Michigan avenue, for gambling. A card was found marked "40-5, 10-5, Wakeup." No names. That is the evidence.

"Let me tell the folks in the box I am pinched," said Meyer. He was permitted to do this.

"Go ahead, make no noise. A bondsman will be waiting," said a friend.

65 "Bookies," Not All Betting.

There were sixty-five bookmakers on the grounds, not all doing business. "Jack The Bookie," Lob Cohn, Johnny Rogers, John Hackett, Frank Stone, Frank Pope were among those present. Mont Tennes was said to be behind the scenes with wire arrangements made. Western Union and Postal offices were in operation under the grandstand.

The arrests did not interfere with the work of the bookmakers to any appreciable extent. Two price lists were quoted by grapevine methods. Many of the bookmakers were from New York and other cities. Besides Meyer and Held arrests were: Joe Smith, 1552 North Clark street; John Morse, Tulsa, Okla.; Joe Selles, Austin hotel, George Flannigan, Sherman hotel.

The cases will be heard before Judge Henry Sandusky at the Cicero police station next Wednesday morning. Assistant States Attorney Frank Matousek will prosecute. The possible sentence is a year in jail or a fine of $2,000.

It is said that $100,000 changed hands in the betting. Frank Stone, bookmaker, took $30,000 in oral betting.

STAGG'S 1ST FOE PILES UP 41-0 WIN IN SOUTH

Athens, Ga., Sept. 30.—Mercer's huge line provided little opposition to Coach Herman Stegeman's University of Georgia eleven here today. The Bulldogs flipped passes over Mercer's team, crashed through it, and piled up a 41 to 0 victory. It was the final preliminary game before Georgia's battle with the University of Chicago at Chicago next Saturday.

It will be a case of pupil against teacher when Stegeman pits his eleven against the Maroons. "Stegie" played guard and end for Chicago some years ago and was among the best in the west during his playing days.

Teaney Randall, veteran Georgia half, tore off the most brilliant run of the game when he raced 74 yards for touchdown after smashing through right tackle. A moment before he had received a beautiful 24 yard pass and crossed goal. He scored four touchdowns and kicked three one pointers.

ROCKFORD WINS SLOW GAME WITH LANE TECH, 13-0

Rockford, Ill., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Rockford high won a slow game with Lane Tech here today 13 to 0. Rain, which fell during part of the game, made the ball slippery. Lane was unable to make first down except by forward passes, only a few being successful. Rockford scored in the first quarter on straight football, and again in the final period on Nelson's long end run. Poor punting by Lane gave Rockford the ball several times near goal. Lane was greatly outweighed. Lineup:

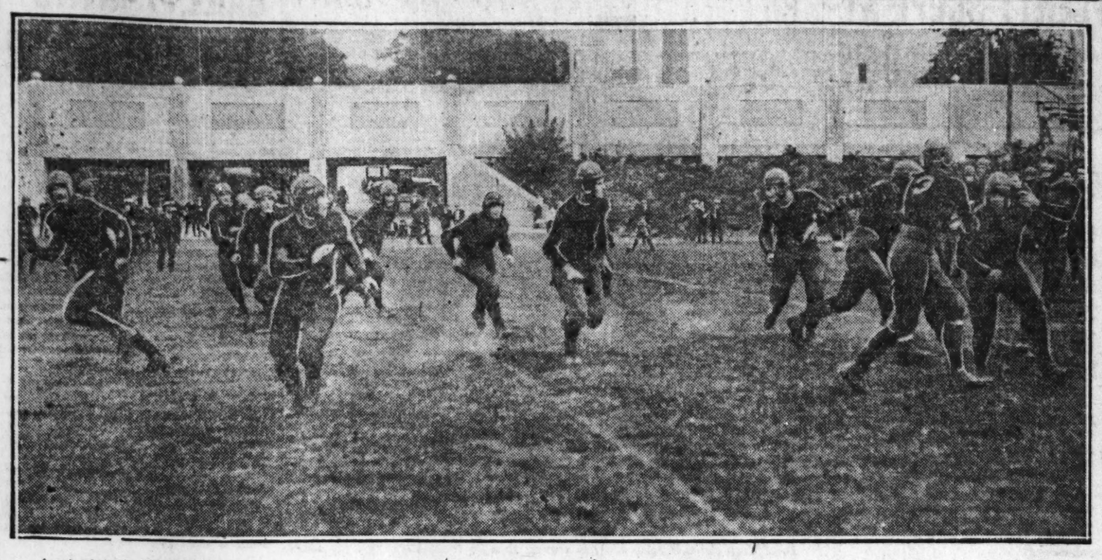
Pittsburgh Overwhelms U. of Cincinnati, 37-0

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 30.—Displaying a versatile attack, Pittsburgh overwhelmed University of Cincinnati here today, 37 to 0. Glenn Warner's proteges scored touchdowns at will, but were weak in kicking goals. The Panthers' line was impenetrable. In the last quarter Pitt scored a touchdown on a 50 yard run by Bohlen, substitute right half back.

HAWKEYES GET READY FOR YALE



Anybody's ball. The football in midair as a result of a forward pass in scrimmage between Iowa university grid squads at Iowa City. The Hawkeyes are confident of a winning battle with Yale at New Haven Oct 14, and are also out to repeat their 1921 capture of the conference title. According to Walter Eckersall, Iowa has an excellent chance to achieve both aims. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

Upon the broad shoulders of John Heldt rests much of the hopes for another football championship for the University of Iowa on the gridiron this fall. Heldt, veteran of last year's title winning team, plays at center, where his accurate passing and aggressiveness are big assets in the Hawkeyes' line.

Capt. Gordon Locke, brilliant full back and leader of the Iowa team. He is one of the greatest line plungers in western conference football.

V. C. Shuttleworth played splendid football on the University of Iowa eleven last fall. He is showing better form right now than ever.

DE PAUL BOWS TO LAKE FOREST, 12-6

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

A blocked kick in the second half by Sherry enabled Lake Forest to defeat De Paul yesterday on the latter's gridiron, 12 to 6. Both teams attempted to add the extra points after touchdowns by field goals, but the attempts were dismal failures.

Both played ragged football at times, while at others each displayed a smooth working offense. The hot weather, combined with the dusty gridiron, proved a big handicap, and players did not display much aggressiveness in the last two quarters, although De Paul had the better of the play, and in the last period outplayed the visitors.

De Paul Scores First.

De Paul was first to score, when Herman, left half, intercepted a forward pass on his ten yard line and ran ninety yards for a touchdown in the opening period. Lake Forest came back with a rush, and after taking the ball down the field by rushes and a sweeping end run by Jackson, negotiated a forward pass over the goal line. Capt. Jackson caught the oval a yard behind the line.

After these scores the teams battled along on fairly even terms. Lake Forest, by use of long forward passes, took the ball to the locals' 10 yard line, but lost it on down on De Paul's 1 yard line. At this point Doyle's punt was blocked, and Sherry dropped on it back of the goal for the North Shore team's second touchdown.

Haggerty's Men Fight Hard.

Coach Haggerty's team then made a gallant uphill fight, and all through the fourth quarter threatened to score. Lineup:

NORTHWESTERN VARSITY PLOWS THROUGH FROSH

A lone field goal, kicked from the 25 yard line by Alva Graham, Purple half back recruit from Butler college, was the only score Coach Ole Magnuson's Northwestern university freshmen team could make against three powerful varsity elevens in an hour's struggle on the Evanston field yesterday afternoon, the regulars totaling six touchdowns and a field goal from the toe of Henry Penfield.

Norman Ross, swimming star, did notable service on one end for the freshies and Otto Henry of De Paul academy handled the pigskin at center.

The varsity backfield, whipped into shape after a week of tough drills, gained at will, Paterson, Palmer, McElwain, Rembe, Weinecke, Blythe, Kelly and Wolfe making the longest gains. The line work was poor, both on offensive and defensive, with Banner of the freshmen at one time crashing through for 35 yards.

Coach Thistlethwaite, despite the drubbing given the freshmen, is dissatisfied with the power of his team.

FOOTBALL CAMPS

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—The first two varsity teams scored 26 points against the pick of Arnold Oss' scrubs and third stringers in a real football game on Northrop field this afternoon. Coach Spaulding gave every candidate on the varsity squad a chance. The coaches stopped play often to point out mistakes of the athletes. Peterson, a half back candidate, showed form that may put him on the first team for the opening game. He tore big holes in the third string line and looked good on defense. Hutkranz made a spectacular 40 yard run for a touchdown after intercepting a forward pass.

AT MICHIGAN.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—The varsity and the reserves held a spirited scrimmage this afternoon in which the reserves held the first string men scoreless during the first half. In the second half the varsity put over two touchdowns. Steger scored the initial touchdown on an end run, kicking goal. Glaring weaknesses were brought out in the varsity forward wall. Kirk and Nelsch, ends; Muirhead and Vandervert, tackles; Rosatt and Chamberlain, guards; Slaughter, center; Knode, quarter back; Steger and Keefer, half backs; Roby, full back. Numerous substitutions were made during the course of the scrimmage.

NOTRE DAME WINS, 46-0, OVER KAZOO

Notre Dame, Ind., Sept. 30.—[Special.]—Paul Castner ran through the entire Kalamazoo college team for two touchdowns here today for the feature plays of Notre Dame's 46-0 victory. The runs were for ninety and ninety-five yards. Coach Rockne used three teams in the game. Crowley, Don Miller, Maher, Layden, and Kane, newcomers, contributed flashy runs through the Kalamazoo team. Lieb and Capt. Carberry featured on defensive.

The Kalamazoo offense was powerless with the exception of a period in the second quarter when the teachers completed five short passes for two of their three first downs. Knight and Spurgeon were strong on the defense Voorhees, Black and Vroeg figured in the passing flurry.

Notre Dame used a straight running attack and attempted but one pass, a thirty yard heave, Kane to Coughlin, at the end of the game. Aside from the brilliant runring of Castner and the long dashes of Crowley, Layden and Kane, the Notre Dame offense seemed clogged. Lineup:

Berry was taken to a local hospital. His home is in Prairie du Chien, Wis.

O'Connell and Murtan, Chicago boys who were products of Loyola academy, were the only Campion players to last out the contest.

HARRISON TECH AND OAK PARKS DIVIDE 2 GAMES

The elevens of Oak Park high and Horrison Tech divided honors at Oak Park yesterday, the city lightweights defeating the villagers, 13 to 0, in the first game, while the suburban heavyweights easily quelled the big boys from the City league, 10 to 0.

FRANK WINTERS. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

It was the first game of the season for all the teams, and they showed poor form, the backfields handling the ball clumsily and the lines putting up ragged fronts. In the major conflict, Earl Drechsler, Oak Park, was the outstanding player. His kicks and punts were all gotten away in good time and for good distances. He kicked goal following Gordon's touchdown in the second quarter, and later, booted a place kick for three points.

Gordon Scores Touchdown.

Gordon secured his six points when he held Geissler's pass and dropped over the goal line. Hirschberger for the Tech men did some good tackling when the Oak Parkers returned the offensive boots of the Chicagoans.

In the final minutes, Harrison worked hard and successfully with an aerial attack against the suburbanites. McFatridge was responsible for completing several long distance passes, Cushna and Hirschberger making good catches for from ten to thirty yard gains. The rally was unsuccessful.

In the lightweight battle Harrison crew used its well developed passing attack to good advantage. Jack Katz scored a touchdown in the first quarter, making an open field run for forty yards.

Katz in Long Gain.

In the second Katz again found a hole for a twenty yard romp. With only one yard to go the Tech man again put the ball across the line. H. Thompson kicked the goal. Lineup:

MITCHELL TIES DIEGEL FOR GOLF TITLE OF SOUTH

LEO DIEGEL.

Nashville, Tenn., Sept. 30.—[By Associated Press.]—Seventy-two holes of record-breaking playing by sixty-four of America's premier golfers over the Belle-meade Country club course here today left the title of open champion of the south hanging in the balance, with Leo Diegel of New Orleans, and Abe Mitchell of England, standing at the top of the list in a tie for first honors, each with a score of 280, four strokes under par.

Starting out with a 74 for his first qualifying round of 18 holes on Thursday, Diegel found himself far down the list. He set out yesterday, however, with a determination that carried him through the qualifying 36 holes with flying colors when he covered the course in 68, three strokes under par. Encouraged by his improved game, the young Crescent City player came back today and gathered in two more record smashing rounds of 69 strokes each.

Mitchell in Good Start.

Abe Mitchell who had made a good getaway with 68-69-137, which put him one stroke ahead of the field, also went into the final day's struggle with a good start, turning in another 69. The powerfully built Briton weakened on the final round, though, and duplicated Diegel's opening round score of 74, much of his trouble coming from a putter that refused to work accurately in the pinches.

Bob Cruikshank, whose sixty-six in the first qualifying round gave him top position on the record sheets, failed badly on his three remaining rounds, finishing well down in the list of the leading twelve.

Barnes Ties for Third.

Jim Barnes, playing golf free of spectacular features reached his position in a tie with French for third place in four steady rounds of 70-69-72-72, two under par. The scores of those who completed the seventy-two holes follows:

GOLFERS HAVE PLENTY SCOPE AT NEW EDGEBROOK

HOLE-IN-ONE CLUB

STILL they come. Playing in three some at Beverly, T. V. Aaron made the 17th hole, 216 yards, in a single stroke. His companions were G. L. Cleveland and Dr. N. O. Rogers.

They have a lot of good golfers in Highland Park but C. C. Elwell joined the honor list yesterday by getting an ace on the 70 yard seventh at the Community club. He turned the trick with a mashie. F. Phinney and H. H. Neehan were his partners. Highland Park Press please copy.

The fifth hole at the Edgebrook Forest Preserve course was made yesterday by W. Vance from the tee. It measures 110 yards, the drive being over the river.

Following a good drive, F. W. Brummell holed his midiron shot for an eagle 2 at the twelfth hole at Edgewater. The distance is 410 yards.

BY JOE DAVIS.

It was like moving from a five room flat into a ten room house. This was the sentiment expressed by the 1,000 golfers who turned out yesterday afternoon for the opening of the second nine holes of the Forest Preserve course at Edgebrook.

The change from paddling around a nine hole course with somewhat narrow fairways to one of eighteen holes with plenty of scope for pulling and slicing, was a welcome change to the golfers of the northwest side. The new nine holes were voted a big success as they present a fine variety of play and the putting greens were in much better condition than the players expected to find them.

Commissioners on Job.

Commissioners G. A. Miller, Robert W. McKinlay, W. H. MacLean, and F. W. Penfield, and R. F. Kennicott, chief forester, assisted in the opening ceremonies, all expressing themselves in favor of etablishing more courses on the Forest Preserve.

Commissioner McKinlay drove the first ball, his companions in the initial foursome being A. T. Packard, Andrew Ross, president of the Edgebrook Golf club, and Jim Hewitson, the professional in charge of the course. Commissioner Penfield, who is a member of the Skokie club, led the officials with a card of 86, which was a fine performance over the new course.

Just as the shades of night were falling, William Vance, formerly of Park Ridge and La Porte reported with a record score of 67 for the 5,315 yard course, cutting two strokes under par.

Vance's Performance Features.

The feature of Vance's performance was a single at the fifth hole, 110 yards. He made every other hole on the outgoing nine in par and started the incoming round with a birdie 27. His card and the figures were as follows:

Out	4	4	4	4	1	4	3	4	4—32
Par	4	4	4	4	3	4	3	4	4—34
In	2	4	4	5	4	5	4	3	4—35—67
Par	3	4	4	4	4	4	4	3	4—35—69

Another good score was the 81 made by A. Vogtritter, the scratch man of the Edgebrook Golf club. Owen O'Malley, former commissioner, and Ransom F. Kennicott were among those who assisted in making the opening a success.

Commissioner McKinlay announced that the opening of the new shelter at the Palos park course had been moved forward one day, and will be held next Sunday at 1 o'clock, when four of Chicago's leading players will give an exhibition match.

Evanston Golfers Busy.

A proposition by Evanston golfers to finance a new course on the forest preserve at Harm's Timber road and Emerson street has passed the public service committee and will come before the forest preserve commission tomorrow afternoon for final approval. The proposed new course is located not far from the Glen View club.

Extremes Meet In the Hupmobile

Others who can gratify any desire, prefer the Hupmobile because of its dashing appearance and its brilliant, reliable performance.

Both are right. The Hupmobile costs less to keep and to operate than many cars whose first-appeal is price.

Everyone admires the Hupmobile's fast, easy get away, its remarkable flexibility, its power

Milwaukee, Wis., Sept. 30.—John Weissmuller, swimming star, slashed three world's records in the Milwaukee Athletic club tank here today. He swam 500 meters in 6:25 4-5, cutting the world record formerly held by Borg, Sweden, by eight seconds. In the 400 and 440 yard swims he shattered his own record, making the 400 in 4:40 2-5 and the 440 in 5:07 2-5, a second faster than his previous world's record.

MAUPOME TO START PRACTICE TOMORROW

BY JOE DAVIS.

Pierre Maupome, the Mexican cushion expert, will represent the Mussey Jackson boulevard room in the National Championship Interstate Three Cushion league this winter. Maupome, who last represented Milwaukee, has won the league championship twice. The league will open its season Oct. 16. There are sixteen franchises.

Maupome will start practicing for the tournament tomorrow, when he will meet C. Woodyat in a 100 point match, fifty being played in the afternoon at 4 o'clock and fifty at night. The room is located at 10 West Jackson boulevard.

Cochran to Play Here.

Welker Cochran, who is en route for New York to compete in the 18-2 international tournament next month, will remain here a few days. He will start an exhibition game with Dave McAndless at Mussey's Madison street room. They will play 400 points starting at 8:30.

The Bensinger-Mussey class A three cushion tournament has been organized with twelve players who will compete in the six rooms operated by the Mussey and Bensinger houses. Play will start Oct. 9.

Charles "Cowboy" Weston, former world's pocket champion, who will represent the Madison Square room, Cicero avenue and Madison street, in the Chicago Billiard league, will meet all comers there this week at three cushion and pocket billiards.

Foresee Busy Year.

The Illinois Billiard association is preparing for its busiest year and has sent out entry blanks to the state amateurs calling attention to its fourth season's tournaments at pocket, three cushion and 18-2 balk line billiards. Entries to the pocket billiard tournament must be closed before Oct. 20.

The district tournaments will be held from Oct. 23 to 31. The state semi-finals will take place in Chicago Nov. 6 to 11, and the finals Nov. 20, 21 and 22.

The next challenge match for the Illinois amateur championship at 18-2 balk line billiards will take place on Oct. 10, 11, and 12 in Schelling's room, 950 Wrightwood avenue, with Robert Campbell, the present champion, facing Edwin D. Martin, former state champion.

They say in Austria that that country will next year send a great billiardist to play in the international 18-2 balk line tournament. The new comer will be John Bruno, who, according to recent Austrian reports, in a game at Vienna recently averaged 100 in a 500 point game at 18-2 balk line billiards.

Erich Hagenlacher, the German champion at billiards, who has just arrived in New York with his bride, has already surprised the natives there with his wonderful playing. Hagenlacher has an advantage over other billiardists in that he is ambidextrous, being able to make any kind of a shot with either hand.

GEORGES PLANS COMEBACK AFTER SIKI BEATING

PARIS, Sept. 30.—"Now I am ready to begin again in a few months, for I am far from giving up boxing," said Georges Carpentier in an interview published this morning in Le Journal regarding his defeat last Sunday by Battling Siki.

"What has happened to me has made me want all the more to box as often as possible, and to win. It is not the first time I have lost a match. It was my own fault that I was beaten. Deschamps admitted it yesterday at the meeting of the boxing federation, where, contrary to what was announced, he filed no claims.

"What I have to do now is to wipe out that defeat by a new series of victories. I propose, first of all, to take a good month's rest and then take up physical culture before beginning to train again."

Dempsey Ends Hunt; Ready to Meet Siki

New York, Sept. 30.—Jack Dempsey was back today from a hunting trip in the Maine woods, where he bagged, among other game, a 700 pound moose. Dempsey pronounced himself fit and ready to meet Battling Siki or any other rival. He plans to resume exhibition work after a week's rest. He is scheduled to box in Boston Oct. 7 and in Toronto Oct. 9.

Ira Vail Shatters Two World's Auto Records

Allentown, Pa., Sept. 30.—Ira Vail broke two worlds records at the Lehighton fair automobile races under A. A. A. supervision today. He circled the half mile oval in :29 3-5 seconds and the double lap in :59 2-5 for the new mile time.

Woods and Waters by BOB BECKER

THE United States department of agriculture has issued the following bulletin of information to those who intend hunting trips:

"All persons contemplating hunting in any state or territory in the United States or in Canada, are advised by the United States department of agriculture to obtain from the state game commissioner of that state or territory the full text of its game laws.

"A summary of the provisions of federal, state, and provincial statutes, and a list of officials from whom copies of state game laws may be obtained, is contained in Farmers' Bulletin 1288, Game Laws for 1922, by George A. Lawyer, chief United States game warden, and Frank L. Earnshaw. The bulletin is available free upon application to the United States department of agriculture, Washington, D. C.

"The object of the bulletin is to aid in the administration of the provisions of the migratory bird treaty act and the Lacey act, by presenting in convenient form the provisions of game legislation for the use of law enforcement officials, sportsmen, conservationists, and others.

"It is only by observing the open season dates published in the bulletin that hunters of migratory game birds can avoid violating either federal or state laws, as the federal regulations operate in many cases to shorten the seasons fixed by state statute."

State Commission Wages New War on Reckless Driving

Enforcement of Railroad Crossing "Stop" Law Urged.

BY J. L. JENKINS.

THE average motorist uses less care in sending his car across forty feet of deadly steel rails than he does in entering or crossing any boulevard in Chicago. The one practical method of halting reckless driving at railroad crossings is to compel a full stop before any automobile may enter the danger zone at Illinois grade crossings.

This conclusion was reached by more than a score of state authorities who attended the grade crossing conferences held by the Illinois commerce commission in Springfield recently when they learned that more than half of the people who drive automobiles in the state cross railroad tracks without observing the simplest of safety laws.

Of 306,309 vehicles whose progress was observed at three dangerous railroad crossings during an eight hour period, the commission was told, the drivers of only 62,829 cars looked in both directions before crossing. A total of 156,607 drivers passed without any attempt to learn whether or not a train was approaching, and 26,453 crossed at a speed of more than twenty miles an hour.

"City ordinances provide that every car operated in Chicago shall come to a full stop before entering or crossing a boulevard or through traffic street," one of the railroad officials pointed out. "All but a very few Chicago drivers observe this simple rule unconsciously and as a matter of course now. It has ceased to be a driving hardship, but it undoubtedly prevents more than a hundred bad collisions every day. A like habit could be formed to solve the railroad grade crossing problem if the 'stop law' designed for hazardous crossings in the state were enforced."

The commission has already designated which railroad crossings in the state are "extra hazardous," and has provided for the erection of danger and stop signals at those not already provided for. Enforcement of the stop regulations became generally unpopular some time ago, when several village constables and justices took advantage of the law to make unnecessary arrests.

Scores of suggestions for relief of the railroad crossing death toll were made to the commission during its session. A representative of one electric line urged the examination of all motorists and the issuance of driving licenses to only those mentally and physically qualified to observe public safety laws. Frank L. Smith, chairman of the commission, discarded this suggestion as beyond the power of his body.

Harry Bell, secretary of the Chicago Safety council, who represented local civic bodies at the conference, recommended the removal of all obstructions to the view at Illinois crossings as the first essential step in the general campaign. He pointed out that carelessness and reckless driving at railroad crossings costs the lives of 1,800 people every year. Education of the public through the safety propaganda this year, he said, has reduced crossing fatalities in Chicago from nine in 1921 to four in a similar two months' period this year.

Resolutions adopted by the commission pledged its assistance "in any manner possible to bring about elimination of accidents at grade crossings and dangerous highway corners, by raising highway grades the width of their right of way, eliminating all barriers such as hedges, sign boards, and other obstacles to the public view." The commission also urged highway officials throughout Illinois to promote railroad safety propaganda.

Boost Grant Highway.

Petitions signed by the members of the Grand Army of the Republic and American Legion, farmers, and business and professional men of Galena and Jo Daviess county are to be presented to Gov. Small and the state highway commission.

The signers petition Gov. Small and the commission to survey and locate the state highway known as bond issue No. 5 from Elizabeth to Galena, thence west to East Dubuque, this route to connect at Galena with Bouthillier street, which passes the Illinois Grant Memorial home and Grant park. It also is asked that this road from Chicago to East Dubuque shall, upon its completion, be named officially the Grant highway.

The citizens of Galena are planning to procure land adjoining this memorial home for a tourist park, thus to accommodate the thousands of tourists who visit the Grant home annually.

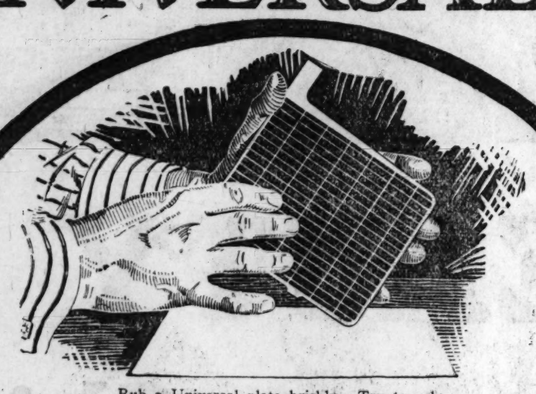
Ford Statement Shows $6,000,000 Monthly Profits

THE continuous flow of cash into the coffers of Henry Ford promises to increase steadily in the months to come. About one year ago the financial interests of the east were daily expecting a request from the auto king for a loan of gigantic size. But weeks and months passed and he made no such request.

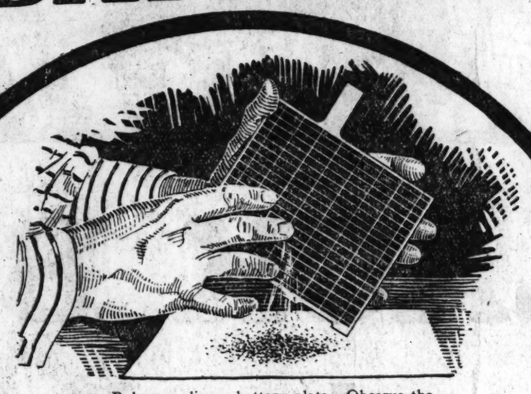
In a statement this week Mr. Ford announced that his profits for the last year were approximately $6,000,000 a month, or $72,000,000 for the year. He added that he hoped the coming year would be a better one and that he would make more cars.

To this hope Ford added an announcement that he has set a new production mark for his plants to aim at in 1923 which will put hundreds of thousands more cars on the market than in any previous year. The foremen already have been ordered to speed up production and, if necessary, install additional machinery with a view to producing an average of 6,000 cars per day by April 1 of next year.

UNIVERSAL BATTERIES



Rub a Universal plate briskly. Try to rub away its body. Not even a speck of dust on the white paper below. Long life is sure.



Rub an ordinary battery plate. Observe the dust that falls on the paper—the substance of the plate crumbling away. Short life is certain.

Universal Plates Are Hard—Hence, Long-Lived

Batteries for Automobile Farm Light Electric Vehicle Radio

Test plate hardness to know battery life. Rub a Universal plate—not a fleck of dust. Rub an ordinary plate—thickly sprinkled dust shows its softness.

It took 20 years' experience and 521 experiments to assure Universal plates their long-life-giving hardness. Thus we developed our secret mixture of red and yellow oxides, forming the body of the plate. So vital this exact proportion that a variation of 6% may mean a 40% difference in the life of a plate.

And to give added hardness, Universal plates are hand-pasted—the mixture pressed tightly, firmly, smoothly into the grid. It is then stiffened to an almost concrete hardness by long, mild drying.

All battery plates gradually crumble away, due to chemical changes caused by charging and discharging. The harder the plate, the longer it resists decay. Hence our patient research and experimenting to assure to Universal plates super-hardness.

Yet, hard as is this secret mixture, it retains that porosity necessary to a highly efficient plate. Test a Universal plate with drops of water. They are absorbed with blotter-like swiftness. This means quick, unresisting action with the acid in the battery. More porosity means more plate surface exposed to the acid. Hence, Universal plates are extra-porous to give topnotch efficiency—extra-hard to give long life.

Charge for Service—the Square Deal Originated by Universal.

Every Universal Service Station is authorized to charge 15 cents for flushing a battery and taking hydrometer reading—25 cents for flushing, hydrometer reading, and voltage test. No tips accepted. It's a square deal for the car owner—a necessity for the battery man who wants to deal squarely. Every car owner ought to welcome and push this horse-sense principle. Pay for what you get—get what you pay for.

Mr. Battery Man! Is Your Town on This List?

Put it there by becoming a Universal dealer. Don't give away your employe's time in free service, hoping to make your money out of new battery sales. It's poor business. Make your place a Universal station. As a Universal dealer you have the best foundation for a larger business and the best battery service in the world to back you up. And remember, we make all parts for all makes of batteries. Write for proposition.

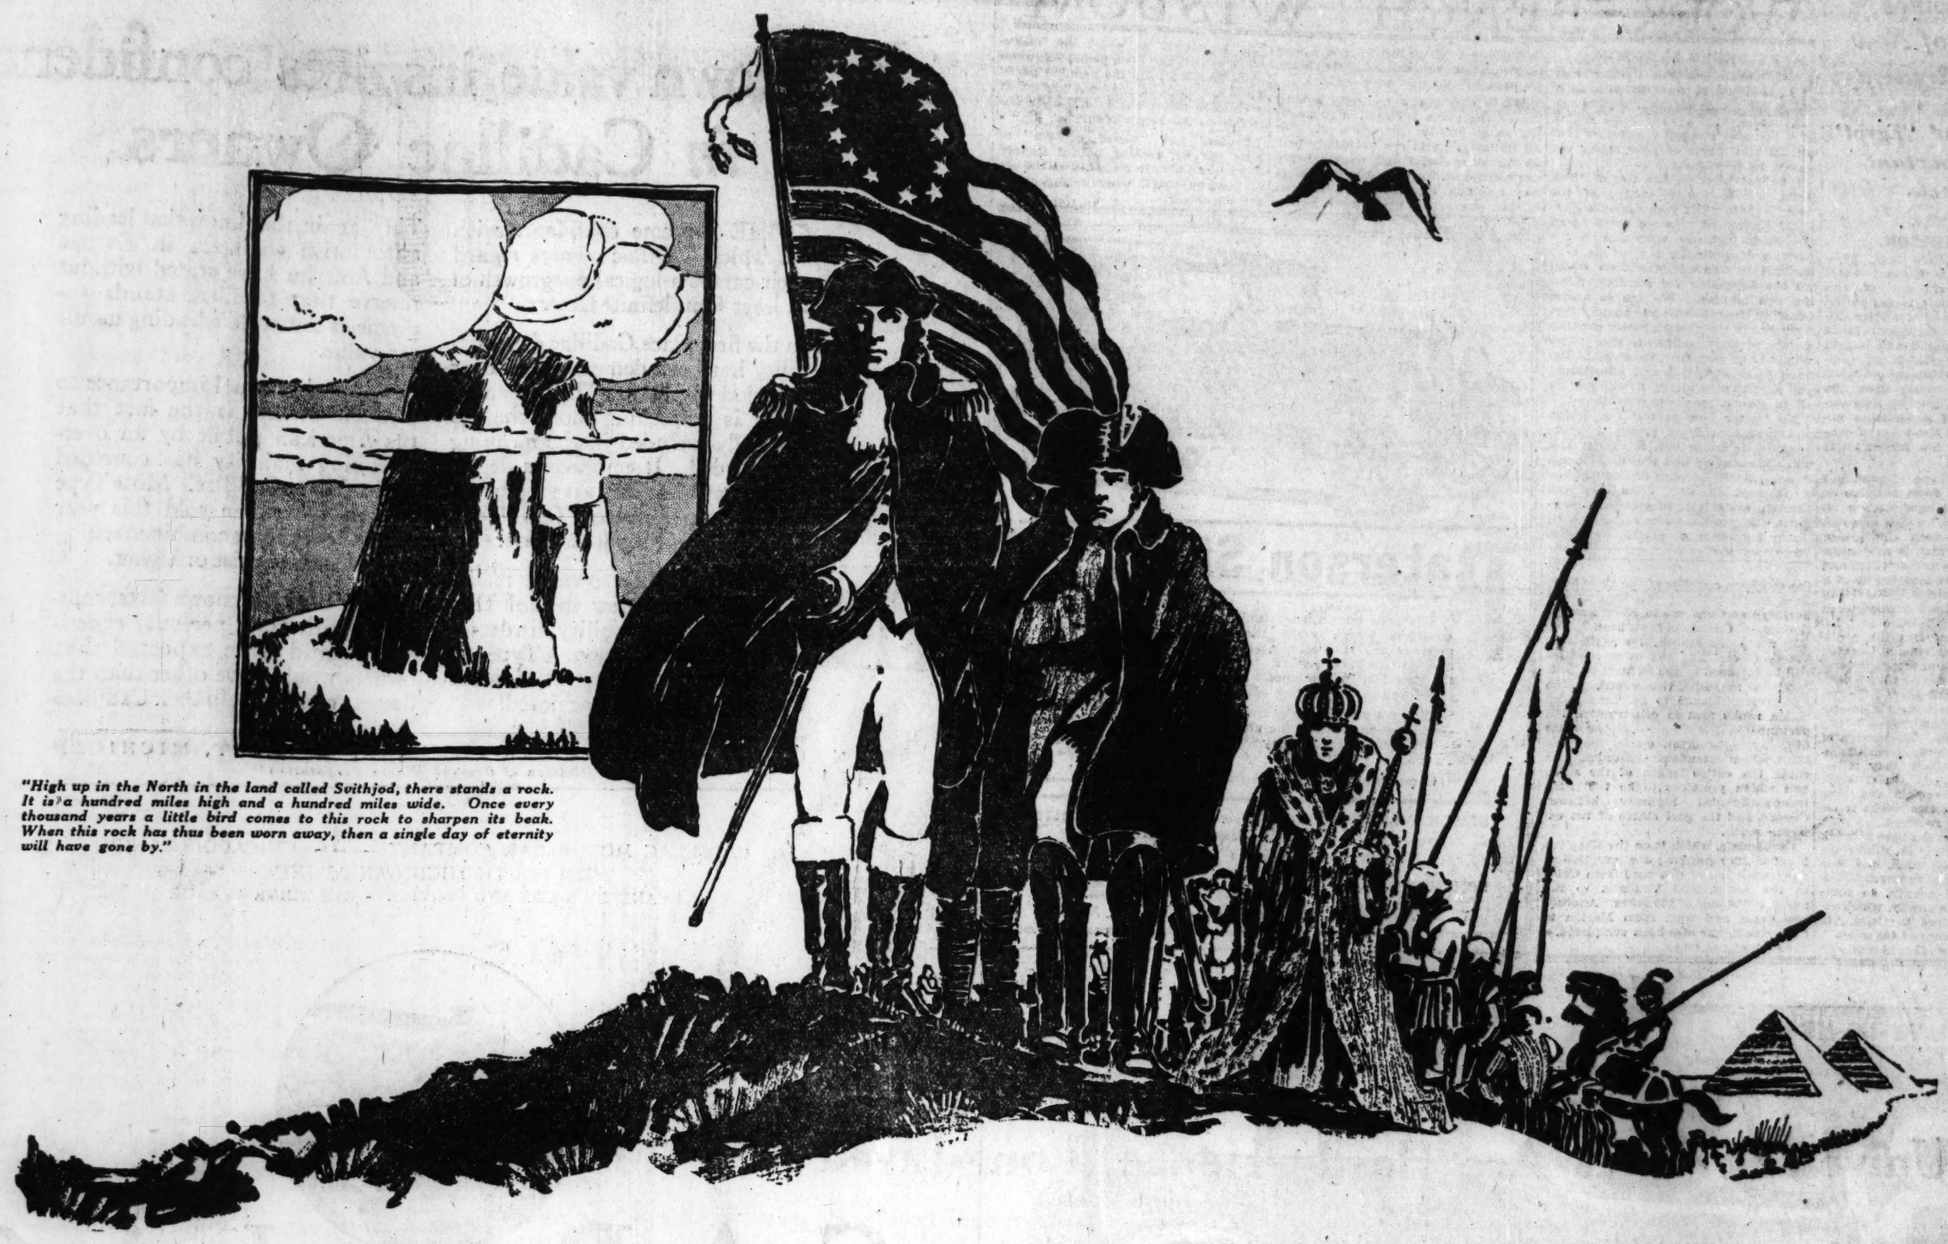
SOME DESIRABLE TERRITORY STILL OPEN
LIBERAL DEALER PROPOSITION



"High up in the North in the land called Svithjod, there stands a rock. It is a hundred miles high and a hundred miles wide. Once every thousand years a little bird comes to this rock to sharpen its beak. When this rock has thus been worn away, then a single day of eternity will have gone by."

"The Story of Mankind"

By HENDRIK VAN LOON

Starts in The Evening American, Tomorrow, Monday

THIS remarkable story makes history move before you as vivid as a procession in the street . . . there, in a group, Alexander, Charlemagne, Washington, Bonaparte . . . there, the Sumerians, writing lazily with nails; in dramatic contrast, the Bastille totters in a heap . . . float after float depicts, in simple Van Loon outline, all the epochs of thousands of years . . . bands blare forth the achievements of proud and ancient nations . . . as they pass from view . . . at length, the pageant fades out, and all too swiftly you have come to the end of "The Story of Mankind."

"Van Loon knows how to tell the tale of history in a manner so simple, readable, interesting and even fascinating that the reader is loath to lay down the book unfinished as he would put aside a detective yarn, a good Western story or Poe's 'The Purloined Letter.'"

—Philadelphia Public Ledger

Different from any other history written, this story tells you about yourself and your relation to the rest of the world. Prof. Charles A. Beard says: "Fathers and mothers who wonder best how to equip their children to fight the powers of folly and darkness will find Mr. Van Loon a far safer guide than Mr. Wells. He knows a thousand times more history and writes with as much taste and more humor. "The Story of Mankind" is the most important contribution to juvenile literature in a decade, but fathers will enjoy it as much as children. This extraordinary story tells the romance of history in a manner that old and young will not soon forget.

Hitherto this book has been available only in a FIVE DOLLAR VOLUME, of which nearly 50,000 copies have been sold in a few months. You can read it every day for THREE CENTS in the Evening American. Every member of the family will find this fascinating story well worth reading. With the publication of this story there will be a great demand for extra copies of the American; those who are not regular readers, if they wish to get the complete installments of "The Story of Mankind," should place their orders now with the carrier who supplies the newspapers at their homes or call Franklin 4900. State Welcomes Opening of New Paved Highways

Corn Belt and "Egypt" Rush Important Contracts.

BY E. E. PIERSON.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Sept. 30.—[Special Correspondence.]—Platt county, although one of the smallest in Illinois, is setting the pace for the larger and wealthier districts in hard road construction. Made up of villages, its capital and largest municipality, Monticello, being composed of only a few thousands inhabitants and depending largely upon the farmers to pay the cost of improvements, the board of supervisors annually provides for a few miles of concrete road, and now has fifteen to its credit.

A stretch of this type of road has just been completed from Milmine as a lateral to the state bond issue road, known as "Route 10," which has just been completed between Champaign and Danville, and which is now nearing completion between Champaign and Decatur. The county also boasts of a stretch of brick pavement on the Ocean to Ocean highway, from Atwood west.

The completion of "Route 10," between Champaign and Danville, a distance of thirty miles, was celebrated by the two cities with appropriate ceremonies. C. A. Kiler delivered the dedicatory address, a band played the national anthem, and then the last barrier was removed and the highway officially thrown open to traffic. The stretch of this across state highway, from Champaign to Decatur, about forty miles, will be completed early in October. Less than four miles remain, and these will be completed in two weeks if cement shipments are received.

The contractor who has been at work between Cerro Gordo and Monticello, a distance of fourteen miles, has completed his contract and removed to Minonk, in Woodford county, to commence the Meridian highway, which extends from Rockford to Cairo, via Bloomington, a distance of 400 miles.

Sections of the Meridian highway in the southern counties of the state have been completed and the central and northern sections are to receive attention next. Contracts have been let for this route in Macon, De Witt, and Woodford counties, and other counties will be included in the lettings of 1923. Next to the Illini boulevard, which runs from Chicago to St. Louis, and which ranks first in construction importance in the opinion of the state highway department, comes the Meridian, which extends straight north and south the entire length of the state, and which promises to be the great transcontinental highway between Canada and the gulf states of the extreme south.

Carbondale, which is on the Meridian highway, is arranging a celebration of the completion of this road from Cairo to the south, and Vandalia to the north, a distance of 100 miles. Another road, east and west from Marion to Carbondale, has also been completed, a distance of ten miles.

WORK-BENCH WISDOM

BY PETER SAMPSON.

YOU see to it that the locks on the doors of your dwelling fully protect your family and your valuables, but, by the same token, have you ever stopped to consider that certain vital parts of your motor car should be portected?

I do not refer to the use of theft locks, but to the protection of the "nerve centers" of your car—the electrical equipment. As we speed along the open highway with our motor purring contentedly, few of us give thought to this equipment on which we are depending for starting, lighting and ignition. We are so accustomed to the reliable and constant performance of the present motor car that we are perhaps inclined to give it less thought and care than we should. Refined in construction and adjustment and sensitive to abuse, it will pay us all to give it more consideration.

No matter how perfect the design and workmanship of electrical equipment on a motor car, it cannot and will not stand up and give continuously satisfactory account of itself unless it is kept in first class condition through systematic inspection, adjustment, and genuine parts replacements.

Any discussion of electrical systems is incomplete if we fail to realize why only genuine replacement parts should be used by motorist and dealer.

If the question were solely a matter of the parts themselves it would not be so bad for the motorist. Not all imitation parts are uniformly bad, as far as material and workmanship are concerned. They do, however, have the common characteristics of not having passed the same rigid inspection standards to which the manufacturer of the complete electrical equipment subjects the genuine parts. They are made to sell—not always at a cheaper price; but at a longer discount—to the repair man.

Protect the "nerve centers" of your car by seeking official factory service and always insisting on the use of genuine parts, when replacements are necessary.

Closed Car Luxury Unsurpassed

The 1923 Six Cylinder Seven Passenger Sedan—$2195

A dignified beauty and richness unexcelled by any closed car mark the new Buick seven passenger sedan.

Lengthening the body, lowering the top and raising both hood and radiator have improved the streamline appearance made possible by the long wheel base, and added attractiveness has been given by the handsome nickeled drum-type head and cowl lamps.

The roomy Fisher built body is furnished in rich plush. Deep cushioned seats for five with two comfortable folding chairs accommodate seven grown persons with ample room for everyone.

The chassis has been improved materially and its easy riding qualities heightened by a new rear spring suspension. In the famous Buick Valve-in-Head engine changes also have been made to increase its dependable performance.

In every detail of body, chassis and power plant, this Sedan has no superiors among closed cars of even greater price.

Pressure Lubrication of Bearings

The center main bearings of the Buick Valve-in-Head engine are lubricated by oil under a constant pressure from a gear pump, insuring a film of oil at all times between the wearing surfaces. The pump also forces a volume of oil directly into the crank case at each connecting rod pocket making certain perfect lubrication of these bearings also.

Its known value inspires confidence in Cadillac Owners

THE supreme confidence with which Cadillac owners regard their cars is a logical outgrowth of at least four definite factors.

In the first place, Cadillac dependability has been demonstrated over a period of years. This dependability is something more than is generally included in the meaning of the word. It embraces a degree of constant, unimpaired performance that has placed Cadillac in a distinct and separate class.

Secondly, Cadillac owners realize that in every new model this Cadillac dependability finds an even fuller expression. Type 61 represents the highest attainment Cadillac has thus far achieved.

Then, again, they know that leading automotive engineers in Europe and America have stated without reserve that Cadillac stands supreme as the world's leading motor car value.

Lastly and of equal importance to Cadillac owners is the fact that the American public by an overwhelming majority has conceded leadership to Cadillac. More Type 61 cars have been sold this year than all other cars combined selling at the Cadillac price or higher.

In view of these known facts, combined with their personal experience, could it be expected that owners would have other than the deepest confidence in their Cadillacs

The Tribune will pay $5 each for questions which are accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send in your name and address with your question to "The Inquiring Reporter, Chicago Tribune." No questions will be returned. For today's question Miss Anna Alm, 4923 North Troy street, Chicago, was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you plan to drive your car all winter?

Where Asked.

Grant Park garage, foot of Monroe street.

The Answers.

David Levinson, 3445 West Adams street, sales manager.—I have a touring car for the summer, and a closed car for the winter. I enjoyed winter driving last year, and see no reason why I shouldn't find it equally enjoyable this season. With all the comforts in the world inclosed—heater, blankets, and all that—winter driving has many novelties.

Mrs. George Henrici, 1430 Norwood street.—I have been driving for eight or ten years, and I can find no pleasure in driving a car in winter. I use it only for convenience, as a necessity, but there is no pleasure in it. Ours is an open car, but if it were a closed car I wouldn't want to drive around the city in winter—it's too dangerous.

Dr. L. P. Basford, Momence, Ill., dentist.—I don't mind driving in the winter. I have an open car, and keep the top down as much as possible, except in extremely cold weather. I don't like to be cooped up in a closed car. I'd rather wrap up warmly and drive in an open car with the wind and the snow whisting past me.

Mrs. C. A. Fink, 445 Beacon street.—We rarely use our car during the winter except on professional business. Dr. Fink uses it—he has to—but there is no fun in it for me. Our diversions during the winter consist of attending theaters and the like instead of motoring.

C. V. Puttkamer, 521 Surf street, insurance broker. — I use my car principally for business. So it's on the go summer and winter, whether in sunshine or in rain, whether sweltering hot like a few weeks ago or in frigid cold, as may be the case a few weeks hence. My car is a time saver and a convenience the year around. Does that qualify as your fifth answer, as you say? Good.

American Ace to View European Auto Shows

CAPT. E. V. RICKENBACKER and his bride have arrived at Cherbourg, France, on the White Star liner Majestic on the first stage of their honeymoon journey, which will take in numerous countries in Europe, according to information received at his factory.

After establishing a permanent headquarters at the Ritz-Carlton hotel in Paris, the famous birdman will go immediately to the Berlin automobile show, where he will view the latest creations of the German master craftsman. Reports are to the effect that the Germans have some decidedly new ideas in motor construction and it is to get first hand information that the Detroit automobile manufacturer will attend the big exhibition in Berlin.

After the Berlin show Rickenbacker will return to Paris to be present at the French automobile show, which will be held Oct. 4 to 15. Later he will attend the London exhibit of England's best and in this way will return to America with the latest international viewpoint of the best mechanical developments on the two continents.

Rickenbacker and his bride will visit France, Germany, England, Austria, Italy, Egypt, Greece, Switzerland, and Turkey on their honeymoon and in each of these countries he plans to visit the leading automobile centers.

Motors Aid University

Motor vehicles are used for many agricultural purposes at the University of Missouri.

A runabout is used by field representatives of the department of entomology for nursery inspection. A delivery wagon and a runabout are employed by the horticultural department for handling orchard and garden products.

Three touring cars serve the college of agriculture in making soil surveys. A heavy truck is used for demonstration trips in the agricultural extension work. A runabout is provided for the superintendent of the hog cholera serum plant. Several additional cars and trucks are used for general purposes.

Use Old Material.

One of the most outstanding economies now being practiced in street and highway paving is found in the use of old vitrefied paving brick or old granite block in the reconstruction of pavements under which the artificial base has been disturbed.

JORDAN
Smashes Prices on Quality Closed Cars

(Effective Today)

Now you can buy the fascinating Jordan enclosed models at the same price as other open cars in the Jordan class.

It is easy enough to reduce prices if you cut the quality as well.

Cheap car builders have attempted that in the quantity field.

It is something vastly different to improve quality and reduce prices at the same time. But that is exactly what Jordan has done.

Open Car a Luxury

Jordan knew that the open car was becoming more and more of a luxury—because it could be used with satisfaction for only a part of the year.

The enclosed car is now a necessity — because it affords comfort and satisfaction all the year around.

Five years ago Jordan predicted the present tremendous output of cheap closed cars—adding that he would never build one in that class.

Jordan knew that women would not long endure lack of ventilation-control and good vision.

Enclosed body production was at that time limited.

Eventually a Jordan

And the mass of cheaper car owners had not been educated to the use of closed cars.

Then something happened.

Quantity producers began to build enclosed cars in volume. The public bought in volume.

The process of education began.

Today nearly everyone wants an enclosed car.

Some will be satisfied temporarily with the cheaper kind.

Some may continue to use the old fashioned high priced and bulky type.

But those admirable people who prefer less bulk with equal quality, ease of handling, real gas and tire mileage, rare beauty—in short economy with distinction—will choose the Jordan.

How Jordan Does It

Jordan closed car prices are astounding—of course—when you consider Jordan quality.

But it's just as easy to attain volume on a quality car as on a cheap one.

And volume makes low overhead—low overhead makes price.

That's the story.

A Shortage — of Course

We cannot hope to deliver the new enclosed models at the new prices as fast as they can be sold.

There will be some irritating delays—no doubt.

That is the little payment we must make for success and satisfaction.

But just do this—

Go into any Jordan salesroom. Compare the Jordan enclosed models with only the finest closed cars built.

Then ask the price.

October Brings Burst of Speed to Auto Plants

Railroads Call for Help in Moving Huge Output.

BY WHITCOMB WILLIAMS.

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 30.—[Special Correspondence.]—With coal and rail conditions rapidly becoming normal, and the Ford workmen, after being idle for a week, back at their jobs, there is every indication that the automobile industry has passed the crisis and that for many months to come the normal output of motor vehicles of all kinds is assured. The Ford motor plants reopened on less than one day's notice and the daily production of more than 5,000 cars began where it left off six days before.

Improved business conditions, higher wages to laborers, and the anticipation of good crops, have already had their reflection in the demand for motor vehicles. They lead to the conviction of a continued high output for several months at least, with a strong probability that it will not fall far behind the general average for the first eight months. In that period the total production was 1,671,418, as against 1,668,550 for the entire year of 1921.

Every indication is that next year will see an even greater output. Anticipating such a condition, enlarging of plants has already begun. While such additions in many cases, will be used to meet the increased demand for closed body types of cars, they will also be able to take care of the prospective demand for both open and closed models.

The production of trucks is also showing a steady, healthy increase and is continually proving more popular as a means of transportation for freight in all sections of the country. The present year is sure to be a satisfactory one from the viewpoint of truck manufacturers. In 1904 the total number of trucks made in this country was 411. If production continues as at present, there will have been more than 200,000 sold during the present year. The first year the industry passed the six figure mark was in 1917, when 128,157 trucks were made; in the following year, 227,250; in 1919 production jumped to 316,364, and in 1920 came the banner year, when the highest mark in the industry was reached with a total of 322,039. Last year saw a slump with but 154,550. The year 1923 is fully expected to be on a par with the output of 1920.

An idea of the congested condition in which practically every railroad entering Detroit finds itself in the handling of the automobile output, is the fact that President Alfred of the Pere Marquette has asked the interstate commerce commission to save the automobile industry and its workers. The request was made in the form of a suggestion for general effort on the part of all carriers to utilize to the fullest extent standard box cars for the handling of priorities so that any surplus will be in the shape of automobile cars that may be used for that industry for the moving of its product.

At present there are practically no cars for automobile use and unless suitable cars can be provided it will be necessary for the automobile concerns to curtail production. Manufacutrers are now obliged to drive away thousands of automobiles on their own wheels, which practice is not desired, since it often damages the cars and is practicable only for short distances. With the approach of the usual disagreeable autumn weather this practice, to a great extent will be discontinued.

During the present agreeable weather every trunk highway leading out of Detroit and other Michigan automobile centers is being utilized for the delivering of cars outside the state.

YOUNGEST MANUFACTURER

Clarence Sutcliffe of Aurora, Ill., found some gas pipe, salvaged a motorcycle engine and an old gocart. "Pardon me, madam, you are traveling at a rate of twenty-five miles an hour, which is in excess of the eighteen miles an hour allowed by law. It is my duty to see your operator's permit and give you a card directing you to post collateral at the nearest police station."

These are the words that Washington cops must content themselves with after chasing speeders. The new law forbids "bawling out" and insists that the tone of voice be courteous.

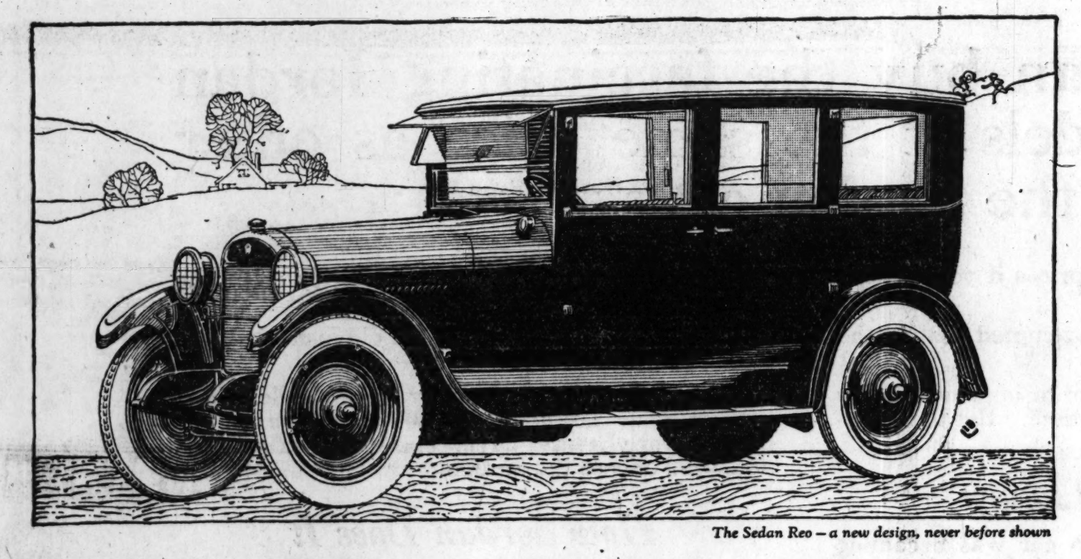
THE NEW SEDAN REO



The Sedan Reo—a new design, never before shown

Making $1885 yield their utmost in comfort, power, stability, comeliness and silence

It is a long, low, symmetrical craft, finished in quiet Cuban Gray or lustrous Brewster Green, with upholstery of dust-defeating brown, and fenders and steel wheels of black.

Even in swift motion it is luxuriously silent because of six special provisions for sound-prevention and absorption.

For the body's ease there are wonderfully pliant and untiring upholstery springs, deep cushions abundantly stuffed with curled hair, thick carpet anchor-fitted to the floor, and ample leg-and elbow-room for five.

For the crawls and spurts of Chicago traffic, for mud and snow in drives and lanes, for hills, and for speed on inviting roads, there are six Reo cylinders with featherweight pistons and remarkable giant intake valves.

For stability and endurance there is the Reo double chassis with its extra low-hung inner frame for the power plant, and the two-fold body with interior walls of cabinet-joined hardwood and outer walls of steel.

—and these also

The six special provisions to insure silence are: first, the top consists of a non-vibrating, barred construction covered with sound-absorbing fabric; second, the windshield and visor are closely anchored to prevent drumming; third, the door and side glasses are securely set in water-proof felt channels and the rear window is set in close-hugging rubber; fourth, the inner frame of the double chassis defeats power-plant tremors; fifth, the interior wall of hardwood insulates against the noises that an all-metal body would transmit; and, sixth, the three-hinged doors, hung on a dovetailing system, and equipped with adjustable rubber bumpers are triply proofed against squeaks and creaks.

For vision and ventilation there are: a wide windshield and exceptionally ample door panels and windows, all made of glass so clear that there seems to be none; the windshield is visored and cleaner-equipped; the door windows raise and lower with crank regulators; the cowl ventilator furnishes a current of cooling air for the footboards and is controlled by a screw on the instrument board.

Among the minor conveniences, there is a dome-light fitted with frosted glass and controlled by a switch in the right door-post. The doors are fitted with heavy concealed locks, the left operating from the inside and the right by key from the outside.

By providing these and many other things, we have striven to give the owners of the 1923 Reo Sedan every essential of comfort and enduring worth in heaped-up Reo measure.

Chicago Pays One Third of Total State Road Costs

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Sept. 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—Eighty-five per cent of traffic on trunk line hard roads of the state is interurban or through traffic, while 15 per cent originates on farms along the roads, according to Frank T. Sheets, superintendent of highways of Illinois.

Mr. Sheets said that Chicago and Cook county pay one-third of every dollar spent. Important centers, such as Rockford, Rock Island, Peoria, East St. Louis, Springfield, Quincy, Decatur, Danville, Cairo, Bloomington, Champaign, and cities of like size, pay another third, while the remainder of it is collected in strictly rural communities.

"In locating state highways," Mr. Sheets said, "it therefore is important that they be so located as to serve the greatest number of people to the greatest advantage. Since eighty-five per cent of traffic is interurban traffic, and since large centers of population pay two-thirds of the cost, direct lines between important termini are of greatest economic importance.

"A specific example of what may be accomplished by proper locations is the highway from Springfield to Joliet. A new highway was opened for practically the entire distance between Springfield and Joliet, paralleling the Chicago and Alton railroad. As a result of this location, the distance was shortened approximately thirty miles and thirty-one unnecessary grade crossings were eliminated. The importance of keeping the heavy traffic of a bond issue highway from crossing the railroad thirty-one times and the probable loss of life which has been saved is something which cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

"One thousand motor vehicles a day benefitting from the decrease in distance is a most conservative figure. The average cost of operating a motor vehicle is ten cents per mile. This therefore, will result in a saving of approximately three thousand dollars a day."

STATE HIGHWAY BARRIER

FOR more than three years engineers of the state highway department have been vainly grappling with the problem of how to push the Chicago-Springfield-St. Louis concrete highway around the bluffs of the Illinois river where it sweeps to the south in Bureau county.

The solution, reached recently and announced by Frank Sheets, superintendent of highways, has precipitated a county fight which is expected to delay building of this vital gap for another year, consequently making it necessary for all through traffic to continue traveling over the gravel detour between Peru and Bureau in reaching Peoria.

The above sketch, submitted by a county official, shows the highway situation as it presents itself to motorists this season. Heavy lines indicate the paving already completed, broken lines the detour to be used this fall and winter, and circles the official route designated by the state highway department, which has asked that right of way be provided for the hard road.

The official designation, known as the "middle route," requires new right of way west of Ottville. It skirts the deep valley, can be negotiated on short grades no steeper than 5 or 6 per cent, and shortens the distance for through traffic west bound, acording to state engineers.

Residents and highway officials of Spring Valley and De Pue, including the Bureau county board of supervisors, have condemned the state choice of route and refused to purchase the "middle" right of way, declaring that the new road should be built along the foot of the bluffs through Spring Valley and De Pue to join the completed pavement at Bureau Junction.

State officials declare that this proposed route would necessitate a grade of 7 per cent on a hill a half mile long and that the road would be in constant danger of landslides and snow blockades. Both sides have reached an impasse in the argument and through traffic will continue to suffer.

Touring Record.

Every indication points toward a record tourist and resort business for the state as a whole during the present season, according to E. L. Dixon, secretary of the Detroit Tourist and Convention bureau, who has just completed a survey of conditions throughout Michigan.

Reports from hotel proprietors, civic organizations and managers of summer colonies are a unit in declaring the influx of visitors to Michigan from other states will exceed the number of any other year. No attempt has been made to fix the increase definitely but conservative estimates range from 10 to 25 per cent over last year, when, it was declared, incoming visitors spent in the neighborhood of $100,000,000 in Michigan.

CLOSED CARS MAKE IMPRESSIVE DEBUT AT NEW YORK SHOW

NEW YORK, Sept. 30.—[Special.]—In the opinion of all the exhibitors of the Closed Car show at the Grand Central palace, more closed models, especially of the sedan, will be sold during the coming year than in any previous season.

This was the unanimous opinion today of all of the local dealers who are showing the latest models, as well as many factory representatives who have come to New York to inspect the exhibition and get a forecast of trade possibilities for 1923.

Estimates by the national automobile chamber of commerce indicate that the total production of closed cars for 1922 will be at least 25 per cent and may reach 30 per cent, representing a considerable increase over 1921.

The excellent attendance was a marked illustration of the widespread public interest in the closed cars. The purchaser has never before been able to obtain so much comfort and reliability in standard motor vehicles designed for all year use as at the present time. Many of the well known makes have been materially reduced in price within the last few months.

Kentucky Progress.

The citizens of Kentucky are taking pride in the claim made that in 1821 the people of the Blue Grass state inaugurated the first state road building program of the countrty. The Louisville Automobile club, which is affiliated with the N. M. A., is entitled to much credit for the progress made in recent years along highway building lines in Kentucky. Due to its location, midway between the north and the south, a vast amount of automobile travel passes through Kentucky, and tourists have learned to look to the Louisville organization for reliable information for tours south on the western route, the eastern route information being obtainable from the Cincinnati Motor club, with headquarters in the Sinton hotel.

FARM and GARDEN BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Advise Corn Belt Farmers to Keep Grain for Hogs

EVERY farmer who raises hogs and corn in the middle west will be interested in the new methods of feeding that will increase the rate and reduce the cost of gains on porkers fed home grown feeds. This new scheme in feeding, worked out by Purdue university men, will encourage corn belt farmers to keep more of their grain on the farm this winter and feed it to hogs.

Central states farmers have been increasing their soy bean acreage during the last few seasons with the hope that this legume crop could be effectively used along with corn. But there has been something lacking where the corn was merely supplemented by soy beans. Animal nutrition experts at Purdue have recently made tests which indicate that corn and soy beans lack minerals. Gains in the weight of hogs have been accomplished and costs cut down by feeding a mixture composed of ten parts of wood ashes, ten parts of acid phosphate fertilizer, and one part of common salt by weight with ground soy beans to supplement shelled corn.

Supplementing Corn Ration.

This mixture, when placed in a self-feeder for market hogs, gave results slightly better than corn and tankage, accepted as the standard ration by most corn belt hog feeders. With the comparatively low prices of grain this will mean much to the farmer who has a few acres of soy beans, because it will enable him to market his grain in the form of meat at a much higher price the way grain and live stock prices are running today. It is predicted that this new ration will mean a saving of thousands of dollars to farmers in the middle west because many of them have grown their own protein and will not have to put cash into this feed.

C. M. Vestal, who had charge of the Indiana tests, says previous experiments show soy beans do not measure up with tankage, fish meal, and buttermilk, in supplementing the corn ration. These new tests indicate that the deficiency is in the mineral content of the corn and soy bean ration. By adding the home mixed minerals the rate and economy of gains are greatly increased, which shows what corn belters can do with the feeds grown on their own farms in preparing their hogs for the winter market.

Testing Mineral Mixtures.

Wood ashes, acid phosphate, and salt gave the best results of any of the different mineral mixtures used. The average daily gain of hogs fed this with the corn and soy beans was 1.85 pounds, at a cost of $4.14 a hundred, figuring the corn at 50 cents a bushel, soy beans at $1.25 a bushel, and the mineral at 2 cents a pound.

Ten parts each of pulverized limestone and acid phosphate and one part common salt by weight proved to be the second best mineral mixture. Hogs receiving this mixture made an average gain of 1.74 points, at a cost of $4.09. The mixture ranking third on these tests was made up of fifteen parts wood ashes, five parts acid phosphate, and one part salt. The daily gain was 1.64 pounds, costing $4.29.

GARDEN NOTES

The paradichlorbenzene method of getting rid of peach tree borers is gradually replacing the old laborious method of worming the trees, digging and gouging out the borers with a wire. Peach growers in various sections of the country are successfully using the gas treatment worked out by the government. All of the borers may be gassed, and the cost of the treatment is about 4 or 5 cents a tree.

Plowing or spading up gardens and truck patches this fall before the ground freezes will reduce the job of fighting insects next season, because stirring the soil at this time of the year kills many grubs and pupae in the ground.

JEWETT

Raise the Jewett Hood and this is what you see—a Full Size Motor

Full 50 horse-power in this superbly performing six motor

Some cars may claim more power than the Jewett. But the Jewett has 249 cubic inches piston displacement—and there is no car within $200 of its price—four or six—which approaches this size motor. Piston displacement is the source of motor power, and the displacement of the Jewett proves its case.

But piston displacement isn't all there is to power. Friction, through faulty oiling, may consume 5% of it; inefficient carburetion 10%, or even 20% in cold weather—while you pay the gasoline bills. The Jewett wrings every ounce of power out of every drop of gasoline. It is a miser of gas—a spendthrift of air.

Heated air fed to the carburetor helps vaporize the gasoline. The intake manifold is heated by exhaust gases, minimizing the feeding of raw, unvaporized gasoline into the cylinders. This keeps it from getting by the pistons into the crank-case, diluting the oil. Important power is added by these super-gasifying improvements—motor life increased by protecting the purity of the oil.

Friction—that great consumer of power and enemy of motor life—is practically eliminated in the Jewett motor. At the speed you drive on the open road the extra high pressure oiling system forces three gallons of oil, or more, every minute, at a pressure of 20 to 40 lbs., into every main and connecting rod bearing. Not a point in the entire internal mechanism remains unoiled. Jewett bearings do not run metal to metal—always between them is a cushion of oil.

Amply powered—with its extra stout chassis, Paige-Timken axles, front and rear, ball-bearing steering spindles, new type clutch, long springs, low-hung body—this Sturdy Six gives long years of enduring, economical service—of delightful motoring. Never before has $995 bought so much value. Will you try a car if we send it to you?

Eyes of America on Plague Free Waukesha Herds

This is the second of a series of articles that will appear in this department from time to time giving the practical dairyman's views on dairying problems, the breeding of good, healthy cattle, the production of clean milk, and the selling of cows and dairy products.

By Frank Ridgway.

SELLING more than $300,000 worth of cattle from a single county last year with figures indicating that the total for 1922 will be practically double that amount, Holstein men of Waukesha county, Wisconsin, have disturbed the seismograph of the dairy industry and attracted the attention of dairymen all over America. This county is now recognized as the Holstein breeding center of the United States, and it has more dollars invested in Holstein cattle than any other county.

These and other outstanding accomplishments have caused farmers in all corners of the nation to ask, "Why is it that Holstein breeders of Waukesha county have been able to produce good animals and build up confidence that attracts buyers everywhere?" That question cannot be answered in a single sentence, for there are many things that have made it possible for these men to sell cattle on such a gigantic scale. A close-up view of Waukesha county and a study of the work of selling cattle through the association immediately reveal outstanding features that have contributed to success.

[Tallmadge Photo.]

W. L. Baird, executive secretary of the Waukesha County Holstein-Freisian association. Through his keen vision the organization has demonstrated to the dairy world that it is easy to create confidence and increase the demand for animals by producing clean, healthy, well bred cattle and by standing back of guarantees.

What Guarantees Did.

From the beginning they were fortunate in having good cattle, most of them either direct or indirect descendants of the twelve famous $200 Holstein eastern heifers that were brought to that section by Julius Rust a half century ago. When these breeders reached the point where they had a surplus of dairy cattle and began selling to buyers from other states, their selling problems become complicated. Most buyers not only demanded cows with good lines of breeding and good butter and milk production records, but they insisted upon buying healthy cattle. Then tuberculosis testing got its start, for breeders soon found they could not afford to guarantee animals unless they weeded out infected cattle.

The reputation of a Waukesha county breeder among dairymen in other states affected the standing of other farmers in his community, and it was soon recognized that the selling of cattle was a country-wide problem. Leading breeders saw they had to produce an honest product—a good, well bred healthy cow or bull—and that they must see that the outside buyer got cattle as represented.

Scorn Horse Trading Methods.

Before good cattle got their start in that section of Wisconsin much of the marketing of live stock was done through the old fashioned horse trading system. Trading centers were established at livery barns, blacksmith shops, and sheds; at crossroads and villages. Here all horses with spavins, ring bone, kirbs, and moon eyes were assembled and traded for crippled cows and puny sheep.

When dairymen found they had a surplus of well bred cattle ready for the market they knew the system applied by horse traders and gypsies could not be used. Fifteen years ago twenty-six of these progressive farmers organized the Waukesha County Holstein-Freisian Breeders' association to promote more and better breeding and to assist buyers from other states in dealing with honest and reliable farmers. This association, the oldest county Holstein association, has done much pioneer work in placing the selling of high grade dairy cows on a higher plane.

Attracting Outside Buyers.

The association began by holding two meetings a year, a summer picnic and a business meeting in the winter. This lasted for five years, and by 1912 the membership had reached a total of 125. Today the paid up membership is exactly double that amount. The association began to take a more active part in the sale of animals and has since served as an agency bringing buyer and seller together.

Ten years ago the first public sale was held by the association. This attracted many new buyers and stimulated interest in breeding pure bred Holsteins among Waukesha county farmers. Only 300 had pure bred Holsteins on their farms in 1907, while today there are 1,600 herds in the county. There were not more than a half dozen exclusive pure bred Holstein breeders in the county in 1912, and today there are more than 250, according to W. L. Baird, secretary of the association.

During the first few sales many Waukesha county farmers were reluctant in buying cattle; they stood around whittling and cutting notches in the fence of the selling arena, amazed at the free bidding and the prices paid by buyers from other states. The next day whittlers would be out scouring the county trying to buy a few choice animals.

Public sales have been one of the most helpful aids in stimulating interest in the pure bred business is the opinion of Mr. Baird.

"The tuberculosis test got its real start in this section when we began to hold public sales and our association agreed to take care of outside buyers. We had to see that a dairyman's guarantee was made good, and we could not do it without testing the cattle," he said.

Dairymen in that county could not sell their cattle privately unless they were tested. A buyer would look at a herd, make an offer, and if the animals had not been tested and the owner refused to do so, he would drive away.

"That happened only a few times to a dairyman," added the secretary, "for he soon found that untested cows were worth no more than beef cattle."

The number of public sales has gradually increased each year. Five were held last year. Only two have been held this year; probably two more will be held before Jan. 1, but more effort is being made by the individual farmer to sell his cattle privately.

Because tuberculosis played such an important part in breeding and the sale of milk and animals, Waukesha county breeders have been leaders in eradicating it from every herd in Wisconsin. The state law provides that a petition signed by 50 per cent of the farmers in a county, asking the state live stock sanitary board to test cattle, constitutes authority to test all cattle in the county. About five years ago Waukesha county filed its petition and the cleanup work was started.

Now 90 per cent of grades and 100 per cent of pure breds have been tested for tuberculosis. Mr. Baird considers testing and eradication of the reactors have increased the value of Waukesha county cattle 25 per cent

Handicapped by Injunction.

"The work of testing the remaining 10 per cent of grade animals has been handicapped by an injunction filed by a few owners," said Mr. Baird. "This trouble will probably be over as soon as we have a new petition signed to eliminate any technical doubt as to the authority the state has in testing every herd."

Owners of pure breds have been in favor testing for years, and they had it done long before any law about it was passed in Wisconsin.

"We do not have a great deal of trouble in getting money to pay our indemnities here in Wisconsin," said the association secretary. "Our legislators have realized the importance of this work and have provided funds for it. Several years ago Wisconsin passed a law on tuberculosis that started many of our infected animals on the run. Illinois was once the dumping ground for many of these cattle, but that was several years ago, and I think practically all the trafficking in these animals, which was often done at night, has been done away with."

Thinks Test Practical.

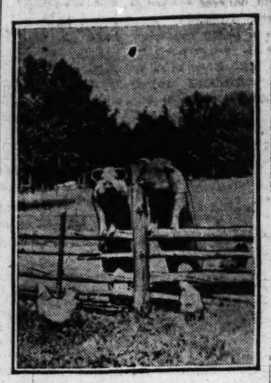
In discussing the effectiveness of the tuberculin test Mr. Baird said he considers the test the most practical, reliable means of detecting the disease. "I believe we should pay more attention to the methods of testing and take into consideration the environment, the time the animal is watered, the feed given, and the history of the herd," he said. "Animals that have passed several previous tests should be tested carefully. I would not buy an animal unless it had been tested within thirty days. According to law, a heard that passes two clean tests six months apart may be shipped interstate without further examination. Practical breeders know that animals may be infected within a short time and so they would not be safe in buying animals that had not been tested within thirty days."

All animals that go through the association's sales are from state and federal tested herds and have to be tested within thirty days of the sale. Pure breds are sold subject to a sixty day retest. Few Waukesha breeders sell their grades subject to the sixty day retest because, they say, they do not get enough for them. However, they are willing to have the triple test—ophthalmic, interdermal, and intradermal—applied at the time they are sold.

Waukesha dairymen work on the theory that they cannot afford to have a tubercular cow in their herd. Every reactor is eliminated because it decreases the value of the entire herd.

Building up herds with good animals and keeping animals free from tuberculosis by testing have made it possible for Waukesha county farmers to stand back of their guarantees and sell 8,000 head of cows, bulls, and heifers in a single year to other states. Most of their buyers are from the south, west, and middle west. More cattle are shipped from Wisconsin to Illinois every year than to any other single state.

DOWN ON THE FARM



FARM CLOWNS—Not all circuses are held on vacant lots in cities and small towns. There's a circus staged daily on almost every farm where the farmer has a good sense of humor and an appreciation for good animal acrobatic stunts. These clownish pigs on Orrin T. Malmer's farm near Ephraim, Wis., go through their repertoire of stunts at feeding time daily. The information with this snapshot did not say whether they were fixing to do the tight barbed wire walk or the swine cakewalk without a parasol on the pole fence.

POULTRY TIPS

Poultry kept on dairy or general live stock farms should not be allowed to run with cattle, unless the herd has been tested and found free from tuberculosis. Poultrykeepers are beginning to realize that if they are to buy healthy birds they must get them from places where the live stock is known to be free from tuberculosis.

Kerosene and linseed oil in a fifty-fifty mixture makes an effective preparation for treating scaly legs and feet, a common trouble among chickens. Dipping the feet and legs twice into this mixture will usually stop the work of the mites that burrow under the scales.

For the man who is planning to build a poultry house this fall, here are some good points relating to ventilation problems that are worth remembering: The Ohio station poultrymen say: "A thousand pounds of hens need 8,278 cubic feet of air a day, while 1,000 pounds of horse use only 3,401 cubic feet of air a day. Hens have to breathe at a furious pace to keep up their high body temperature. Give them air."

Debate on Service Charge.

At the Wisconsin dairymen's hearing opening tomorrow at Madison, the question of whether the service charge made by coöperative marketing organizations for the handling of milk is in restraint of trade or not will be thrashed out. A service charge is being made by a coöperative dairy organization at Beloit, Wis., and there has been some complaint that this restrains trade. The hearing will be conducted by the Wisconsin state bureau of markets. Many dairymen in the Chicago district are vitally concerned over the decision because it deals with a feature in the selling contract that is to be used in handling the milk sold through the coöperative milk marketing sales organization here in Chicago.

Closing hog trade was decidedly weak, with final quotations 10@25c lower than Friday. Light weights declined most, best selling early at $10.55, but later at $10.40. Day's general average dropped to $9.15, or 15c lower than the previous session and 10c above a week ago. Average a year ago $7.20.

Last week's receipts of hogs were 16,500 above the ten year average. Quality improved very materially last week, with heavy packing kinds in shorter supply. Estimated average weight for the week 250 lbs, against 252 lbs previous week, 246 lbs a year ago, and 226 lbs for the ten year average.

Cattle receipts last week were the largest thus far this year at 75,300, yet the supply of choice to fancy beeves was short of trade requirements. Best steers advanced to $12.25, there being only one month higher in nearly two years. Last week's average price of good beef steers advanced to $10.55. Poorer grades of cattle closed uneven, lower, with feeding steers generally higher.

Feeding Lambs Higher.

Active outside competition up to the week's extreme close forced feeding lamb values to the highest point since early in the year, with late trading ruling on an upward trend. While fat lambs closed 15@25c below a week ago, feeding stock held fully 25c higher, best established the week's range top at $14.65. Natives were favored by most local interests, selling up to $14.75 early in the week, although late transactions reflected the general weakness. Sheep sold weak to 25c lower.

Receipts for Monday are estimated at 21,000 cattle, 29,000 hogs, and 27,000 sheep, against 29,863 cattle, 35,318 hogs, and 24,253 sheep a week ago, and 20,037 cattle, 30,448 hogs and 37,565 sheep a year ago. Next week's receipts are estimated at 70,000 cattle, 120,000 hogs and 90,000 sheep, against 57,157 cattle 119,131 hogs, and 131,213 sheep a year ago.

Probable receipts of hogs for Monday range from 23,000 to 48,000. Robert Ellis earned 32,000, John T. Brown 36,000, W. H. Overman 37,000, George Chandler and F. R. Burrows, 38,000, Charles Gross 40,000, B. R. Gentry 41,000, B. E. Collins 42,000, William Olson 45,000, and Arnold Vincott 48,000.

FINANCIAL NOTES

The report of 133 railroads for August is not favorable when compared with the previous year, but Wall street, although expecting a poor showing for that month because of the strike, took a cheerful view of the preliminary statement in view of the large amount of eastern roads included in the report, as the eastern carriers were more affected by the strike than were the western roads, because of the suspension of coal shipments, on which many rely for a good part of their income. Based on the returns of railroads, it is estimated that the net operating income for all of the roads in August did not exceed $45,000,000, or about half the total for the corresponding month of 1921. To represent a seasonal proportion of a 6 per cent return on $18,000,000,000 tentative valuation August net should approximate $104,000,000.

It was reported in the financial district yesterday that the current robust advance in the common stock of National Biscuit company, amounting to some twenty one points in three days, is in discount of a proposal under consideration by the directors to divide the present stock into four parts, giving four new shares for each share of the old stock, and inaugurating dividends at the rate of $4 per share on the new issue. This would equal a $16 dividend each year on the old stock, as compared with the present $12 rate.

The contemplated merger of the Cuban-American Sugar company and the National Refining company, of which Wall street has been hearing many rumors for six months or more, has been finally called off, according to reports yesterday. The abandonment of the plans, however, did not have any unfavorable effect on the sugar stocks as did the failure of the steel merger negotiations have on the shares of the company concerned in that combination.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending Sept. 27, by 246 banks in thirty-two leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district aggregate $986,124,000, a decrease of 7.9 per cent compared with a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account amounted to $967,267,000, an increase of 11.0 per cent compared with the corresponding week of last year.

The committee on securities of the New York stock exchange has ruled that the refunding mortgage gold bonds due 1949 of the Chicago and Alton Railroad company shall be dealt in flat on and after Oct. 2 and must carry Oct. 1, 1922, and subsequent coupons to be a delivery.

The Spicer Manufacturing company will retire another $600,000 of its 6 per cent serial gold notes, bringing the total of this issue paid off up to $1,800,000 and leaving only $1,200,000 to be met in 1923 and 1924. The company is also paying off the first of July each year slightly over $71,000 of its ten year bonds.

The Lckawanna Steel company has issued notice to stockholders that books for transfer of stock of the company will not be closed at the close of business Oct. 9.

WORLD'S GRAIN MARKET NEWS

September trading came to an end as expected without any trouble. There was plenty offered at all times the largest holders who were cash interests had wheat on the market most of the day at $1.11, at which the market closed with a net gain of 2¾c, while oats were offered at 41½c, with around 750,000 bu traded at a range of 40⅝ to 41⅜c with the close at 41⅜ to 41½c. September corn advanced 1¼c, touching 63¼c and was offered by Jackson Bros. at the advance with the close at 62¾c. All trades were cleaned up at the last by the deliveries. The wheat and oats went to the Armour Grain Co., the corn mainly to Jackson Bros. and Lewis and other grain was scattered.

September deliveries for the day were: wheat 469,000 bu, corn 1,535,000 bu, oats 257,000 bu, rye 152,000 bu, lard 1,150,000 lbs and short ribs 150,000 lbs. For the month of September there were unusually large sales aggregating 2,090,000 bu wheat, 3,017,000 bu corn, 2,332,000 bu oats, 1,362,000 bu rye, 15,000 bu barley, 32,950,000 lbs lard and 1,400,000 lbs short ribs.

Until the situation in the near East becomes more clearly defined a majority of wheat traders are inclined to go rather slow on either side of the market. However, there is a belief in some quarters that the transportation situation is likely to result in heavier buying on the part of foreigners who may take fright over the prospect of being unable to secure grain as fast as was recently expected. Messages from the seaboard indicated that at one time there was sufficient spread between American and United Kingdom prices to make it profitable to consign abroad, but no one cared to take a chance under prevailing conditions.

A sale of 40,000 bu No. 2 mixed corn was made at the seaboard yesterday for first half November loading at 21c over Chicago December which figured out around 6¾c over December f.o.b. here while 20,000 bu 36 lb No 2 white clipped oats loading for the continent sold at equal to 6¼c over December f.o.b. here.

Sentiment in corn and oats generally inclines to the bull side and there were reports from Illinois points during the day that indicated that farmers had about sold all their corn. Private reports on corn will be given to the trade Monday and are expected to show some reduction as compared with the 2,875,000,000 bu suggested by the Government September returns and will compare with 3,081,000,000 bu harvested last year.

Shortage of cars on western railroads is largely in the middle west and northwest. Grain receipts at Chicago last week of 8,187,000 bu were 76,000 bu in excess of the previous week, 711,000 bu more than last year, and 841,000 bu above the five year average for the same period. Primary receipts were 30,508,000 bu, the largest at this time in more than five years, exceeding the average by practically 4,000,000 bu and showing an increase of 605,000 bu for the week and 5,854,000 bu over last year. Wheat and oats receipts were the largest at this time since 1918 and of corn the heaviest in five years with the exception of last year. Most of the grain is coming from Illinois and Iowa, and on the leading railroads 100 or more elevators are closed for want of cars. The heaviest movement of grain is on the Northwestern, Illinois Central, Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul, Burlington, and Rock Island roads, which handled 80 per cent of the business brought into Chicago last week.

William Young Jr., who has been identified with the grain business at Milwaukee for many years and is well known in Chicago, will hereafter represent Jackson Bros. & Co. in the former market.

Large crop of rye in the Canadian northwest has a depressing effect on the price of American grain. It is estimated that practically all of the Canadian yield of around 50,000,000 bu will have to go for export, as there is practically no home consumption.

India has removed the embargo on exports of wheat. Choice white Karachi was offered in Liverpool for September-October shipment at equal to $1.36 per bu, or practically the same as was asked for No. 1 Manitobas.

French wheat crop for 1922 is officially estimated at 235,440,000 bu, compared with 332,000,000 bu last year. Oats crop, 287,000,000 bu, against 245,000,000 bu last year, and barley, 39,000,000 bu, against 37,000,000 bu in 1921.

Investing for the Future.

The careful investor looks past the present into the future. Unless he wishes to put his funds to work for only a limited time he is more interested in investing them where his income is assured for a longer period than in securing a temporary high return that may be terminated at almost any time.

Interest rates are steadily falling, and although some investors are slow to realise it, the days of 8 per cent interest on new safe securities are about passed. A large portion of the investing public received its education in bond investment during the Liberty loan drives. This led to the purchase of other bonds—industrials, public utilities, railroad, and municipals. At that time, during the period immediately following the war, interest rates were abnormally high, and it was possible to secure sound investments bearing interest as high as 8 per cent. It is but natural that those who got their first experience in bond investment at such a time should be slow to realize that such high rates were merely the result of abnormal conditions and could not obtain indefinitely. But such is the fact, and with the business of the country becoming stabilized the interest rates offered on new loans are steadily diminishing.

Bonds floated with a high interest rate which have a callable feature are being called, and will continue to be called as soon as the borrowers advantageously can avail themselves of this option. The 8s, 7½s, and 7s are being retired and refunded with 6s, 5½s, and even 5s. Investors who recently purchased bonds with high interest rates are finding their investments terminated and are faced with the problem of reinvesting in bonds of lower rates, and these bonds (the sound ones), which could have been bought a year or two ago at a large discount, are now selling close to par. Of course, those who purchased safe noncallable bonds with high interest rates will continue to enjoy these rates until maturity, and such bonds will likely sell at a good premium in the future.

It is true that some borrowers are still offering high interest rates on high grade securities, but such instances no longer are the general rule, and one is apt to scrutinize such securities rather carefully to ascertain their degree of safety. It sometimes happens that the bonds of certain industries have acquired a "black eye" in certain localities, and it may therefore become necessary for the borrower to pay a high rate of interest in order to market his bonds in those regions, even though these bonds may be sound investments.

Those who still are looking for high interest rates should consider whether it is more to their advantage to secure temporarily such rates on bonds which may soon be called than to buy bonds of lower interest rates which are noncallable and which may still be purchased at considerably lower prices than they will command a few years hence. And in the purchase of high interest bearing securities especial care should be exercised to ascertain their safety.

Present and Future

IN THE country's public utility industries is found a history of remarkable growth and a future of unlimited promise.

¶ Public appreciation of the leading part played by these industries in creating modern civilization is now replacing a period of unfamiliarity and misunderstanding.

¶ Regulated by the State, operating without competition, and owned in increasing measure by the public, the utilities have attained a degree of stability unequalled by any other class of industry.

¶ This stability, in reality, is grounded on the economic forces of the present, and so far as can be foreseen, the future.

¶ As long as the utilities continue to reduce manual labor, conserve fuel, promote convenience and save time and money for the public, their growth is as certain as anything can be.

¶ In our opinion, based on years of intimate experience with the financing and upbuilding of utility properties, investments made today in the securities of large, progressively managed utility companies will prove eminently satisfactory from the standpoints of stability, annual return and enhancement of market value.

GRAINS ADVANCE IN RAPID SHIFTS OF PRICE SCALE

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Evening up of September contracts in all grains, with unsettled political conditions in the near east, resulted in rapid price changes with a higher average. At no time were values more than a fraction below Friday's finish, with the close at net gains of 1⅜@2⅝c on wheat, while corn was unchanged to ⅝c higher, oats unchanged to ⅛c higher, and rye ⅞@2⅞c higher. Provisions were unsettled, with lard 15c higher to 2½c lower, the latter on January, and ribs were 12½@15c lower.

Influences prevailing in the grain markets are so conflicting that erratic fluctuations were the rule rather than the exception the last week. As compared with the previous week, wheat showed an advance of 4¼c on the September, while the distant deliveries were ⅛@1c lower. Corn was also unsettled and ⅝c lower on September and ⅝c higher on the new crop futures. Oats closed ⅛@1⅛c higher, September leading, and rye 4¼c higher on September and 1¼@2c lower on the deferred deliveries. Nearby futures of lard gained 10@20c and January lost 15c, while ribs were up 25@37½c.

Seemingly, the transportation tieup in North America is commencing to affect the attitude of importing countries toward the wheat market. A good export demand was reported for Manitobas and premiums at the gulf have advanced about 2c per bu in the last few days. Liverpool closed ¼d higher in the face of a removal of the embargo on exports from India. The local trade continues to pay close attention to political news from the near east, and a sharp break in the stock market, with reports that the British had sent an ultimatum to the Turks, had considerable influence on values at one time.

Evening Up in September Wheat.

Bulk of trade in the September was of an evening up character, with shorts forced to bid up at times to secure the grain, while at others longs had to offer concessions to make sales. Movement in the Canadian northwest is very heavy, with receipts at Winnipeg 11,902 cars for the week, compared with 8,957 cars the previous week and 4,780 cars last year.

Shorts were free buyers of September corn and oats, and, while the former advanced sharply, oats held within relatively narrow limits, running into heavy selling at 42¼c, which supplied the wants of buyers. Sentiment generally has become more bullish and deferred deliveries were bought persistently by shorts and commission houses. Cash demand for corn was active with premiums ⅛@⅜c higher on spot, and domestic shipping demand showed improvement, with exporters paying relatively high prices for grain on spot in the east.

Rye average higher, the buying of a relatively small quantity of September to cover shorts finding offerings limited until a good advance had been attained. Export business was light. Sales of 10,000 bu were made to go to store.

Higher Provision Averages.

Nearby deliveries of lard were not easy to buy, and with packers absorbing the scattered sales, prices averaged higher. January was easier in sympathy with hogs. Liverpool lard prices showed little change. Packing of hogs at Chicago for the season to date aggregate 3,616,000, against 3,337,000 last year. Prices follow:

CASH-GRAIN NEWS

A fair trade was on in wheat at the seaboard, but it was hard to secure accurate figures as to the quantities sold abroad. Wheat sales were estimated at around 400,000 bu, with some corn and other grains. Chicago handlers sold 150,000 bu corn and 25,000 bu oats to exporters.

Domestic shipping sales aggregated 58,000 bu wheat to outside mills, 75,000 bu corn, and 130,000 bu oats. Deliveries on September contracts at Kansas City were 90,000 bu corn.

Basis on cash wheat at Chicago advanced ¼@½c, as compared with the September, with No. 2 mixed 1¼@1½c, and yellow and white 1¾@2c over the future. No. 2 yellow sold as high as 2¾c over; No. 3 mixed was 1½c and yellow and white 1¼@1½c over September, and No. 4 grades 1c over. Shippers, elevator interests and industries were good buyers. Receipts, 247 cars. Outside markets were 1c higher to 2c lower, the latter on white at Kansas City.

Offerings of cash oats were fair and sold at unchanged prices, as compared with the September. No. 2 white bringing September price, and No. 3 white 1¼c under. Receipts, 149 cars.

Wahl preferred was wanted at 91⅛, with sellers at 93¾—up 1 point. Avery common was offered for sale at 23 with little interest on the buying side. The New York Times.

New York, Sept. 30. — [Special.] — Even the markets had reached the point at which their view of the whole financial situation seemed to be shaped by the alternating phases of the Turkish controversy, it was hardly surprising that the week-end should have been marked by a hesitant spirit which made it easy for speculative sales to cause declines.

The exchange of warnings and defiances between the British and Ottoman commanders had evidently brought the situation to a stage where a definite and important turn was easily possible within the next twenty-four hours. Under such circumstances and with tobacco dispatches from Angora and Constantinople not of a particularly cheerful character, the weakness on the stock exchange was only what might have been expected.

Serious Conflict Not Expected.

So much more can be said of the movement of the week than that the "war scare market," if it may be thus described, has borne rather faint resemblance to the reactions which have accompanied the really formidable "war scares" of the past.

If the larger financial interests, home and foreign, had been seriously considering the possibility of a general outbreak of war among the Balkan states and the realignment of Europe in opposing belligerent camps, the kind of picture which would have been presented on the stock exchange may be imagined by recalling not only July, 1914, but February, 1904, when Japan attacked Russia, or October, 1899, when England declared war on the Transvaal republic.

Technique of Market Discussed.

On one of those occasions did Wall street or the London stock exchange engage in discussion as both now seem to be doing, as to whether the break in prices might not have been the automatic result of overdone speculation for the rise.

Today's declines on the stock exchange were more irregularly distributed than is the week's other downward movement. Weakness was mainly evident in the industrial shares, which had been advanced with particular energy by groups of speculators.

Bond market prices were inclined to halt after Friday's recovery, but they showed little or no weakness. The Liberty bonds as a rule went a fraction lower; five of those loans ended below par, after declines for the week ranging from ½ to ½ point. The day's foreign exchange market moved uncertainly within a narrow range, rates on most of the European markets closing slightly lower.

New York Loans Still High.

Notwithstanding the indications of heavy liquidation which have characterized the stock markets of the week, loans on the New York clearing house banks show a decrease of only $1,248,000, according to the weekly statement of actual condition, made public today. Surplus reserves are higher by $18,953,900, or reserves in excess of legal requirements now standing at $59,536,750. Deposits increased about $44,000,000. Details of the statement, with comparisons, follow:

FRANCE'S WHEAT CROP IS SHORT; BUYS FROM U. S.

PARIS, Sept. 30.—[By the Associated Press.]—France's wheat crop for 1922 is more than one-fourth short of last year's production and nearly one-third under the customary annual requirements, according to statistics prepared by the ministry of agriculture and published today. The rye crop also is insufficient but oats and barley are more abundant than last year.

The wheat yield is estimated at 64,000,000 quintals, as compared with 88,000,000 last year, and the country's normal requirement of 94,000,000. This is due to a reduction of 600,000 acres in the area planted, the small yield per acre, and bad weather. Wheat amounting to 7,000,000 quintals has been bought in the United States and Canada at less than the prices prevailing here.

The rye crop is estimated at 9,500,000 quintals, as compared with 11,250,000 in 1921; oats nearly 42,000,000, as compared with 52,500,000; barley, 8,750,00, as compared with 8,350,000, and the crop of mixed wheat and rye at 1,166,000, as compared with 1,500,000 quintals in 1921.

The two kinds of cream your skin needs – what each is for

Only a cream that your skin can absorb will give it that clear fresh look in an instant

To give your skin a special freshness and really hold the powder—a certain kind of cream

Something to make the skin look its best at a moment's notice. Every woman wants to know about it.

Something that will actually make your skin feel and look softer and smoother the moment you apply it.

A cream to do this must be one that your skin will absorb instantly. It must be delicate and made of soothing ingredients yet not contain a drop of fat.

This is Pond's Vanishing Cream—the cream to use whenever you want to look your best at a moment's notice.

If you want face powder to go on evenly and stay on don't put it directly on your face. Bits of it catch on little rough places and soon flock off.

Always smooth Pond's Vanishing Cream on your face before you powder. It gives your skin a clear transparent tone. The powder goes on evenly and clings for hours to the smooth velvety surface the cream gives your skin.

And how to protect your skin

Wind whips the natural moisture out of an unprotected skin, sun burns it, cold chaps it. Any of these three will make it dry and rough.

To protect your skin, smooth on Pond's Vanishing Cream before you go out. This cream, which is absorbed instantly and completely, holds the natural moisture in the skin and acts as an invisible shield against the drying effect of wind, sun and cold.

Use Pond's Vanishing Cream every day before you go out. Use it whenever your skin needs instant freshening and always before you powder. It is indispensable for daytime and evening use.

For a thorough cleansing —a totally different cream

Your skin must be kept really clean or it becomes dull looking.

Ordinary washing cannot reach the dust and fine particles of dirt that every day bore deep into the pores of your skin.

For thorough cleansing you need a cream with an oil base. Made with just the right amount of oil, Pond's Cold Cream works into your pores, loosens every bit of dirt, and comes out again bringing the dirt with it.

Use it every night before retiring and whenever you come in from a dusty trip. Put it on with your finger tips. After you have let it stay a minute wipe it off with a soft cloth. The grime on the cloth will convince you how thorough a cleansing the cream gives.

The nightly use of this delicate oil cream will help to keep your skin in the supple condition that resists the coming of lines.

Use both these creams every day, each for its own purposes, and you will keep your skin fresh and lovely. Neither contains anything that can clog the pores or promote the growth of hair. The Pond's Extract Co., New York.

From ENGLAND Where Beautiful Complexions are the Rule— comes a Marvelous Face Clay

The One Clay that Lastingly Benefits Any Skin it Touches in Forty Minutes Time—Brings Full Color and Stifles Hair Growth on Face with a Single Application—Unless it Does, You are Not Out a Penny

MADAM, you are cordially invited to try a full-sized jar of the original English complexion clay the discovery of which has set new standards of beauty for every woman. Claying with the right clay—the potent, purging clay called Terra-derma-lax, means blemishes banished while you dress for the day! And this new, natural beauty will stay! A dressing-table test on your own complexion will tell more than pages of talk. Our trial offer sounds daring, but really is not; this English clay's peculiar powers are more than a match for any and every impurity that dulls the skin. Even the domestic clays inspired by the discovery of Terra-derma-lax are of benefit to most complexions. But wait until you try Terra-derma-lax! The English clay laxates the skin—any skin—renovates, restores, remakes it as you shall see.

A young scientist's search of three continents brought to light this clay of the British Isles. Then American ingenuity preserved its precious properties in a vacuum-closed earthern jar. The miracles this clay performs have been told in the public prints. First laboratory demonstrations caused a furore. The simple truths as stated by the press were scarcely believed. Perhaps you read, and doubted. So here is your chance to see for yourself. A full jar awaits your word that you want it, and will try it.

Spread this natural clay on face and neck—and forget it. In ten minutes, laxation starts; you can fairly feel the purging, purifying action in every pore. The whole skin structure responds. Another twenty minutes, and the clay is wiped away—revealing a skin silky-soft, bright with color.

Your name and address, please, and this full-quantity jar of fresh Terra-derma-lax will be sent you by first post. We want you to see what is so hard to believe. Try it before you buy it. In other words, we guarantee that Terra-derma-lax will make your skin beautiful, enamel-smooth and colorful. You will see this new brightness and bloom with one application of this active English clay—no charge unless you do! So, away with the coupon—off with the cover—on with the clay that is fast making poor complexions as scarce in America as they are in England.

ASTOUNDING Things That Terra-derma-lax DOES

—Acts in half an hour with complete results.

—Flushes each minute pore of all impurities.

—Brings back the full color and skin health of rugged youth and the benefits last.

—Keeps pores their normal size, because it is laid on, not rubbed in.

—Stifles hair growth on face.

—Leaves even a pimpled skin smooth in texture.

SPECIAL!

No-Profit Offer of $5.00 Jars

The regular price of Terra-derma-lax is $5—but don't send it. Our broadcast public offer must have reasonable restriction, of course. We cannot gratify the merely curious, nor send expensive English clay to children. So a small deposit to cover actual cost is asked as evidence of good faith. We have figured this down to only $1.88 plus postage. You need not trouble to enclose even this; the postman will accept your deposit. But please understand that it is a deposit—held to your credit. Take five days, for an unhurried decision. Then, and only if you voluntarily keep it, will we consider your deposit of $1.88 as a payment in full for your jar. Meantime, use a little of the clay or use all of it. For we want you to know that the trial is indeed free and unconditional.

Send No Payment Whatever

—unless you expect to be out when postman calls, and prefer to enclose $2 for jar prepaid. Either way, every penny will be returned to you unless your complexion is marvelously and overwhelmingly improved.

Dermatological Laboratories
329 Plymouth Place, Chicago

Please send full-sized jar of Terra-derma-lax for five-day FREE trial. I will deposit $1.88 (plus postage) with the postman, as payment in full for the clay in case I decide to keep it. If the trial does not delight me with results, my full deposit to be returned. 288

Wallace Makes New Record Reducing Mrs. Derby in Less Than Four Months

BEFORE AFTER

ASTONISHING CHANGE BROUGHT ABOUT BY ONLY FOUR MONTHS' USE OF THE FAMOUS WALLACE REDUCING RECORDS —THE AUTHENTIC AND ORIGINAL COURSE WHICH SO MANY THOUSANDS HAVE FOUND IT EASY TO GET THIN TO MUSIC

The Sworn Statement of Three Quincy Citizens

We, the undersigned, have known Mrs. Harry Derby for years. Her amazing reduction by Wallace records came under our almost daily observation. We hereby testify to the entire truth of statements that follow.

A. F. Liebmann
J. J. Bunch
F. F. Newman

By William R. Durgin

QUINCY, ILLS.—In a happy little community of homes which fringe Vine street, I discovered Quincy's happiest woman. All because she accepted an invitation to try a novel way of getting rid of a mountainous burden of flesh. Only last January, she was fat beyond hope. By May, her weight was normal!

To readers who are overweight—a few pounds, or many—I shall offer Mrs. Derby's amazing experience, just as it was related to me:

"When the postman brought the phonograph record with a free reducing lesson, I never dreamed Mr. Wallace could make me weigh what I should. The best I had hoped for was a little relief—for I could scarcely get around, I was so heavy.

"The first few days of the course showed nothing, except I guess I felt better. After a time I began to lose. One day at market I stepped on the scales, and saw I had lost twenty pounds. Needless to say, I kept on with the records. Each week showed a little more reduction, until before long the neighbors all noticed the difference. I kept on losing right along, and I finally was down to the size my last pictures bows."

An Easy Method

Now, one might think 103 lbs. reduction in only four months required the most strenuous efforts. But Mrs. Derby did nothing extraordinary; she followed the regular instruction that Wallace gives anybody. It was no harder to reduce her than those but ten, twelve, or twenty pounds overweight—it merely required more time.

To get thin to music is really a "lark" compared to any other method of reducing. In fact, Mr. Harry Derby told me his household was frankly skeptical of real results when his wife started the Wallace course, just because it all looked and sounded to good too be true. There is nothing to "take," you don't have to starve; just a few movements with a thrill to each—that seem all too short because they are set to music. I guess it's the sheer fun of doing it that starts so many men and women on the melody method of reducing. But it's the sudden, certain results—the fat that's played away to the tune of a pound a day—that keeps them enthusiastically at it, and telling others about it.

Benefitted in Appearance and in Health

Mr. Newman, Quincy photographer (notice his signature to statement above), took two photos of Mrs. Harry Derby which are reproduced here. This is an indisputable evidence of Mrs. Derby's improvement—just as the camera saw it. I only wish you could see the lady herself! Not a sign of flabbiness, nor a wrinkle to show where the excess flesh had been. I am almost willing to believe her assertion: "I can now do anything a 15-year-old girl can do!"

I have met scores who restored normal weight and measurements by Wallace's novel, and so enjoyable method. My sister reduced by it, so did a brother; and two aunts of mine swear by it. Forty or fifty lbs. reduction through use of these remarkable records is fairly common. But Mrs. Derby's achievement — 103 pounds in a few days less than four months—sets a new record.

Are you overweight? And if you are, why remain so? A normal figure is possible to anyone who has a phonograph and will give Wallace's music method of reducing a chance. The above should be sufficient proof of this, but Wallace still offers free proof in your own case.

Your simple request on the handy form below brings the full first lesson free of any charge whatever. A regular-sized, and double-face phonograph record, and photographic chart with complete instructions. Pay nothing; promise nothing, except to try it. Results will cause you to send for the rest of his course in a hurry.

Don't ponder another day as to whether Wallace can reduce you. Tear out this coupon, and let him prove he can.

Important: Wallace is the originator of Reducing Record , and they are the result of many years' study and experience. Records without the name Wallace are NOT Reducing Records.

WALLACE,
630 S. Wabash Ave., Chicago.

Please send record for the first reducing lesson; free and prepaid. I will either enroll, or mail back your record at the end of a five-day trial.

To free your skin from blemishes—the right way

ASK a skin specialist why it is that your skin is continually breaking out with disfiguring little blemishes. He will almost certainly tell you that this condition comes from an outside infection.

Authorities on the skin now say that skin blemishes are generally caused by bacteria and parasites which are carried into the pores from outside, through dust and soot in the air. By the following simple treatment you can gradually but thoroughly free your skin from blemishes:

EACH night just before retiring wash your face with Woodbury's Facial Soap and warm water, finishing with a dash of cold water, and dry carefully.

Now dip the tips of your fingers in warm water and rub them on the cake of Woodbury's until they are covered with a heavy, cream-like lather.

Cover each blemish with a thick coat of this and leave it on for ten minutes.

Rinse your face thoroughly, first with clear hot water, then with cold.

SUPPLEMENT this treatment with the regular use of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your daily toilet, to keep the new skin which is constantly forming free from blemishes.

Get a cake of Woodbury's today, at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 25-cent cake will last for a month or six weeks of this treatment and for general cleansing use. The Andrew Jergens Co., Cincinnati, New York, and Perth, Ontario.

Snow White and Rosy Red

Framed by the rosy curve of her lovely lips, her smile reveals the flashing white of perfect teeth.

Her beauty blooms triumphant over Time because she knows the secret of a healthy mouth.

Pyorrhea, which attacks youth's radiance as a grub destroys the budding rose, has passed her by.

Do you face your telltale mirror as fearlessly as she?

Four out of every five people who pass the fortieth milestone have Pyorrhea. Thousands younger are not immune.

Its danger signal is tender, bleeding gums. Quickly its deadly work is done, unless you halt it in its course.

The gums recede from the teeth. Germs attack the roots, seep through the system. Sickness follows, the teeth decay, loosen, drop out or must be pulled.

You can stop Pyorrhea abruptly in its course of havoc. At the first sign of warning, see your dentist for treatment.

Then go to your druggist, buy a tube of Forhan's For the Gums, and use it regularly.

Forhan's For the Gums is the scientific formula of R. J. Forhan, D. D. S.

It will prevent Pyorrhea—or check its progress, if used in time and used consistently.

Forhan's is a pleasant dentifrice that leaves the teeth white and clean, keeps the gums pink, firm and healthy.

Brush Your Teeth With Forhan's—How to Use It

Use it twice daily, your in and your out. Wet your brush in cold water, place a half-inch of the refreshing, healing paste on it, then brush your teeth up and down. Use a rolling motion to clean the crevices. Brush the grinding and back surfaces of the teeth. Massage your gums with your Forhan-coated brush—gently at first until the gums harden, then more vigorously. If the gums are very tender, massage with the finger, instead of the brush. If gum-shrinkage has already set in, use Forhan's according to directions, and consult a dentist immediately for special treatment.

DO YOU REMEMBER 'WAY BACK WHEN ----

It was all because they were superbly healthy

About her were women in their thirties and forties—buoyant, radiant, vivacious, with a charm that drew everyone around them—while she, many years their junior, with all her sparkle gone, was losing her hold upon people.

Why the difference? It was all because they were superbly healthy, while her vitality was slipping away.

Health is normal, not exceptional. Failing strength means just this: something is hindering the body from performing its two vital functions: either from building up the living cells which compose it, or from throwing off the poisonous waste which gathers in the intestines.

The fresh living cells of Fleischmann's Yeast contain a natural food—with the very elements which help the body perform these two vital functions.

Like any other plant or vegetable, yeast produces the best results when fresh and "green"—not dried or "killed." Fleischmann's Yeast is the highest grade living yeast—always fresh. It is not a medicine, it is a natural food. Results cannot be expected unless it is eaten regularly.

Everywhere physicians and hospitals are prescribing Fleischmann's Yeast to correct constipation, skin disorders and to restore appetite and digestion.

"I was on the verge of collapse"

"So irritable I lost nearly all of my friends," writes a woman in Washington. "So weak I couldn't carry on an ordinary conversation.

"Today I would like to tell every nervous person on earth the wonderful cure yeast has been to me. Friends cannot believe it is I. Wrinkles gone, nervous twitching gone and I feel like a million dollars."

Eat two or three cakes a day regularly—plain, or spread on crackers, or mixed with water or milk. If you prefer, get six cakes at a time—they will keep in a cool, dry place two or three days. Begin to know what real health means! Be sure you get Fleischmann's Yeast. All grocers have it.

Richard Hudnut presents

the new Twin Compact that his most discriminating customers have made famous

FOR three generations the house of Richard Hudnut has had for its clientele women who have, without exception, demanded the highest quality and the latest mode.

These very women are now making the newest Richard Hudnut product, the Five-to-one Twin Compact, this season's greatest success in toilet accessories.

So Different

They have been quick to recognize that here was not just another powder and rouge compact—with perhaps some slight improvements over those they were familiar with—

But an entirely new and different kind of compact.

A twin compact that contains five times as much powder as rouge—the proportions women actually use.

A compact case that keeps powder and rouge so separated they cannot possibly get mixed. Each has its own separate opening, its own soft puff, and its own ample mirror.

Refillers, too

A case that can be refilled more easily and with greater satisfaction than any other compact case. The refillers really do fit as perfectly as the original compacts.

Serviceable? Very—but also more beautiful than you can imagine. The case itself is a delight just to look at. Like a delicate bit of jewelry—truly the success of the season.

If There Is a Moral to This Diverting Tale, It Is: Beware How You Befriend a Dog with a Tin Can Tied to His Tail.

GARRETT PRICE

"You couldn't help liking some people at first sight."

SOME marriages are inevitable, some accidental, some so marvelously unexpected that only a miracle surely can have created them. Of such a miracle was the marriage of James Todhunter. Not one of his immediate circle, a small and percipient circle, it may be said, understood in the very least how it had come about. Here he was, the most confirmed, the most saturnine, the most reserved of all bachelors, and there he was, only a month later, engaged to a pretty but silly young woman and then a fortnight after that married and lone for.

It was not as though he were a chicken, being forty-three years of age, long, tall, thin, and black in appearance, with the heaviest of black mustaches and black, beetling eyebrows that would have frightened most women out of their senses, and if the black eyebrows hadn't done it his literary reputation certainly would, because it's natural for any woman to suppose that the author of books with such titles as "The Esoteric Tendency Toward Art in the Early Hebrews," and "The Mathematical Principles of Milton's Prosody," and "Aether and Ether; or, Gas and Common Sense" (this last his only really frivolous work), must be so clever and so superior that mundane affairs like clothes and tea parties should never enter his head at all.

This was well enough for women who knew Todhunter only from a distance, but it was surprising that his lifelong friend Mallory, also a confirmed bachelor, should be so deeply amazed at this marriage. It took Mallory off his feet and laid him on his back and stamped upon him. He was a little, round, fat man with rosy cheeks, very tempting to stamp upon, and as he explained to his friends in his rather high, excited treble, "I can't understand it. It isn't as though she had an idea in her head. No one knew better than Todhunter the absurdity of getting married. It must be witchcraft." It was not, however, witchcraft, and the way that it happened was this.

One thing that very few people knew about James Todhunter was that he was exceedingly lonely, and another thing that nobody knew was that he was exceedingly shy. Every one of his friends and acquaintances would have roared with laughter had you spoken of him as a shy man, but, as is so often the case, that same brazen exterior with its supercilious glance from beneath the beetling eyebrows, that rather lazy, drawling "O, do you think so?", all this that looked like conceit was in truth timidity. He was a shy man because he was a modest man, and he was a modest man because he knew that he had not touched even the fringes of the great subjects that he was studying. Very few suspected him of being a lonely man, and yet they might have done so had they considered with any real attention the large house looking on to Regents Park in which he lived in solitary grandeur with a butler, a cook, and a maid servant, in whose confines he occasionally gave dreary little parties and in whose library he sat studying hour after hour, absorbed in a way and yet suddenly starting to consciousness and wishing that he had somebody suddenly to come in and shout at him or clap him on the back.

On most afternoons he took his walk in Regents park, viewing from an apparently supercilious distance the children playing their games, the lovers exchanging confidences, the unemployed discussing wages in sinister twos and threes, the animals on the Mappin terraces looking up to heaven and wondering when on earth they would taste freedom again. Supercilious, yes, but only apparently. He would have loved to collect one or two of the dirty children, to have given five shillings to one of the unemployed. He sighed with a kind of pathetic curiosity as he watched the lovers and he looked at the animals as though they alone of all the creatures in the park had feelings that he himself could understand.

One fine afternoon in May he sat down on a seat under a tree, a long way from anybody, and tried to puzzle out the intricacies of a chapter of his book "The Lake Poets and Natural Symbolism" which he was then writing. Lake Poets on that lovely May afternoon seemed surprisingly gray and distant. Wordsworth was a silly old prig, Southey a conceited ass, Coleridge a drug taking maniac, and De Quincey a spiteful old woman. He hated the lot of them and he looked at two babies far away on the green grass and cursed himself for a self-contained idiot because he had not one or two of his own whose noses he could blow, whose eyes he could wipe, and whose hair he could curl beneath his hand when he felt lonely and dispirited.

IT was just then that he perceived, not very far from him, sprung apparently from nowhere and gazing at him with nervous, eager apprehension, a little dog. Now he fancied that he had no love of animals and he was encouraged in this belief by his admirable servants, who hated animals in the house and said so, but there was something about this little dog which inevitably attracted his attention. It was perhaps a puppy, but not a very young puppy, and one of its immediate characteristics was that it was very difficult to be sure of anything about it, so indiscriminate was it, so long where it ought to have been short, so thick where it ought to have been thin, containing, indeed, so many dogs in one dog that it was impossible to give it a real family name. It was perhaps more of the Sealyham tribe than of any other—that is, it was some sort of a terrier with rough hair that nature had intended to be white, that was now here gray and there entirely black.

Todhunter could perceive that it was in a state of great nervousness, that it was ill fed, and that it had tied to its stumpy tail a dirty piece of string with a tin can adhering thereto. One of the immediate absurdities of it was that the can was almost as large as the dog, being, indeed, a sort of bucket, and when the dog made an apprehensive movement the can seemed to have a life of its own and to bump about on the grass in a most alarming manner. The dog was saying as plainly as a dog could say, "Please relieve me of this horrible thing—take it and throw it away so that I may never see it again." At the same time it was also saying, "Relieve me of it without coming any closer to me, because I trust no man and have the very best reasons in the world for that misbelief."

It was a pathetic little face that looked at Todhunter, the more pathetic from the fact that its rather overlarge nose had a big black spot like a penny piece on one nostril which was ill balanced by another big black spot on the opposite ear. The nose quivered in the air, the eyes glittered with unshed tears, the tail with its hideous appendage bumped up and down with eager anxiety and excitement.

Todhunter looked as he always looked, as though he had but just come out of a tailor's shop, his black clothes as stiff and stern as though they were a suit of armor. He was, indeed, sitting upright on the seat, more like a model from Madame Tussaud's than anything else you can imagine. Nevertheless, within this iron exterior his heart was soft and was touched in spite of itself by the trembling image that looked at him with such beseeching eyes, but refused to move an inch nearer to him. He attempted to lure the dog toward him; he made those absurd noises that human beings make to animals and babies, a kind of chirrup, a sort of drunken whistle, a manner of gurgling in the throat. The dog recognized these advances and banged his tail and the can with it more vigorously than before, but he refused to budge an inch.

"Come, then," said Todhunter, "pretty little dog, come along, then. I'll take it off for you. Come and let me take it off."

The dog slobbered a little at the mouth but refused to come an inch further. Todhunter got up from his seat, took a step forward, and the dog backed away. Irritated and determined now to achieve his purpose, Todhunter moved resolutely on, the dog resolutely back. There then began a strange sort of game, the animal moving round in a kind of circle. The dog's eyes never left Todhunter's face. They were appealing, miserable, sensitive, starved, longing eyes, but they had not in them an atom of trust in any human being in this world. Todhunter then had an inspiration. He went back to his seat, took off his top hat, and put it down on the grass in front of him. This action alone showed what a long way his soul had progressed since he first sighted the little dog, as he was normally terrified of sitting in the open without any covering to his head, especially on a warm day like this.

The dog saw the hat, so large and black and strange, growing apparently straight out of the grass, something that he had never seen before, something possibly that was good to eat. His puppy spirit also, long defeated and stamped upon, nevertheless finally indestructible, rose again within him. This might be something to play with as well as something to eat. The puppy expected it to move. It did not. The puppy expected it to make some kind of a noise. It did not. The puppy expected it to smell. That perhaps it did, but from the distance he was keeping he could not be quite sure. There was a smell, but whether it was of the earth, or of the sky, or of some unknown animal he could not be sure. His curiosity began to get the better of him. He made a little wriggle, expecting the strange black thing to wriggle also, but when it did not reply he was more intrigued than ever. He advanced a little, and so eager was his excitement that he never noticed the rattle of the can behind him. He advanced closer yet, and then lay down flat on the ground, his nose on his front paws, and stared steadily at the thing, his appetite rising, his tail as erect as the can would allow it to be. Still the black thing did not respond. Then he came quite close to it, forgetting in his

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

REG. U.S. PAT. OFF.

THERE'S NO PLACE LIKE HOME EVEN IF IT IS AN OLD JUG.

EVERYTHING was gone. The great fire that swept the Teenie Weenie village left nothing but little heaps of ashes to show where the Teenie Weenie houses had stood. The little people escaped with only the nighties on their tiny backs. Everything they owned had been destroyed. The Lady of Fashion had no hairpins to do up her hair, and the Turk had to make her a few out of some fine wire he found. Their shoes had been burned, and the little folks had to bind their tiny feet with string and rags to keep them from being bruised on the rough ground.

"Well, there is one thing certain," said the General the morning after the fire, "we can't settle here again, so we might just as well begin looking for some place to live for the time being."

After much hunting about the Teenie Weenies finally discovered an old jug that lay near the big dump. It was well screened from big eyes, and the little folks decided the jug would be warm and dry and plenty good enough until they could find a better place. It's true, it smelled a little of vinegar, "but beggars can't be choosers," the Old Soldier said, so the Teenie Weenies took possession.

The jug lay on its side and the Clown made a ladder out of sticks, which made it convenient for the little folks to get in and out of their new home. Some of the Teenie Weenies carried in great armloads of thistledown for beds and soon they had a safe place to sleep.

The Turk found a few iron tools among the ruins of the tool house, and with these he set to work making others, while the Cook began to work on a shelter for a kitchen and dining room.

While the men were busy the Teenie Weenie women were not idle, for clothes had to be made. Several old scraps of cloth were found and the women managed to make them into clothes for the little people.

"Say! Jimminie Jinks!" cried the Dunce when he was given one of the suits the women had made. "Say! This is a sissy sort of dress. Do you think I'm goin' to wear that?" and he turned his small nose up in a superior way.

"It's the best we can do, Dunce," said the Lady of Fashion. "We have hardly anything to work with. We had to cut the cloth with a big bread knife and we are using pieces of wire for needles."

"Well, you don't have to wear it," cried Sally Gull with a toss of her bobbed head. "You can run around in your nightshirt just as long as you like—the way Wee Willie Winkie did—let's see, how did it go? O, yes——

Wee Willie Winkie runs through the town,
Upstairs, downstairs, in his nightgown,
Rapping at the window, crying through the lock,
"Are the children all in bed, for it's now 8 o'clock?"

All the Teenie Weenies laughed at the Dunce, and it made the foolish fellow angry.

"I'll get even with you—you see if I don't," he growled. He pouted all day, and that night he did a most wicked thing. When all the Teenie Weenies had crawled into the jug for the night and when they were asleep, the Dunce quietly climbed out. He quickly found a long piece of string he had hidden away during the day, and climbing to the top of the jug he tied it securely to the handle. Next he slid to the ground and carried the other end of the string as far as it would reach. Then he dragged a piece of meat out from under some leaves and fastened it to the end of the string. He carefully covered the string for some little distance from the meat with leaves, and then hid himself in an old tomato can near by.

After a long wait the Dunce heard something stirring about, and presently a dog came prowling along.

"Here's where I get even all right, all right," muttered the Dunce, peering out of the can.

The dog soon smelled the meat and quickly caught it up in his strong teeth.

When he discovered the string he gave a great tug, which, of course, pulled the jug over and set it rolling down a little hill. The rolling jug made so much noise the poor dog was frightened and, dropping the meat, he set off as fast as he could run. The jug rolled over twice before it stopped against a thistle. The frightened Teenie Weenies, who had been tumbled into a great heap when the jug rolled over, now came swarming out of the neck of the jug like a stream of water. Not a single Teenie Weenie was hurt, but they certainly did have a great scare and you may be quite sure the Dunce got a well deserved whipping.

eagerness the human being behind it. He put out a paw and touched it. The surface was strange, unlike anything that he had ever known before. He gave it a push and it moved backward. He bit the edge of it with his teeth and at that same moment Todhunter caught him by the scruff of his back and took him on to his knee.

WHEN Mr. Todhunter felt upon his lap the trembling body of the dog some strange thing happened to his soul. Even as the dog was there quivering so had he also quivered. Even as the dog was anticipating at every moment some blow from above, so had he all his life been anticipating. Even as the dog wriggled under his hand, trying to withdraw himself into some dark corner of safe obscurity, so had he wriggled, so had he longed for darkness. The wretched creature squinted up at him, showing a large piece of white in each eye, then began to wag his tail, then stopped as though it suddenly occurred to him that this show of amiability might be dangerous, then lay quite flat, awkwardly on Todhunter's rather bony knees, sagging through in the space between his legs, hanging on, as it were, "with nails set and terror free," to quote a long forgotten poem by Mr. Thomas Campbell.

Todhunter clumsily untied the can and kicked it into limbo. Then he stroked the dog, murmuring to it, trying to reassure it. Gradually it tranquillized, its heart beating with less and less fury, and even at last it put out its tongue, licked Todhunter's finger, and discovering there, I suppose, the essence of a soap new to its canine experience, began eagerly to devour the whole hand.

The feel of that rough tongue was something quite new to Todhunter. Very seldom in his long life had any beings, human or otherwise, made to him physical demonstrations of affection. But few men had patted him on the back or laid a friendly hand on his shoulder. Women had kissed him from duty and family custom, never because they thought him kissable. No one had grasped him by the hand as though to hurt him. No one, even when he had been a small boy, had tucked him up in bed and told him not to be afraid of the dark. He was desperately moved by the dog's advances, stared out across the grass in front of him, feeling the warm body beneath his hand and the little beating heart, realizing more than ever before what impossible sticks the Lake poets were, how remote, how absurd, how unworthy to lay toll upon the time and intelligence of later generations.

To cut a long story short, he started homeward with the dog creeping at his heels. To an uninitiated observer it must have seemed that the dog had but now been severely chastised and was crawling miserably behind his severe and inhuman master. Indeed, one or two threw indignant glances at the tall, black browed, striding man and wondered how so large a human being could be cruel to so small a morsel of dog, but as a matter of fact it had been this dog's way for a long time past to creep about the earth like the accursed serpent, having discovered that the more he crept, the less likely he was to be abused, the less likely, in fact, to be noticed at all, and, although he crept, he was entirely determined not to desert his new friend. There was kindness beneath those eyebrows, tenderness in the stroke of that hand, and he knew it. So into 25 York Terrace he crawled, slithered along the passage, and obscured himself as completely as possible beneath the umbrella stand. There the evil glance of Mordant, the butler, discovered him. Mordant was like a butler on the stage, one of those large, stout, red faced butlers with immobile countenance, mouth sarcastically but discreetly shaped, and beautiful clothes. "Get out, yer varmint," he murmured toward the umbrella stand, thinking that the dog had crawled in unnoticed from the street.

It was one of the really awkward moments of Todhunter's life. I am afraid that he feared Mordant. "It's all right," he said, stammering in spite of himself and struggling to adopt that voice that he used when addressing girls' colleges and meetings of the Geographical Society. "I brought him in."

"You, sir?" said Mordant, staring.

"Yes, poor little beast. He hasn't had anything to eat for days. I found him being teased by some boys. Give him some food and a bath and then bring him up to the library."

"You're not," said Mordant, "you're not intending, sir, ahem, to keep him?"

"I can say nothing about the future," said Todhunter, very haughtily. "Please do as I ask."

He sat up then in his library wondering whether the dog were being kindly treated, and waiting, with an impatience that surprised himself, for the animal's arrival. Nearly an hour later Mordant appeared in the doorway with a white, shivering object in his arms, and, most astonishing of all things, a smile on his face.

"He's not a bad little animal, sir," said Mordant. "Looks better when he's washed. Took to the cat in a surprising way." And he put him down on the floor and retired, with great dignity and condescension.

The dog staggered across the polished boards of the library floor, stopping every once and again to give himself a shake, as though he were trying to drive from his system the extraordinary bathing experience that he had just been through.

When he had staggered half way towards his new master he saw the tasseled end of the rope of the window curtain, a deep and magnificent red, swaying ever so slightly before him. He steadied himself to watch this; he moved a few paces towards it and steadied himself again. He then went down on his front paws, his eyes staring at it with utter absorption, and there proceeded from somewhere inside his body a strange noise like a kettle just on the boil. He advanced closer, raised a paw, and pushed it ever so slightly. Then what his soul had longed for, but scarcely dared to except, occurred. The rope swung. He hit it again. It swung more violently. With excited rumblings he was at it and upon it, catching it between his teeth, worrying it, pulling it, letting it go again, tumbling, in his eagerness, on his head, pulling himself up again, rolling once, when he missed it altogether, over on to his back, and then suddenly pausing, sitting down on his haunches and looking up at Todhunter with eyes that were bright with happiness, a body quivering with excitement. From that moment he may be said to have been firmly established in the Todhunter household.

HE was christened with the commonplace name of Bob, because Todhunter, with all his knowledge and erudition, could think of nothing better. He devoted himself completely to his master, following him about whenever he was in the house, refusing to have his meal anywhere but in Todhunter's presence, and sleeping on the end of Todhunter's bed. He very quickly acclimatized himself to the ways of the house, was no trouble to anybody, and the cook would have ensnared him body and soul and turned him into the merest kitchen dog (an ambition that every cook in the world most unfortunately possesses) had not his loyal soul been capable of only one attachment at a time.

Then came the great day which was to change Todhunter's life. There arrived an afternoon, fine, warm, and beautiful, when Todhunter thought he would like a stroll in the park. The dog, as was his habit, presented himself in the hall, wagging his tail in a frenzy, his eyes raised passionately to his master's face, his whole body one throbbing appeal. Todhunter yielded, took the lead which Mordant had purchased, and strode off, the dog at his heels. They went up into the inner circle, passed the Botanical Gardens, through the little gate, over the railings, on to the great sweep of green that faces the Zoo.

Today this green was covered with families, babies, and cricketers. It was early in June, and everybody who could was playing a ball game of one sort or another, from the very elegant teams in white flannel who were playing like aristocrats, with a large crowd watching them, to four small boys who had a stick and an old tattered ball and spent their time delightedly screaming the one at the other.

Now, how should Todhunter have known that to this particular dog anything in the shape of a ball was like drink to a drunkard, opium to a Chinaman, and a hat shop to a woman? Indeed, more than these. A ball flying in the air was his own soul projecting into the ether, something that he could no more hope to resist than a cat can resist a mouse. And here was suddenly the whole space of the earth, the blue of the air, the very winds of heaven itself, filled with flying balls, balls of every kind, color, and size, rising, falling, rolling, leaping, the very final paradise which he had always dreamed and never hoped to see. At once he was off, his tail up, his legs scuttling behind him, his nose in the air. First, he made for two nursemaids and some babies, but here the ball was too large for him to secure it with his teeth, so he merely wagged his tail at them and scuttled across to three little girls who had a tennis ball that they were throwing very inaccuratetly the one to the other.

The moment he had it in his mouth he was off again and all three little girls set up a howl that could surely have been heard from one end of the park to the other, and that brought two stout, perspiring women hastily to the rescue. Todhunter reached them just as they were looking angrily around for some one to abuse. "I do beg your pardon," he began, quite breathless with his hurry (he was, of course, not in the very best condition), "my little dog . . . I assure you I didn't intend . . . nobody knew. . . ."

They were mollified by his obvious agitation. The dog was rescued and brought back, the tennis ball, punctured in several places, dragged from its mouth, some money offered to pay for the ball and haughtily rejected, and by the time this was just coming to an honorable but somewhat awkward conclusion, the dog was off again, this time plunging into the middle of the elegant cricket match, where two men were running for their lives between the wickets. Todhunter had just time to see the dog run gayly with them, bolt into the wickets and knock off the bales, leap delightfully upon a stout and indignant umpire, and then run after the cricket ball which had been flung too far by one fielder, rush at it as though it were a live thing, push it with his feet and then go for the legs of the fielder who picked it up.

There followed then an enchanting half hour, enchanting, that was, for the onlookers, but not exactly so for the unfortunate man in a top hat and a tail coat who, trying to catch the dog, inevitably just missed him and was, as all the delighted observers agreed, a most ludicrous and helpless figure. Every one watched, applauded, shouted, laughed, and incited the animal to further exploits. The dog had never known such a half hour before and will pretty certainly never know such a half hour again. When at last he was caught by a stout woman attended by a large crowd of children, nursemaids, and small boys, Todhunter was a wreck of heat and agitation.

"Poor little thing," said the woman, concernedly. "Must have a little bit of fun at times."

All the crowd offered comments with that frankness and humor that so especially belongs to the cockney. A great deal of advice was offered. "Put 'im on the lead. Shove 'is 'ead in a bag. Take 'im 'ome and tie 'im up. 'Ave a bath, mister, yer 'ot. Stick yer top 'at over 'im," and so on.

There followed then the agitating business of trying to fasten the lead on to his collar. The clasp was a new one and very stiff. The dog wriggled into every shape and size, and finally the really remarkable vision was offered to an admiring world of the author of "The Lake Poets and Natural Symbolism," kneeling in the middle of Regents park, his hat off, his tie waving in the wind, his face crimson, trying to attach a very small dog and a long piece of leathe- while a continually increasing crowd laughed, admired, and expostulated.

The scene might have continued for a long time had not a soft voice been heard to say, "Perhaps I can do it for you," and Todhunter, looking up, beheld two of the loveliest eyes and one of the prettiest mouths in the world, set in a pattern of pink and white against the bluest of skies. A young lady bent towards him. For a moment his hand touched hers. In another second the lead was adjusted; for the general public the game was over, but for Todhunter it had only just begun.

MORDANT greeted his master's return that afternoon with that air of strangled surprise that was so especially his own. He suggested a bath and changing into evening clothes a little earlier than usual. "You look warm, sir," was all he actually said.

Todhunter, lying in his bath and looking up at the ceiling, was conscious of the strangest mixture of feeling, a mixture like some spiritual indigestion, as though his soul had been indulging in a meal of the feelings, crab, duckling, and ice pudding, all at one and the same time. The dog, who followed him everywhere, was sitting on the bath mat looking up to heaven, patiently waiting for the moment when his master, who had mysteriously dropped into a large white hole, would once again mysteriously rise. He was preparing his own little celebration of barks, gurgles, and Muller exercises for that notable occasion. Todhunter tried, his face just so happily extending above the water, to straighten out his thoughts and discover his line of action. For once they would not straighten, being perpetually crossed and confused by the recollection of those beautiful eyes, that lovely mouth, and the softness of that white hand.

He half rose, peered over the edge of the bath into the eyes of the dog, wondered what had happened to him, thought it must be the dog, stretched out a hand to pat him, decided that it wasn't the dog after all, found himself to his amazement longing for the next afternoon when he could walk in the park once again, and stung to sudden madness by his perception of this weakness, jumped out of his bath, scattering water to right and left, causing the dog to bark ferociously.

The next day came. It was fine and beautiful, and he found himself to his horror actually plotting to launch the dog towards unsuspecting strangers in order that some scene might be created that would evoke the goddess from the surrounding bushes. She was not evoked. Five babies were upset, three tennis balls ruined, two elderly gentlemen made almost apoplectic from temper, one old lady delighted with what she called "the little darling's playful ways," one policeman insulted so seriously that he had to be placated with a gift, but no goddess.

It was that evening, in solitude in his own house, that showed Todhunter what he had really become. He, a settled and solidified bachelor, who had escaped the dangerous age, had decided quite finally that women were nothing to him, now he sat in his large, chilly library and sighed and even groaned and flung the Poet Laureate's erudite work on Milton's Prosody from one end of the library to the other. He behaved, I am sorry to say, like a maudlin sentimentalist over the dog. He fondled him, caressed him, tickled his ears, muttered absurd things into his mouth, and finally

RALPH GRAVES is (O, my dears, how I hate to hurt you!) the husband of Marjorie Seaman. You last saw him in "Kindred of the Dust," but he's been in many other pictures. It is only recently, however, that his work has been creating comment. He was with Essanay for two years, has been with Paramount, Universal, Metro, and National. He's 6 feet 1 inch tall, weighs 170 pounds (look him up on the scales and see if that's right), and has brown hair and blue eyes.—Mae Tinee.

MARY THURMAN will be Richard Barthelmess' leading woman in "The Bondboy." Miss Thurman was born in Richfield, Utah. She started her screen career with Fine Arts in "Sunshine Dad." Since then she has played in many films for many companies. She is 5 feet 3 inches tall, weighs 123, and has chestnut hair and gray eyes.—Mae Tinee. (Photograph from Nelson Evans.)

BUSTER KEATON signs his checks Joseph Francis Keaton. He is otherwise known as the brother-in-law of Norma and Constance Talmadge and the husband of Natalie Talmadge. He is also a brand new father. He has never been known to laugh save on Sundays, holidays, and other days.—Mae Tinee.

TOM MIX needn't smile and look pleasant, please, because this picture of him isn't being printed because he's in it. We present it that you may have a photograph of "Tony," Mr. Mix's horse, that starred recently in a Fox film called "Just Tony." Right off the reel, what star do you think Tony resembles?—Mae Tinee.

eagerness the human being behind it. He put out a paw and touched it. The surface was strange, unlike anything that he had ever known before. He gave it a push and it moved backward. He bit the edge of it with his teeth and at that same moment Todhunter caught him by the scruff of his [illegible] Gardens, through the little gate, over the railings, on to the great sweep of green that faces the Zoo.

Today this green was covered with families, babies, and cricketers. It was early in June, and everybody who could was playing a ball game of one sort or another, from the very elegant tennis in white flannel who he feared Mordant. "It's all right," he said, stammering in spite of himself and struggling to adopt that voice that he used when addressing girls' colleges and meetings of the Geographical Society. "I brought him in."

"You, sir?" said Mordant, staring.

"Yes, sir. [illegible] He hasn't had let him sleep on his lap, sitting there staring in front of him till every bone in his body ached, but he would not wake the animal, that little messenger of Jove, that little evoker of the goddess, that canine symbol of Cupid.

It was undoubtedly the dog's best evening. There never was, there probably never will be again, such a sentimentalist as that dog. It was not the dog's fault. He had been created a sentimentalist. The one thing in life that he wanted was to be loved and caressed and it was the one thing in life that hitherto he had not obtained. Unlike most dogs, his stomach was nothing to his heart, and he would desert any bone for a caress. Not that with all this he was entirely soft. He had the fighting quality, he had his dislikes and showed them, but when he loved, he loved with all his heart.

On that great evening he just gave himself up completely to his master, and how was he to tell that it was not of him that his master was thinking, but of something quite different, something far more dangerous? It was well that he made the most of that evening; so far as Todhunter was concerned, it was the dog's last, because on the next day, another lovely afternoon of sun and color and scented leaves, the goddess was evoked, stepped forth from the bushes, gave a little startled smile of recognition when Todhunter raised his hat, said, "Why, there's the dear little dog," entered into conversation about dogs in general and of what particular breed this dog in the majority was, passed from that to remarks about the weather, how badly rain was needed, from thence to how the weather always broke when she took her holiday, and it was a shame, because she loved tennis so, and from that to why in general things were never quite as you would have them to be, and she supposed that it was because it wouldn't be good for people's characters if they were, and from that again to character and discipline, and finally the last step towards how you couldn't help liking some people at first sight, and she really didn't know why it was so, and she supposed it was foolish to go so often on first impressions as she did, but that one way and another she had never been deceived, although her mother kept on saying to her, "Look out, Dulcie, you'll be taken in one day," but up to now she hadn't been.

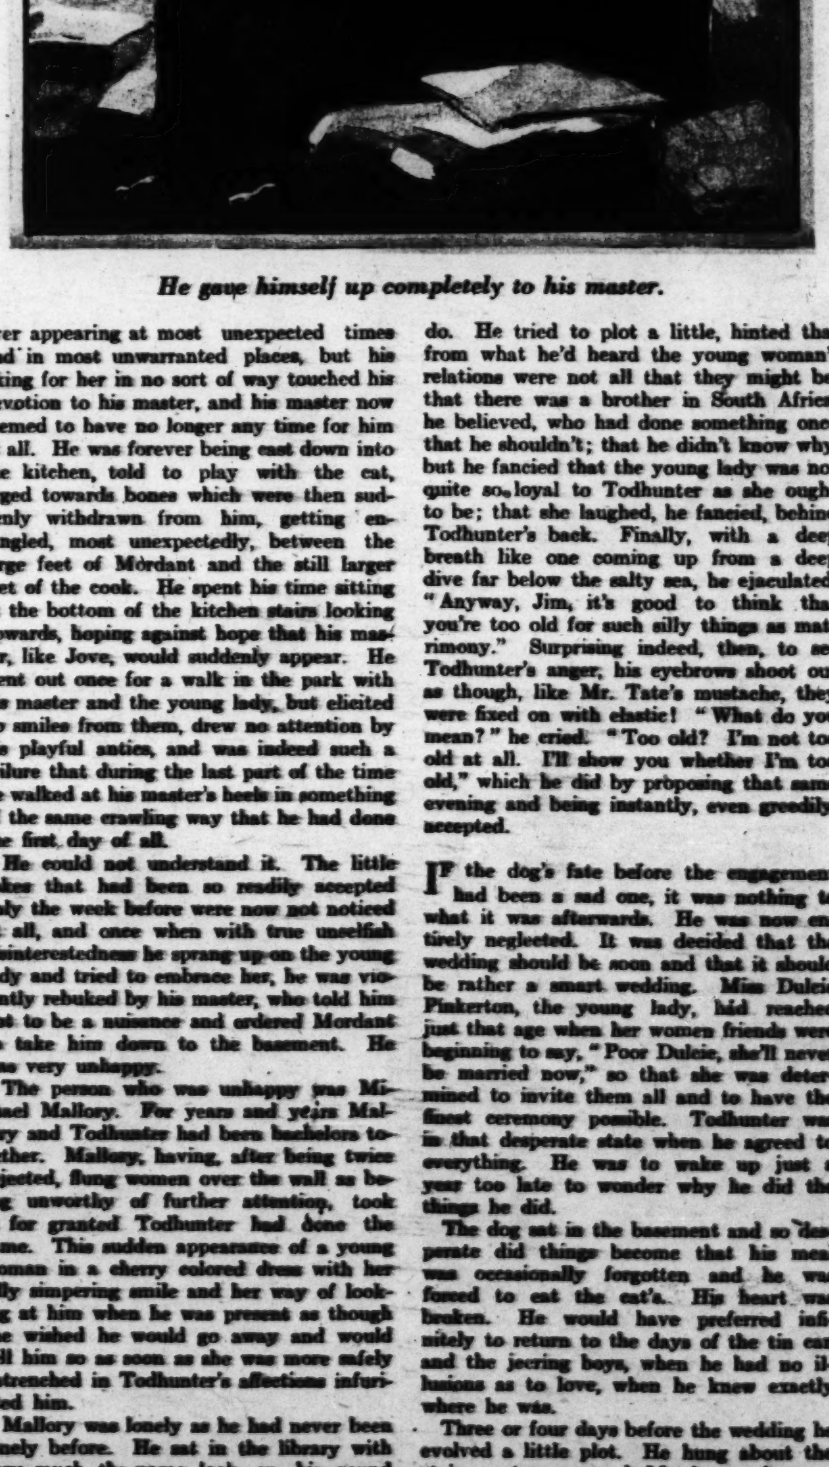
By this time they were half across the grass and almost directly under observation from a very long legged, melancholy looking animal on top of the Mappin terraces, whose thoroughly pessimistic outlook should have been a warning to both of them, but was not.

Todhunter, it may frankly be said, was unaware whether he were walking on his head or his heels, whether he was in London or Timbuctoo, whether his heart, which was beating like a hammer, resided in his calves or somewhere just above his left ear. He only knew that she was wearing some wonderful color that was like cherries, but wasn't cherries exactly, and that when she smiled the world took a sudden slip into space and was only hauled back from disappearing altogether by the strongest exercise of judgment on his part.

HERE two things add to the development of my story. One was the entrance of Mallory, the bachelor friend of Todhunter. The other was the beginning of the tragedy of the dog.

It is difficult, of course, to know exactly what goes on in a dog's mind, but we may suppose, without venturing into the realms of psycho-analysis or treading on Dr. Jung's German toes, that that evening made glorious by the caresses of his master had roused in him highest hopes of a splendid and slobbery future. In truth it was at that very moment that his decline in his master's affections began.

How could he tell that in following his natural playful instincts on that wonderful ball flying afternoon he had laid a pit for his own destruction? How could he tell that it was not himself that his master needed but love and an escape from loneliness? He liked the young woman, who was now forever appearing at most unexpected times and in most unwarranted places, but his liking for her in no sort of way touched his devotion to his master, and his master now seemed to have no longer any time for him at all. He was forever being cast down into the kitchen, told to play with the cat, urged towards bones which were then suddenly withdrawn from him, getting entangled, most unexpectedly, between the large feet of Mordant and the still larger feet of the cook. He spent his time sitting at the bottom of the kitchen stairs looking upwards, hoping against hope that his master, like Jove, would suddenly appear. He went out once for a walk in the park with his master and the young lady, but elicited no smiles from them, drew no attention by his playful antics, and was indeed such a failure that during the last part of the time he walked at his master's heels in something of the same crawling way that he had done the first day of all.



He gave himself up completely to his master.

He could not understand it. The little jokes that had been so readily accepted only the week before were now not noticed at all, and once when with true unselfish disinterestedness he sprang up on the young lady and tried to embrace her, he was violently rebuked by his master, who told him not to be a nuisance and ordered Mordant to take him down to the basement. He was very unhappy.

The person who was unhappy was Michael Mallory. For years and years Mallory and Todhunter had been bachelors together. Mallory, having, after being twice rejected, flung women over the wall as being unworthy of further attention, took it for granted Todhunter had done the same. This sudden appearance of a young woman in a cherry colored dress with her silly simpering smile and her way of looking at him when he was present as though she wished he would go away and would tell him so as soon as she was more safely entrenched in Todhunter's affections infuriated him.

Mallory was lonely as he had never been lonely before. He sat in the library with very much the same look on his round chubby face that the dog was wearing down in the basement. If Todhunter deserted him he did not know what he would do. He tried to plot a little, hinted that from what he'd heard the young woman's relations were not all that they might be, that there was a brother in South Africa, he believed, who had done something once that he shouldn't; that he didn't know why, but he fancied that the young lady was not quite so loyal to Todhunter as she ought to be; that she laughed, he fancied, behind Todhunter's back. Finally, with a deep breath like one coming up from a deep dive far below the salty sea, he ejaculated, "Anyway, Jim, it's good to think that you're too old for such silly things as matrimony." Surprising indeed, then, to see Todhunter's anger, his eyebrows shoot out as though, like Mr. Tate's mustache, they were fixed on with elastic! "What do you mean?" he cried. "Too old? I'm not too old at all. I'll show you whether I'm too old," which he did by proposing that same evening and being instantly, even greedily, accepted.

IF the dog's fate before the engagement had been a sad one, it was nothing to what it was afterwards. He was now entirely neglected. It was decided that the wedding should be soon and that it should be rather a smart wedding. Miss Dulcie Pinkerton, the young lady, had reached just that age when her women friends were beginning to say, "Poor Dulcie, she'll never be married now," so that she was determined to invite them all and to have the finest ceremony possible. Todhunter was in that desperate state when he agreed to everything. He was to wake up just a year too late to wonder why he did the things he did.

The dog sat in the basement and so desperate did things become that his meal was occasionally forgotten and he was forced to eat the cat's. His heart was broken. He would have preferred infinitely to return to the days of the tin can and the jeering boys, when he had no illusions as to love, when he knew exactly where he was.

Three or four days before the wedding he evolved a little plot. He hung about the stairs, outmaneuvered Mordant, who was now, of course, a very busy and self-important man, slipped into his master's bedroom, jumped on to his old accustomed place and curled at the foot of his master's bed. Here, with beating heart, he waited. At a late hour his master entered and for a while stood in front of the looking glass, slowly taking off his tie and unbuttoning his collar, and murmuring, like the hero of one of Mr. Rossetti's poems, over and over again, "Dulcie, Dulcie, Dulcie. Darling, darling." When at last his delirium for a moment yielded to the necessity of cleaning his teeth, he turned round towards the bed and saw the dog.

"Good heavens, what are you doing here?" he cried. The dog squinted at him out of the corner of both eyes, thumped his tail feebly and gave a beseeching wriggle of his body. "Can't have you here," said Todhunter. "Your proper place is the kitchen."

He went to the door, opened it and called "Mordant." That dignified creature was just then advancing, ponderously to bed. "Look here, Mordant, that dog's got in here again. Just take him downstairs, will you? Sorry to bother you."

The dog made one desperate effort of appeal, getting up on his haunches and begging as in his earlier, happier days he had been taught to do. All that occurred was that Mordant, grunting, caught him by his skin and dragged him downstairs, threw him into the cat's basket and so left him. The dog sighed himself to sleep.

THE wedding was over, the guests were at the house, Todhunter and his Dulcie had stood in the middle of the room receiving endless superficial congratulations from supercilious guests. The moment had come when the happy man must go up and change his clothes for the journey. Outside in the hall there were two figures. In the middle of the hall, stout, chubby, and miserable, was Mallory, staring desolately in front of him. In the middle of the staircase, looking absurd with a piece of ribbon round his neck, was the dog, also staring in front of him, hoping against hope for a kind word, a pat of the hand, something from somebody. "Hullo, Jim," said Mallory. "Hullo, old man," said Todhunter. "I must hurry up and get changed. We're off in a quarter of an hour."

Mallory waited for Todhunter to say something of the more tender sort, but it is the first duty of the Dulcies of this world to slaughter the pre-matrimonial friends. She had already hinted to her dear James that Mr. Mallory was really the sweetest of men but he was just a wee bit tiresome with his silly old stories over and over again and she wasn't sure whether he were quite so loyal to her dear James as her dear James thought him.

Mallory caught the eye of the dog. "I say, Jim," he suddenly said. "Hullo, what is it?" said Todhunter, turning at the foot of the stairs.

"Wasn't it through that dog," Mallory said, "that you met your wife?"

"Why, yes, it was," said Todhunter, but showing very plainly indeed that he wanted to escape.

"Not a bad idea that," said Mallory reflectively. "Acts as a kind of introducer, you know. After all," he put his finger in his mouth, a childish habit to which he was addicted, "it's never too late to mend. . . . I say, Jim, would you let me have the dog?"

Todhunter, half way up the stairs, passing the dog without looking at it, turned round. "Have the dog? Why, of course. Whatever do you want it for? I thought you didn't like dogs."

"O, I don't know." Mallory shifted from foot to foot. "Just an idea that occurred to me. Take him out for walks in the park, you know. That sort of thing. You'll let me have him?"

"Why, certainly!" cried Todhunter, disappearing. Mallory went up to the dog and stroked it, felt the whole of his heart warm to the responsive wriggle that the dog gave.

"Come along, old man," said Mallory. "You belong to me now. You may do me a good turn one day. Who knows?" They left the house together.

The watchful chaperon of the golden days was on the job every moment. When a young man finished dancing the young lady was brought straight over to her chaperon and sat down. Nowadays—!!

sentfully Bancroft comprehended this fact.

One twilight Craig sat at the piano playing Chopin nocturnes. Nancy had Ling Foo in her lap. Jenny was leaning against the piano. Bancroft sat in the Morris chair, his head back, studying the patch of reflected light on the ceiling. Craig turned.

"I say, you people. Thanksgiving in three days. Come up to my home and have dinner with me. Turkey, cranberry sauce, and mince pie. I'll set the hour at five-thirty, so we can have about two hours before theater. My aunt will come in; she always does. What do you say?"

Jenny answered for everybody. "Well, believe me, that's th' best music I ever heard! Will we go? On'y a busted subway could hold us back!"

To dine in a real home, thought Nancy, with rooms and rooms to meander about in, fine rugs on the floors, paintings and tapestry on the walls, and cozy bookshelves!

"Jenny is right," she said. "That is good music to three lonesome folks, who were dully planning dinner in a nearby restaurant. Of course we'll go."

Bancroft did not care particularly for the change in the plans of festival. He would now have to share these two with Craig, and be shunted to one side. He managed, however, to voice his acceptance heartily enough.

Craig departed, and Jenny sang his praises. Nancy turned on the lights and Bancroft approached a window and stared into the dim configuration of back yards. Two weeks, and beyond the purloining of the contract and prospectus material, the Great Adventure Company had not stirred in his direction. Battle, murder, and sudden death . . .

"I beg your pardon," he said.

"I was sayin'," said Jenny, "that you're booked to tote me th' rounds t'night. See you after th' show. Will you go, Nancy?"

"I shall be too tired."

Bancroft did not care to go the rounds with Jenny; he wanted to see Nancy home from the theater, but he had no good excuse to offer Jenny:

"Say, what's th' big idea?" demanded Jenny, breathlessly.

"What idea?" said Bancroft.

"This yankin' me across alleys 's if you thought a truck was comin' out."

"Did I?"

"You did, an' I felt my sleeve seams rip. It ain't on'y t'night; you've been doin' it right along. Some bill collector chasin' you?"

"Jenny, I'm afraid of alleys."

"Yes you are!"

"I'm not joking. My horoscope says——"

"What kind of a scope is that?"

"The things that are going to happen to you sometime in the future."

"O, you ain't tellin' me you've been visitin' mediums? I can see you with th' ouija board on your knees—nix! You're goin' t' be rich some day, an' marry a lovely girl. 'Lived in peace an' died in grease an' buried in mutton taller.' That's what they used t' say when I was a kid." She began to sing.

Some little bug is goin' t' get you—u—u
Some day!

He laughed. Jenny was good company. She was never still, physically or vocally, and occasionally, when something touched her heart, she was almost as beautiful as Nancy.

"I am honestly afraid of dark alleyways. Some day the little bug you speak about is going to jump out at me, and if I have time I'm going to beat it as fast as ever I can."

"Too fishy for me! Say, ain't Nancy reg'lar, though? You don't realize what a smash she's had. She's always been a bug on grand opera, an' old Sorrentino tells her t' forget it an' stick t' th' job she's got. Next year she'll be th' best comedienne in America. She is now, but th' public ain't wise yet. That mechanical doll stunt has got th' critics comin' back. What d' you know about that?"

The elevated, roaring above them—for they were mounting the stairs—saved him from commenting. It was a queer feeling, but he did not like to discuss Nancy with Jenny.

As they finally entered the hallway of the house in Ninth street there happened one of those tragi-comedies that are always treading upon the heels of youth. Without the least premonition of what he was going to do Bancroft threw his arms clumsily around Jenny's neck and kissed her.

Nancy did not move; she scarcely breathed.

Jenny stood perfectly still, the color gone from her face, her mouth partly open, and a something in her eyes as perhaps would come there had the handsome boyish face vanished, and a Japanese devil-mask replaced it.

"Jenny, Jenny! I didn't mean to do that. I'm sorry! But you looked so sweet. I'm sorry. I didn't mean to do it!"

That was to be Jenny's tragedy, forever after. He was sorry. He hadn't meant to kiss her.

A KISS is a perfectly foolish thing. But what are you scientific old graybeards going to do about it? There it is; dissect it, analyze it how you will, but where do you go from there? Nowhere. Who taught human beings—white human beings—to kiss one another? Nobody. It was the Beginning of Things; it is with us Now; it will always be Here. Bugs? Who cares?

Two pairs of lips, male and female—watch out! There it is, come and gone, hence or whence nobody knows. Damnation sometimes; always a revelation. It is often like two clouds meeting, there is thunder and lightning; again, it is as the falling leaf touching the stream, light and inconsequent. Sometimes there is the inconsequence of the leaf on one side and thunder and stark lightning on the other. Take care! A queer unnameable reaction upon the senses. The first gift we receive, and the last, with innumerable intermediate instances.

The whites alone possess it, the act and art of kissing. The Jap, viewing white lovers on the screen, is moved to laughter at the sigh of a man putting his lips to those of a woman. The Jap does not understand what it means. Neither do we! It is the act, the desire, that is incomprehensible; but heaven help us with the aftermath, that is clear enough to us. We find ourselves trapped in the middle of all manner of emotions, good and evil, joyous and miserable, ecstatic and despairing.

Boy and girl—presto! they are man and woman. It is instantaneous. The bridge goes smashing down behind us, with never any going back. We are in for it, willy-nilly.

As Bancroft and Jenny were in for it. In kissing Jenny, Bancroft made the amazing discovery that he loved Nancy! All in a moment, like that; by kissing Jenny Malloy! It was ridiculous, it was inexplicable, but the fact was complete. He had begun to love Nancy that stormy night, when she had entered his house, drenched and footsore; probably immediately after that smile of hers. The discovery of her photograph in the lobby of the theater had given permanency to a feeling which otherwise might have been fleeting and in the day obliterated. Nancy Bowman, who had the town at her feet! What were seven millions? Nothing. What chance had he, a country boy, against a man of Craig's attainments? None whatever. Craig was rich, handsome, intellectual, and could play the heart out of a woman, if he wanted to. He understood now the episode of Jenny's party. Craig had drawn Nancy to him. He understood now his own action, that of interrupting them: Jealousy. And to lift the fog surrounding these manifestations by kissing Jenny Malloy! He felt like a manikin whose manipulating wires refused to work.

And what of Jenny? In receiving that kiss, she, too, made a discovery: that she loved this queer boy better than life itself. Thunder and lightning. That he was as far out of her orbit as the farthest star. That she had not the intellect to trap and engage his affections beyond the point of friendship. That, with the loyalty and willingness of a dog, she would have come to his heel up and down the world, to the end of time. All in a moment, like that!

Tenebrific—the darkness that followed the spangles of that osculatory contact.

And never to kiss him again! she thought. For she had kissed him.

First to recover, she said, defensively: "Jeremiah, I ought t' hand you one on th' jaw for that."

"Jenny, I'm sorry. I don't know what made me do it. As God is witness, I never did such a thing before."

"You don't have t' tell your Aunt Mary that, Aloysius! It's no fun bein' choked an' kissed all at once." She could smile! It was wonderful what you could do with your face when you had to.

"Will you forgive me?"

"Sure—if you'll promise never t' slip one over like that again." Hoping he would, hoping with all the healthy fire of her heart that he would, and knowing that, for the peace of her mind, she must not let him!

"On my word of honor! You're such a good comrade . . . I've been so lonely all my life. . . ."

"Forget it, Jeremiah, an' toddle along t' bed. That's where I'm goin'. I'm tired. Say, write out that Jenny-kissed-me thing an' I'll call it square."

She gave him a gentle push toward the stairs, and followed. It was hours before sleep came to her. She lay, staring at the ceiling she could not see, all her thoughts ironically cast. An old-timer, like Jenny Malloy, falling for a boy younger than she was, and from the sticks at that! Wouldn't that make you laugh? Perhaps that had started it, his being a hick; in doors or out, there was always the clean breath of the fields about him. Jenny Malloy, sometimes affectionately dubbed The Hardboiled, going to pieces like this! She, who had kept at arms' length the cleverest of them! He was sorry. He hadn't meant to do it. Men had said that for ten thousand years; and that poor, honest kid thought he was springing something new! The way his arm had gone about her neck! Who took that baby out of the cradle and set him down here in New York, all alone? A laugh and a sob came together in her throat.

GONE ARE THE DAYS

"Salute partners! Balance to corners!" The Saturday night dancing at the summer resort used to be pretty doggy, especially the last moment set of lancers composed of those volunteers who hadn't danced for a long while but would do their best. (The young lady in the center is carrying a monogram fan, which is just about the last word.)

Gone are the young ladies who used to swish loudly when they went by—likewise the beauties who used what was known as the kangaroo walk.

A prima donna in her automobile—all ready to be admired. Back in the golden days this would have been considered a pretty smart getup. And she would have referred to the car as her "bubble."

to hurt." Bancroft's tone was almost resentful.

"And you told me that you had no talent," returned Craig, smiling again.

"But I haven't!"

"You are a poet. Only poets can feel beauty to the extent that it hurts."

"I don't know one rhyme from another," Bancroft declared.

"Both David and Solomon were poets; their thunder goes down the ages. And where's the rhyme or meter in anything they wrote?"

"But if I had your talent . . ."

"Well, what would you do with it?" asked Craig, amused.

"If I had your talent and were a rich man I'd go about the country and give concerts, turning the proceeds over to charitable organizations. No man who has your gift has any right to hide it. Genius isn't private property; it is something we must share with everybody, anywhere. Why don't you go among the soldier hospitals and give those poor boys music? Think of the pleasure it would give you!"

The thrilling earnestness of Bancroft affected both Craig and Nancy oddly. To Craig it was a distinct novelty to find himself rebuked by a boy—justly rebuked. As for Nancy, her wonderment never ceased to grow. Her thought ran back to a story she had once read: Of a youth who always remained young, and who had acquired all the learning in the world. She found herself liking them both, unreservedly, perhaps because each was an unusual personality. Craig had attracted this liking out of her, despite her resistance: she had gone toward Bancroft, her reluctance shadowy, because of the romantic background out of which he had come. The boy was quite as distinguished as the man, and more remarkable because the distinction was purely innate and not innate and acquired, as in the man.

Craig rose from the stool, and with a serious expression put out his hand toward his young rival. "Thank you, Mr. Collingswood, for a fine idea. I'm ashamed to say that I never thought my music might be of use to any one. You were in the army?"

"On this side."

"And you know where some of these soldier hospitals are?"

"I can easily secure a list."

"Will you take lunch with me tomorrow at The Players, so we can talk it over? Twelve-thirty. Gramercy Park. Any one will show you the way. I'm going to be very grateful. It will be a tonic; something I need rather keenly."

"I shall be happy to have lunch with you," said Bancroft, disarmed completely.

Said Craig to Nancy: "I shall telephone Sorrentino. And don't be afraid of him."

"That's very easy to say," replied Nancy. "I shall be afraid of him, of myself—of everything."

"But you mustn't. What have you to fear? You have a foothold; you're the hit of The Purple Moth; you aren't unknown. You're a celebrity."

"I wonder," said Nancy.

IT was half after three when Jenny's party broke up. After he had helped Jenny and Nancy with the dishes and the general clean-up of the studio, Jerry bade them good-night at their doors and sought his own.

To find it slightly ajar. He remembered clearly of having locked it before going out. He flung it wide, reached in a hand, and turned the light button. He made two important discoveries. First, that the contract with the Great Adventure Company was no longer in the bureau drawer; second, that his trunk lock had been broken and that the prospectus, the photograph of Bellman, and the synopsis of his adventures had vanished along with the contract!

First blood, Bancroft admitted grimly. Stewart—for the purloiner could be none other—taking advantage of his regular absences at night, had struck with unexpected swiftness and from an unsuspected angle, almost as if he had been assured of his, Bancroft's, intention to deposit the documents in the bank on the morrow and had anticipated the possibility of such a move. So here he was, without a line to prove that he had entered into any agreement with the Great Adventure Company, with nothing to prove that such a concern even existed. He could not appeal to Stewart in any manner, for that would be a confession of weakness. He must await events and meet them as they fell.

But one fact was now established comprehensively by this peculiar theft. Stewart dared not leave any trail behind. This was a direct admission that there was no harmless adventure toward, but a sinister business in which the liberty—perhaps the life—of one Collingswood Jeremiah Bancroft was concerned. That part of the pool had clarified, and Bancroft felt considerable relief. Up to now he hadn't known what was on the knees of the gods—a jest or a portent. But the major portion of the pool was still in chaos—the why of these actions and wherein they concerned himself and his father.

Stewart must not find the copy of that affidavit in which he, Bancroft, had sworn that if he signed any document it would be through physical or moral coercion, and yet he must keep it about his person, handily. At length he found an excellent hiding place between the ribbon and the felt of his hat. He had a feeling that this document was the only trump he held. How he would come to the use of it lay in the future.

And now, what to do with his wallet? After all, Bancroft concluded the seven-odd thousand and a packet of emeralds would not interest the seller of adventures; such a game wouldn't be big enough. And where could he hide the money and jewels in his room, since trunks and bureau drawers offered no security? He would have to deposit them in the bank or carry them about, and he decided upon the second procedure.

It was four o'clock. He took off his shoes and tiptoed down to the lower hall, where the telephone was. He called up the hotel where he had slept in the ambassador's suite and asked if Mr. George Bellman was in, only to be informed that Mr. Bellman had paid his bill and left for parts unknown. To Bancroft's mind this was the finishing touch. Bellman was no longer needed as a dummy adventurer.

Bancroft would have been equally amused and astonished had he known that at this moment George Bellman was rolling in drugged stupor from one side of his bunk to the other, on his way to Cape Town, and was to have, before the voyage ended, the most wholesome respect for the president of the Great Adventure Company, defunct, which may not be the proper way to describe it, since there had actually never existed any such concern.

He went to bed and fell into a series of troubled dreams. Whenever his father's face intruded there was calm; whenever Stewart's, stress and storm, with Nancy's face and Jenny's and Craig's oddly cutting in.

PROMPTLY at two o'clock that afternoon Nancy appeared before the door to Sorrenton's apartment. She did not press the bell at once, but stared with ironical speculation at the dark panels, as if she expected that there would appear, summoned by the sheer force of her will, some handwriting touching upon the immediate future. To be or not to be. Supposing. . . ! Supposing Jenny was right? Supposing she, Nancy Bowman, had misdirected her young energies all these years? Supposing she had wasted the playtime of her youth for a chimera?

Of what breed was she—a thoroughbred or a whiner? If there was a blow in there, would she come forth standing or crushed?

The door opened. She did not remember having touched the bell.

"I am Miss Bowman," she managed to say. "I have an appointment."

The Italian manservant bowed and gestured for her to enter. He led her toward the music room, and Sorrentino himself met her warmly at the threshold.

"Ah! A young lady who is prompt!" he said. He spoke English fluently. His roving professional glance took in the slender but rounded body, the ruddy hair, and the golden skin, the splendid hazel eyes: a young Violetta. That she could act vivaciously, that she was lively and bewitching, he already knew. What he particularly admired was the lack of theatrical assurance. She was not flustered, but she was evidently anxious. "Where is your music—the compositions you wish to sing to me?"

"I am going to leave that to you, Signor," she answered in excellent Italian.

"Signorina, you please me," he said in his native tongue. "Come in to the piano."

The top of the piano was littered with the scores of all the famous operas, and out of this medley Sorrentino selected two songs which he was tolerably certain she would know—from Marta and Linda di Chamouni. He tried her in comedy and tragedy; he gave her voice every possible opportunity; what is more, he gave her a full hour.

"E finito!" he cried at last, dismissing the accompanist. "My friend, the Signor Craig—who should be a famous pianist—told me that you would want the truth, Signorina. Do you?"

"Yes. If my endeavors are being wasted I ought to be made aware of it."

"Your voice is wonderful for the work to which you now apply it. It is clear, true, and sweet. You are a born comedienne, Signorina, just as a grand opera singer is born. All the study and application in the world will not make of you what you are not. First of all, endurance, an iron will, and an iron body. In a little time you will be rich and famous. Make them give you light opera with real music."

"The truth, Signor!" she interrupted, understanding whither these compliments were leading.

But Sorrentino continued serenely. "I am giving you the benefit of my observation and experience, Signorina. I repeat, in light opera you will become irresistible. You are now the lark in the meadows, wholly free. Why seek to become the nightingale and live eternally in a cage, in fear of draughts, the rain, the snow, the temperature of rooms, the pleasant little vices of the table? To study always, to be subjected to implacable jealousies! Ah, believe me who knows, the diva is never so happy and carefree as the soubrette."

"Tell me what I lack, Signor."

"Your voice is beautiful, but weak. There are many beautiful voices, but only a few throats which can meet the tremendous calls made upon them. The grand opera throat is peculiarly a gift from heaven; it cannot be fashioned by study. You might go a little way, in minor parts, but in the end your courage would ebb and your heart break. How many women are conspicuously great in grand opera? You can count them on the fingers of one hand. Five, out of an army of half a million! It is easy to lie, it is difficult to tell the truth; but I am what I am because I have always told the truth. Had I not seen you last night I would have told you the truth after the first song, perhaps roughly. But you made me laugh last night, and I owed you something for that. But you!" He laughed pleasantly. "Ah! To sing as you do, and to make your audience laugh! What more do you wish?" Then, gravely: "Who set you upon this path? You interest me."

"My adopted father."

"He was a musician?"

"Yes; a vocal teacher."

"What other teachers?"

She named them.

"Good," he said. "You have been well instructed in the cultivation of your voice, but you have been misdirected as to its possibilities."

"All my study, all my self-denial——"

"No, no!" he interupted, intuitively taking the word out of her mouth; "never wasted. No study is wasted; no hard work is useless. How old are you?"

"Twenty."

"Only twenty, and fame and fortune within your reach! Signorina, you do not realize how lucky you are. If, in your particular environment, you can make a crabbed old man like me laugh, you will make me weep if I fail to convince you of the folly of deserting the absolute for a vague possbility. The ability to make people laugh, in their minds as well as in their throats, requires a special genius, quite as great as that of Alda or Galli-Curci. Good day and good luck. I shall come to see you again some night when my nerves are all tortured, and you will make me laugh again."

Suddenly a vast indifference fell upon Nancy. "I thank you, Signor, for your kindness and your patience."

He kissed her hand gallantly as he led her to the door.

NANCY went down and out into the street. For a little while the street, with its tremendous warrens and its scattering human atoms, refused to be real. The primal cause of this unreality was not that she had failed in her ambitions or that they were in a master's judgment unattainable. It lay in the fact that everybody considered her a comedienne, which, in her opinion, she essentially was not. What would happen to her, now that the props had been knocked from under? What would become of her, with the spur gone that carried her through her foolery every night? A comedienne, when her background was tragic! This great maestro, telling her that she had made him laugh! O, she was mad or the world was!

She wanted Ling Foo; she wanted the dog to cuddle and cry over and hug to her empty heart. A comedienne! All at once she recalled the question she had asked herself before the maestro's door: Was she a thoroughbred or a whiner? Her chin went up and her eyes flashed.

The seller of adventures, half a dozen yards behind her, noticed the sudden tilt of her head and the clenched hands, and wondered what manner of thought had assailed her. The girl who had ordered the apple. One or the other of these young women might become necessary to his plans in the near future, and it behooved him to investigate their habits against this possible need.

Bread and butter, bread and butter. The phrase began to haunt her footsteps, and the elevated took up the chant. Bread and butter, bread and butter! Could she remember all the things she did on the stage? Could she repeat her lines correctly? Supposing she faltered and forgot, struck by a passing aphasia? Her head began to ache, as it naturally would with all this confusion, this groping about in the dark without feeling any substance to hold to.

That night the god of irony entered the theater with her as usual, but in a new rôle: Nancy was permitted to be conscious of everything she did; she was no longer an automaton.

After the first act Mannheim came to her dressing room.

"Was—was I all right?" eagerly. (Bread and butter, bread and butter!)

"You were, little lady. That mechanical doll stunt has knocked them over. You're a born comedienne."

But she knew that all the rest of her stage career was going to be one constant siege of terror.

On the elevated that night—she had insisted upon going home alone—she presently became aware of an unusual interest on the part of her fellow travelers. They stared at her, some icily, some with smiles. Curious to learn the reason, as hitherto nobody had ever paid any attention to her, she opened her handbag and stole a glance into her pocket mirror. She was horrified to see that she had forgot to take off her makeup!

A WEEK passed, another, without any notable event in the lives of the three inseparables, for Bancroft was always either with Nancy or with Jenny or with both. The three of them went to Sunday concerts, there was generally tea at four in Nancy's room, and frequently he went abroad with Jenny. There were times when he had tea with Nancy alone, for Jenny could not always get away from the model shop.

So far as Bancroft was concerned, Nancy no longer troubled herself to observe convention. She had reached that point of faith in him when his presence was comforting; she liked to be with him, for he was never dull. A month gone, the thought of being alone in her room with a young man would have shocked her. Still, she made a concession to convention: The door was always ajar. (Now that it was no longer forbidden ground, Ling Foo ceased to explore the hall, showing how easily a dog adopts human traits.)

They learned that they had many likes in common, the same romances, the same poets. She sang for him in the twilight, old folk-songs, old love-ballads, and there was one particularly haunting refrain:

Only come again in dreams,
And with the morning light are fled.

When she sang that he would sit with his chin in his palms and stare into the gathering shadows. What happy hours these were to him who had never known companionship!

They were sometimes joined by Craig, who was arranging for a tour in January. For he had taken seriously Bancroft's suggestion about playing to the broken soldiers. Nancy praised him generously, but she did not know that for this meed of praise Craig would have gone to Dahomey and played before the savage king. But vaguely and re-

It Was a Choice Between $6,000,000 or the Career He Loved for Aldrich; He Chose Both, So—

DOWN the east wind along with the first flakes of a belated February snow came the low, mournful drone of a deep throated motor. Mechanics rushed from the hangars as the drone increased into a voluminous roar when the airplane passed overhead and turned to glide down into the fast deepening shadows of the early twilight.

The landing of the big ship was perfect. The wheels and the tailskid touched the ground at the same instant and the plane rolled gently to a stop. Jefferson Aldrich, crack air mail pilot, opened the throttle and with a few short bursts from the motor rolled the ship to the deadline beside the hangars.

The mechanics clambered up on the wings and commenced unfastening the mail cockpit before Aldrich cut the ignition and stopped the motor. Within five minutes the five hundred pounds of first class mail would be racing along the boulevards to the postoffice. It had been brought from Cleveland in two hours and forty minutes, beating the fastest train by five hours.

The whole thing was remarkable, Aldrich thought, as he sat in the pilot's place. The most modern of the present day breath taking achievements of man, the flying of the mail was to Aldrich what the growth of their one time fledgling inventions meant to Edison and Marconi. That mind of man! What miracles it has worked! Yet he was glad he was through with the mail service. For now he was going one step beyond the flying of mail.

The next time Jefferson Aldrich took an airplane into the air there would be paying passengers riding in the ship and he would be the flying president of his own commercial aviation company. That would be a true accomplishment, better by far than serving as a pilot for the government. The thought that he had done his work well increased his joy. He had carried more mail through the air at nearer the scheduled time than any pilot in the transcontinental service. The records in Washington would prove that. He had even established one or two records for speed. One time he had been forced to fly throughout the entire night when officials had desired to demonstrate that the aerial postal service could function after the sun had dropped behind the western rim and the blackness of a cloudy night had blotted out the emergency landing fields below. Even this last trip had been made within three minutes of the record for the division, a good performance for the final bit of work with the service. He was smiling when he climbed from the ship.

Privately—in view of his guardian's prosaic characteristics—he hadn't considered his service with the air mail a necessary part of his training for the superintending of the Aldrich Airline. He had been a capable pilot before he became engaged in the flying of postal ships; he learned all of that in the army and learned it thoroughly. There, too, he had learned about the cost of maintenance, the cost of operation, the handling of pilots—in short, the general information a man must have if he is to make a success of an aerial transportation company.

He swore a little as he remembered that he had forgotten to ask the superintendent about his pay check, and then boarded the electric car that was to carry him into the city. A man shouldn't forget such things. Of course, he would have little need for the money now, but it was a matter of principle.

THE thought turned his mind to his estate. Never before in his life had Jefferson Aldrich been glad his father left the entire estate completely in trust. There had been times—most of them around his twenty-first birthday—when he had almost hated his parent. Why shouldn't a man be allowed to have his own? he had thought. Why should his sire place $5,000,000 within his grasp and then by a mere clause in the will tie it up, interest and all, until he should become thirty years old? It had seemed unreasonable to the twenty-one year old youth.

But now Aldrich realized his father's wisdom. Had he taken that money nine years ago it might have been entirely wasted by now. He wouldn't have it to form the aviation company he had planned so carefully since the war. He probably would be forced to go on flying mail.

As he stepped into the taxicab at the station he knew that after dinner with his guardian he would be the sole owner of property and stock worth more than $6,000,000, interest included. The papers would be signed as they smoked their cigars in the den. The staid, old fashioned man would grasp his hand in that matter of fact way he had and give some trite warning about investing money slowly and carefully. They would finish their cigars and with the securities and papers safe in his leather handbag Aldrich would leave the big house and go to the little apartment on Walton place, where Helen Morton would gather him into her arms and they would plan their wedding and honeymoon. He knew she would insist on a honeymoon in an airplane.

The taxicab drew up under the porte-cochère.

"WELL, young man, I suppose you are very happy today," said Jonathon Street as the pair settled down in the huge leather chairs of the old man's den. "I can remember my thirtieth birthday. How old I thought I was!"

"I am deeply impressed with my age," said Aldrich. "An old man I am, sir."

There was a short silence.

"You feel that you are ready to take over your estate and conduct it as your father would have wished?" asked the guardian.

"I do," answered Aldrich slowly. "I am sure I will not waste a penny."

"I hope not," said Street. "Of course you know that I have never placed much confidence in your business ability. You know I have never been in favor of this flying foolishness. A good sport, I suppose, and certainly a necessary part of a war, but of no commercial value, and I am sure you will agree with me when I say you have had but little commercial experience.

"But, now that you are thirty and are about to be wealthy, I assume that you are through with flying and intend to concentrate your mind upon more rational affairs."

Aldrich smiled.

"Well, sir, I cannot quite say that I will," he said cautiously. "I have studied aviation thoroughly and——"

"Yes, I know," said the guardian impatiently. "But now that you have to take care of a fortune that is greater than any man should really have you will, of course, give it up."

A frown wrinkled the old man's forehead. He had been dusting the ashes from his cigar when Aldrich made his statement and his arm was halted, extended over the ash tray. He was waiting for a reply.

"Sir, I had planned to put some of the money into the formation and operation of an aerial transportation system," the young man said deliberately.

"What?"

"I plan to organize, finance, and operate a company for the rapid transportation of passengers and freight."

Street rose. He walked to the center of the room.

"You are determined?"

"I have been, sir," answered Aldrich rising.

There was but slight hesitation on the part of the guardian.

"Then, sir, I shall be forced to inform you that I cannot turn the money over to you," he said.

"What—why—what do you mean?"

"I mean that the will states in very direct and simple English that I am to turn the estate over to you on your thirtieth birthday, providing I think you are capable of taking the proper care of such a fortune. I do not consider your plans favorably. I do not believe you can be trusted with the money at this time. Therefore I shall be forced to keep it until you have settled your mind upon some sane program. When you do, call at my office."

He walked from the room. The interview had ended.

"SO that's the situation, Helen, and I don't know how I can alter it a bit," said Aldrich. He was slumped down in the huge divan in the girl's home.

"But he'll have to change his mind—he just must," she said.

Aldrich looked at the girl beside him. The pucker between his brows disappeared.

"Helen, dear, you are very beautiful tonight," he said. "Let's forget this other thing if we can. It's my birthday, you know. Let's play."

"Jeff, didn't you bring a book full of figures one night?" she asked. "Didn't you show me in black and white what the cost of operation of an airplane company would be?"

"Yes."

"Well, sweetheart, if I am not mistaken those figures might help to change Mr. Street's mind," she said. "I remember that you told me the cost was unusually low; that is, much lower than the popular belief. Take them to him. Show him the figures."

"I don't believe he would listen," said Aldrich.

"How do you know? Take them and talk business. Don't let him put you off. Tell yourself that you have something tangible and then tell him. Talk to him as you—well, as you talked to me one night about a year ago."

"Well, I'll try," Aldrich said. "I don't believe it will do much good, but you can be sure that I will try."

"Here's to the Aldrich Airline—and us, Jeff, dear."

JEFFERSON was not particularly elated as he gave his card to the telephone operator in Jonathon Street's law office. Despite the optimism of his sweetheart, he felt that his call would only result in widening the breach between himself and his guardian. The old man, long recognized as a power in the city, was as easy to sway as the office building.

Jonathon Street had started out in the business world when he was fourteen years old. After working at several odd jobs, as office boy, third assistant shipping clerk, file clerk, and cashboy, he became a copy boy in the editorial department of a morning newspaper. The night work permitted him to finish his schooling. He became a reporter and, after five years, a copy reader. At twenty-five he entered law school.

Five years later he was graduated and for three years after he had started into the practice of law he remained on the newspaper. Then his legal business grew. He passed through the various stages of the profession, going from the divorce courts to the Criminal Court building, from there to the somewhat uninteresting but certainly lucrative law of business houses and small corporations.

On his fortieth birthday Street was selected as chief counsel for the mighty and wealthy traction corporation. From that day his name became established as one of the city's most prominent attorneys. His mere opinion carried as much weight as a lengthy decision of the United States Supreme court. His views on current subjects were honestly sought by the newspapers. His name was a valuable addition to a banquet program. His picture was printed and reprinted in weekly and monthly magazines.

Jonathon Street was a power.

His final establishment on the city's roll of honor was probably due more than anything else to a secret crafty desire for personal publicity. As a young reporter he had recognized the value of having his name hoisted to the headlines of public prints. As he continued his steady climb to success he had never failed to seize an opportunity that would result in the name of Jonathon Street, attorney, appearing in a newspaper. A reporter never cooled his heels in the waiting room of Street's office. No person bearing the identification card of a newspaper was ever told that Jonathon Street had nothing to say. He always said something and he always said it in a way that sent the scribe running to his city editor with the feeling that he had gained an important interview.

Street guarded this passion for publicity carefully. No newspaper or magazine correspondent was ever permitted to believe that Jonathon Street was anxious to have an interview printed. He never called on a newspaper. He never made an obvious move for publicity. In fact, he managed to place his name in the public prints with such adroitness that his own wife and family believed he disliked the advertising. Though he never refused to see a reporter, though he never demurred at giving an interview, the old man had never permitted the impression that he was a publicity seeker to go abroad.

ALDRICH, thinking this over while he waited to be admitted, became more and more pessimistic. He was, he thought, perhaps the only man who knew of Street's hidden desire for publicity. Too, he knew full well of the man's hatred for extravagance in financial matters, of the inborn desire to pile up dollar after dollar. The visit would result in no good. Of that Aldrich was sure. Unless—unless——

His meditations were interrupted by a gentle buzzing at the telephone switchboard. The operator answered. She turned to the young man.

"You may go in," she said.

The old gentleman was fumbling in the drawer of his mahogany desk when Aldrich entered.

"Sit down, young man," Street said with a smile. Aldrich was surprised. He smiled in return.

"I was just looking for an old pipe," the lawyer said. "Can't seem to find it. Must have taken it home. Have you a cigar?"

Aldrich threw a good cigar on the table.

"Well, you have come to tell me that you have changed your mind about the aviation company, I presume," said Street as he struck a match.

The World Outside

Blue Ribbon Fiction

by Harold MacGrath

THE STORY THUS FAR.

COLLINGSWOOD JEREMIAH BANCROFT, who has just inherited ris father's $7,000,000 and the mystery of the latter's death—a mystery complicated by a memorandum reading, "Paid Kennedy in full," and by the initials "C. J. K." in a book—is offered an adventure for $10,000 by Daniel Stewart, a sinister stranger representing the Great Adventure company, a concern masked behind the more conventional name of the Bolivia Emerald company. After much hesitation and after arranging with his lawyers to nullify any contract he may sign under duress, Jerry, who has gone to "the world outside" as represented by New York, contracts for the adventure.. Stewart promptly shanghais George Bellman, an assistant who suspects his designs and erases all the text of the contract, leaving only Jerry's name, the notary's seal, and the names of witnesses. Meantime Jerry has met beautiful Nancy Bowman, a Broadway stage favorite with aspirations toward grand opera; her chum, Jenny Malloy, and Arthur Craig, who is in love with Nancy. Jerry sends a detective to Bolivia to trace the mysterious Kennedy.

NINTH INSTALLMENT.

Nancy's Doom.

FOSTER'S studio covered the entire top floor of the house in Ninth street. The house was four storied, and the space occupied by the studio had once been blank—a garret. Foster, at his own expense, had put in a fine skylight. He was the one tenant who had a lease. Whenever his friends wanted the studio for a rout he always turned it over to them. There was little risk. The furnishings were worthless; the sofas and lounges lacked springs, the chairs had palsied legs, the oriental rugs on the floor were not antiques, but ordinary rugs worn out. All this with a definite purpose: Foster, who was a famous portrait painter, came here to work, not to serve tea.

Bancroft strolled about, examining some of the canvases which hung from the walls of unadorned brick. It did not seem possible to him that ten days ago he had been living a drab existence in a drab village. It was all luck, of course. If Nancy Bowman had not rung his doorbell he would not be here this night, among these friendly bohemians. The word had already been explained to him. It seemed that there were two sets of bohemians. One set made it a business; the other set became bohemians after the day's work. They became children; romped, told stories, sang, played. Greenwich, so-called, meant no more to them than Hoboken. They weren't reforming or inventing any art; they were successes in their particular fields and would have resented the title of bohemian.

"Those bugs," Jenny had explained—meaning the regular bohemians—"are always yodeling about th' decline in art; an' they couldn't cut a piece o' macaroni without messin' it. Keep away from that bunch, Jeremiah. If you have a good idea, they sponge it out o' you an' dump you. They toddle back an' forth, shoutin' Failure, an' expectin' t' sell it. Long-haired and bobbed, writin' ladder poetry 'cause they can't rhyme, an' sex novels that 'd made poor ol' Anthony Comstock baldheaded tryin' t' tell what it's all about. When you see success anywhere, Jeremiah, toddle along behind."

Her guests tonight included Mannheim, Craig, some of the chorus and principals of the operetta, a famous newspaper paragrapher, three successful illustrators, a magazine editor, and a dramatist of note.

Presently Bancroft came upon a half-finished piece which he recognized instantly—Jenny Malloy. The artist had caught her off guard, as it were; for there was only sweetness and kindness in her face and eyes, the true Jenny. He had read somewhere—probably in Ruskin—that it was not possible to deceive the real portrait painter, that sooner or later the true character of a subject will reveal itself. He was beginning to understand Jenny's sustained banter: It was her shield against the continuous battle of life.

"THERE'S a touch of genius in it," said a voice at his elbow, and Bancroft turned to discover Craig.

"Have you ever seen her like that?"

"No," said Craig, "but Foster has, for he never attempts to idealize a face. That's what made his struggle so long. He was forty-five before the world grasped what he was trying to do—paint portraits instead of candy-box faces."

"How old is he?"

"Sixty-two. That's way you don't see him here tonight. He works all day and is too old to play all night. I'm the only idler here. I haven't any talent."

"Neither have I," replied Bancroft.

"Then we have a community of interests. But I don't know. It must be fine to have a goal to work toward, to see a dream take shape. But you are young. Perhaps this sort of company may uncover an unsuspected talent. You never can tell. You are not a New Yorker?"

"O, no. I came from the country about a week ago. All these actions are wonderfully new to me. All accident—my knowing Miss Bowman and Miss Malloy."

"Miss Bowman is a charming young woman. She is the first comedienne in town—and doesn't realize it."

"I don't quite understand," said Bancroft.

"Nor does anybody else," replied Craig, smiling. "She is a born comedienne—and resents it. That is as near as I can get to it."

"Have you known her long?"

"I hadn't spoken a dozen words to her until this week."

The air relaxed, as it were; the congelation disappeared. Bancroft's reserve gave way to a tentative friendliness. Craig did not know Nancy as intimately as the young man from the country! Why this thought should lighten Bancroft's spirit he did not pause to analyze, nor why he should now be inclined toward friendship with this rather elegant but professed idler.

The chatter of the guests rose. There were frequent bursts of laughter. Some one began to play syncopated music on the piano—an unusually fine instrument. Bancroft was informed that Foster played frequently during the sittings, as a physical relaxation, to take the cramp out of his palette arm.

"Eats!" cried Jenny. "Everybody help themselves!"

And everybody did; and there was more chatter and laughter, and one of the pretty chorus girls began to make eyes at Bancroft and nudge him about possessively, until Jenny warned her to "lay off," as Jeremiah was particularly hers.

Never before had Bancroft had such a good time. He had been a little diffident at first, recalling, naturally enough, the newspaper stories of the wild doings of theatrical folk at play. But this fun was as innocent as a church social at home.

AFTER the hunger was satisfied there was a demand for amusement. Jenny, being hostess, was first on the list, and she gave a capital imitation of the madame in the model shop, the wife and the husband; and the dramatist boldly jotted it down for future use. Then Mannheim, who had been elected as master of ceremonies, called upon Nancy to sing the hit from the operetta.

"But who'll play it?" she asked.

"I will," said Craig, seating himself at the piano, and he struck the opening bars.

A perverse mischief took possession of Nancy. She sang the pitter-patter, but the expression on her face and her gestures were those of a mechanical doll, badly put together. When she had done there was a shout of approval.

Mannheim rushed to her, seized her shoulders, and shook her. "You infernal minx! That's the encore hereafter. We'll rehearse the orchestra at ten tomorrow."

"But——"

"No buts at all. My orders. The unexpectedness will knock the audience off their chairs." Then Mannheim put his arm through hers and led her to an obscure corner of the studio. "After the rehearsal," he said, "you'll come into my office and we'll make that contract right. I'm an honest man, Miss Bowman, and you're worth a good deal more than seventy-five a week. I'm going to make it two-fifty, and next season you'll be worth double that."

"But——"

"There you go again! Didn't I tell you there weren't any buts?"

"But I'm a'raid!"

"Good Lord! And of what?"

She realized, all at once, that she could not tell this man—whom she recognized as human as she herself was, and honest where dishonesty had rather easy going—what her fears were: That, once she thought of herself as a light-opera comedienne, she would be conscious of her actions, of her limitations, of her queer distaste for the life; that she was able to romp through the part because it had been the means to an end. But now that this dream was crumbling, that there might not be any end . . .! She was a fool; she could recognize that easily enough. "O, take the cash and let the credit go!" the old tentmaker had said. Here, under her hand, were competence and a certain passing fame; but could she hold them, now that she doubted herself? For some one to tell her the truth, some one who would be utterly disinterested! Yes, yes; Jenny was disinterested; but what did Jenny know about voices? Some maestro, some real authority, to tell her the truth; and with her present resources she would not be able to get beyond the outer door. To dissipate the chaos which was gradually disintegrating her mind! No; she could not tell Mannheim these things; he wouldn't understand, he would only laugh at her. Hadn't she played the part successfully for nearly two months? "All right," she said. "I'll do the best I can. . . . Hush!"

Liebestraum. Tenderly and wistfully the music rose above the chatter, which began to drop and shortly to cease altogether. Nancy was not conscious that she had seized Mannheim by the arm and was holding tightly. Her dark eyes were shining, her face was eager, her lips slightly parted. Throughout the impromptu concert—for Craig played from the tenderer inspirations of Chopin, Macowell, and Grieg—Nancy did not move, she scarcely breathed.

"Queer chap," thought Mannheim: "He's talking to this girl here, saying all manner of foolish and beautiful things to her, and she only hears the sounds, not the message." He looked down into Nancy's face and comprehended what the tension of her grip signified. Music-mad, one of those emotional creatures whose souls were full of harpstrings.

"Why . . . that was wonderful! I didn't know," she said, as Craig abruptly left the piano and sought the refreshment table, pouring out a cup of coffee, which he drank without sugar or cream.

"Craig is a great musician, Miss Bowman," said Mannheim, "but he's very hard to get to the piano. Quite a compliment to Jenny," he lied, cheerfully.

"Can't you do something, Jeremiah?" asked Jenny, who was sitting beside him.

"Yes; I can sit still. Nobody then will know what a hick I am."

"Why, what's th' peeve?" she asked, astonished at the bitterness in his voice.

"I can't do anything, Jenny. "I'm what you call a nix."

"Aw!" said Jenny, patting his hand. "Music gets some folks like that. Nancy, there, is bugs over that highbrow stuff. Mother Machree for mine, when I want t' weep. But you! Cheer up; you've got lots o' time t' catch your train. . . . All right, Sally. Th' sink is down there in th' corner. I'll bring th' soap. By-by, Jerry; we got t' clean up."

A man without a talent! thought Bancroft, enviously. Miss Hewitt had never played to him in such a fashion. He had, it was true, been entranced; but he had never been so stirred emotionally as in the moment gone. What a bag of emotions he was: and whither would they lead him in the end. He was interrupted by the flirtatious chorus girl, who plumped herself down beside him.

"Lots o' fun, ain't it?"

"Fine!" he said, using a word he despised in conversation.

He repeated it half a dozen times without comprehending much of anything she said, his ironic mood sensing that the word would be a fitting answer to whatever the girl had to say: All the while watching Nancy and the man who was without any talent. Craig had reseated himself at the piano and Nancy leaned against the side.

"You play wonderfully," she said. "I didn't know. What was that last? Something by Grieg, but I've forgotten."

"The Old Mother." Softly Craig began to run through the composition. "Can't you see her, by the fireplace, a thin fire under the kettle? Her man is dead, and all her sons have gone. She is alone. The old mother, forgot there among the ruins of her dreams. The end of all mothers. You love music."

"Yes. That is why I despise the songs I sing." She could tell Craig the secret, off-hand, in this manner; but she could not tell Mannheim!

"Somehow I understood that. Now, I wonder if I am going to offend you? I have made an appointment for you with Sorrentino at two o'clock tomorrow. Will you go?"

The ancient suspicion flashed into her mind—that favors had to be paid for. But Sorrentino, the famed impresario, a disinterested judge; to know one way or the other!

"You are not offended?" he repeated.

"No. I am rather stunned. He seldom bothers with any but those who have more or less arrived."

"He is an old friend of mine, and he will give you half an hour. We met frequently in Italy, after I had completed my studies in Munich. He will tell you truthfully whether or not you have a voice suited to grand opera. You have a well trained voice as it is, and you know very well how to use it. He was quite pleased tonight, though he knew that your voice really has no chance with that style of music."

"He was in the theater tonight?"

"Yes; but he had to leave after the first act. I am to telephone him in the morning."

"It is very kind of you. I will be there. But you mustn't do anything more for me, in this way. It embarrasses me, for I cannot make any return."

"Is it because I sometimes drink?" she asked, unexpectedly.

"Why . . ."

"Supposing I gave you my word never to touch the stuff again: would you be glad?"

"Of course I would—as any good woman would be. You are a distinguished man; you possess a great gift."

"But what can I do with it? I am a rich man. I am not selfish; only, there are so few who would understand the kind of music I play, that I rarely do what I did tonight. I thought perhaps you might understand."

"YOU told me you had no talent," said a voice from behind them.

Nancy was positively glad to see Bancroft standing at her shoulder, for the conversation between her and Craig was nearing rather dangerous ground.

Craig smiled. If the interruption annoyed him, he did not show it. "I meant that I had no public talent. You enjoy music?"

"Very much. It rouses all that is best in me; makes me want to go forth and commit some sublime folly. In the little village I came from there is an old maid who plays the church organ. I used to blow for her. After rehearsals she would play for me—Bach, Beethoven, Mendelssohn. I used to go home in a dream that lasted for hours. But there is something in your music that was never in hers."

"Thank you. What is in my music that was not in hers?" Craig felt his curiosity stirred by this odd young chap.

"I am ignorant. I don't know what it is. It hurts, and hers never did. You wanted it

"If you insist I will say yes," answered the pilot. "But won't you let me show you some figures?"

"What figures?" Street expelled great clouds of smoke from his lungs. The cigar was mellowing the old man.

"I want to show you that my plan is not as wild as it sounds—I want to show you that money can be made by such a company as I propose."

"I tell you it is no use. I am convinced. You are ten years ahead of your time, perhaps twenty."

"But, sir, you would listen to a bond salesman if he came in here. You would hear the argument of any reliable person who wanted to show you how to make some money. I at least have a right to be heard. It won't take long."

The lawyer knocked the drawer of his desk closed with his foot.

"Well, go ahead—make it short."

ALDRICH put a picture of a gigantic De Haviland monoplane on the big man's desk.

"What kind of a man killer is this?" inquired Street.

"That is a ten passenger airplane. It carries eleven persons, ten passengers and a pilot. It has an average speed of one hundred miles an hour. The actual cost of operation of that airplane has been proven to be 8 cents a mile per passenger. That airplane—the one in the picture, I mean—has flown more than 10,000 miles. It has never been in an accident. No one was ever killed by that ship. It has been in service only two months. It will fly 200,000 miles before it goes to a junk pile. The figures I have just given are based upon actual tests, on actual flights extending over 10,000 miles. And each one of those miles was flown at the speed of 100 miles an hour.

"With that ship you could leave Chicago at noon and be in New York before nine o'clock the same day. It will make the trip ninety-nine days out of a hundred. It will keep as near a schedule as the Twentieth Century limited. All flying is safe. My own record of more than 4,000 hours in the air proves that.

"Now the distance between Chicago and New York is a little more than 750 miles when you fly. The actual cost per passenger of that trip would be about $60. Now, sir, tell me who would not pay at least $100 to get to New York in eight hours? You know the business man guards time as closely as he does money. If a business man can fly from Chicago to New York in eight hours he will do it because he does not want to spend twenty-two hours on a train. Why, you would do it yourself."

Aldrich paused. He drew a cigaret from his pocket.

"Now here are the records of the air mail service. This service has been in operation over three years. During the first year and a half a few pilots were killed. Since the first day of 1921 not one air mail pilot has lost his life. The service operates every day. The continent is bridged twice every day by air mail airplanes. Moreover the air mail has in the last twenty months made an average of finishing 92 per cent of the scheduled trips on schedule time. You cannot deny these figures."

"Sounds all right on paper, my boy, and when I hear you talk I don't wonder that you are enthusiastic. But I found early in life that figures on paper mean but little when the practical tests come. You know yourself that flying is not safe. You know it better than any one in the world because you have been flying a long time. You can't deny it."

"But I can and I do. I have been flying since 1917 and I have flown for more than 4,000 hours."

The old man smiled.

"You know that one little slip of something on your machine will send you to your death."

"There are no little slips on machines that I fly. I am careful." A sarcastic grin spread over the old man's face. But Aldrich continued. "I inspect my machine thoroughly before I leave the ground and I fly carefully. I take no chances. I would rather fly than ride along a crowded boulevard in a motor car."

"The optimism of youth," Street remarked. "You'll never get my feet off the ground, my boy."

"One little ride would convince you, sir. One little trip. You would believe it the best sport you ever had for the first hour and then it would be so uninteresting it would bore you."

"You are very sure, son, but you can't change my mind," Street said. "I don't believe in your plan and——"

A SHARP clatter of the telephone bell interrupted the conversation.

Street picked up the instrument.

"Hello—yes, this is Street—ah, how are you? What? No. Can't be true. I haven't heard a word about it. Why, I can't believe it. I—why, my God. Yes, certainly. Thank you—good-by."

Street slammed the receiver upon its hook. He pressed a buzzer. The switchboard operator entered.

"Have you any telegrams for me, Miss Gray?" the attorney barked.

"Yes, sir, here is one that just came," she said, handing him the message.

The attorney tore open the envelope. He gasped.

"Read that," he ordered, tossing the paper to Aldrich. The pilot picked up the message.

"Mrs. Street dangerously ill. Come immediately. May not survive twenty-four hours," read the message. It was signed "Dr. Michaels."

The men glanced at the clock. It was 12:42 p. m.

"No use—Century leaves in three minutes," sighed Street.

"Get a cab—no, your clock is slow. The train has already gone," said Aldrich, glancing at his watch.

The old man slammed his desk closed.

"Who called you?" asked Aldrich.

"Phillips of the Echo—asked me if I had heard about Mrs. Street."

The telephone rang again.

"Hello—yes—just heard—didn't know in time—yes, I'll do that—good idea, Phillips—thanks."

Street rang for his secretary.

"John, get the general passenger agent of the New York Central quick," he ordered. "Tell him I want a special to overtake the Century."

The man stepped quickly from the room. Street and the pilot remained silent until the secretary returned.

"Have him on the wire," the young man stated. "Says he can't catch the Century. Says he can give you a special clear through. Said it would cost $2,500. Leave here at 2 p. m. and get you in New York at noon tomorrow."

"Twenty-five hundred—that's murder. Tell him I'll let him know in ten minutes."

Street glanced at Aldrich.

"Certainly it is too much," said the younger man. "But you must make the trip."

"I suppose so——"

The telephone rang again.

"Yes—thank you, Dwyer—yes, I am hiring a special."

The attorney turned again to Aldrich. "That was the News," he said. "Catherine must be very sick." He pressed the buzzer again.

"John—tell them to get that train ready."

Aldrich rose in his chair.

"Now just a minute—just a minute."

Street and the secretary turned to the pilot.

It moved faster and faster—then left the ground.

"Now, John, if that is your name, don't move."

"Young man, I give the orders in this office. John, make that telephone call."

The secretary turned to go. Aldrich caught him and pushed him down into a chair.

"SIT there until I tell you to move," commanded Aldrich.

The old attorney jumped to his feet.

"You sit down, too—sit down, I say," roared Aldrich. "Don't talk back to me."

The young man towered above the attorney. He grabbed his guardian firmly and pushed him down into the chair. Street felt the viselike grip of his ward's hands. He sat down. It was one thing to issue orders to his corps of assistants, but the business of refusing to obey a young lion who had suddenly gone mad was quite a different matter.

Aldrich, seeing them seated, picked up the telephone. Within two minutes he had completed the connection he desired.

"Hello—that you, Bert—this is Jeff," he barked into the transmitter. "Say, Bert, does that promise still go? Atta boy, Bert. If that old crate is there now wheel it out on the line and fill it with gas, old boy. I'll be there in twenty-five minutes and I'm your friend for life. O, say, Bert—I'll have a passenger, too."

"What!" roared Street.

"Now don't say another word to me, Mr. Street. I can waste no time talking to you—you're too old fashioned, sir."

Aldrich walked to the mahogany locker and took his guardian's overcoat from a hook. He tossed it on the table.

"Now, John, you call every newspaper in town and tell them Uncle Jonathon is flying to New York to see his wife, who is dangerously ill," ordered Aldrich. Turning to the attorney, he said, "Come on—get that coat on—we haven't a minute to lose."

"But, see here, young man, who do you think——"

His shouts were muffled as Aldrich lifted him from the floor. In two minutes they were on the street below and Aldrich was stopping a taxicab.

Events followed in swift succession.

Careening taxicab—business and office buildings giving way to houses—outskirts of the city—airplanes standing in line—dirty mechanics rushing about—a roar from a multicylindered motor. Then——

"Come on, Uncle Jonathon, this is our ship—you ride up there in front—climb up."

"I won't."

Aldrich motioned to a mechanic and together they lifted the man into the mail compartment of the big airplane.

"Tie him in, Al," shouted Aldrich. He was adjusting his helmet and goggles.

THERE was a shrill scream from the man tied fast in the front cockpit as Aldrich jumped into his seat. It was drowned by the roar of the motor as the pilot opened the throttle for the taxi down the field and the turn into the wind.

Then came a deafening roar as Aldrich opened the throttle wide and the ship's tail rose under the blast from the propeller. It moved faster and faster, then left the ground.

The wind was on the tail of the ship, pushing it eastward fifteen miles an hour faster than its usual speed.

Seven hours later the bumping of the wheels on the Long island landing field aroused Jonathon Street from the deep sleep that had come over him when the ship passed above Cleveland. The plane rolled to a stop beside the hangars.

"Wake up—we're on the ground again—wake up," shouted Aldrich. A mechanic unfastened the old man's life belt. He rose to his feet.

"Why, it's dark—where are we?" he asked.

"On Long island."

"What time is it?"

"A few minutes past eight."

"Well, I'll be damned." The pilot's uncle fell back into the cockpit. When he stood up again he had a sheet of paper in his hand.

"There, my boy, I've just written a release for your money," he said. A smile spread over his face. "I guess you're right after all."

He handed the slip to Aldrich.

"Thank you, sir."

The old man started to climb from the ship. Then he turned to Aldrich.

"Er—you might wait until I find out about Catherine," he said. "I think I'll be your first paying passenger. Fly back, you know."

the piano, and he struck the opening bars.

A perverse mischief took possession of Nancy. She sang the pitter-patter, but the expression on her face and her gestures were those of a mechanical doll, badly put together. When she had done there was a shout of approval.

A man without a talent! thought Bancroft, enviously. Miss Hewitt had never played to him in such a fashion. He had, it was true, been estranged; but he had never been so stirred emotionally as in the moment gone. What a bag of emotions he was: and whither would they lead him in

THREE PIECE SUITS STRESSED I

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—I dare say that by the end of this fall any woman who does not have some kind of a jacquette costume will feel homeless as a small town man in house cleaning time. You see these jacquettes every place nowadays, whereas in the summer only a few pioneers represented the fashion that has been so virulent in Paris these many months past. Of course, before long now the jacquette is bound to become too popularized for the woman who prides herself on exclusive modes. But so really charming and effective is the fashion that most of us are willing to risk the future.

Perhaps some master minds have been able to grasp the distinction between a jacquette and a jacquette blouse. Being endowed myself with only a normal degree of intelligence, I falter before this grave problem. The fact of it is that the chief difference seems to be in name alone, for some of the models which they call jacquette blouses actually necessitate the wearing of a second blouse underneath.

The coatee, under whatever term you know it, is usually of the blistered or quilted persuasion, although some of the newest and most stunning models are of velvet with elaborate all-over embroidery in floss or braid or both. Gorgeous brocades are also used. Monkey fur is a favored concomitant, but snowy ermine tails are used on black velvet jacquettes with all the usual success of this combination. As a rule, the ermine forms the ornament at the popular left side closing.

The jacquette has enforced the creation of many separate skirts to complete it, and the most practical of such skirts has a camisole top. They come chiefly in dull black satin, which is often plaited. However, provided that your skirt be of plain fabric in the same color as your figured or embroiderey blouse, you have performed the duty expected of you. Occasionally, to be sure, the plain color skirt is trimmed with bands or hem or some motif borrowed from the ornate coatee material.

At the right of this page we show a black satin matelasse jacquette with a cascade of monkey fur for the collar. The skirt is of dull black satin, and the perfect amity between the garments is asserted by two rosettes of satin, one of which is placed at the edge of the jacquette and the other at the hem of the skirt. The most popular version of the coatee fits the hips snugly, usually through the services of that omnipresent tight band. Here the garment, although drawn in the prescribed method, does not avail itself of this intermediary.

If you look at the jacquette you will see that most often it has the inverted V neck. There are some models—Chinese looking little affairs that hang free to the hip line—which are made with appropriate round neck, but the majority adhere to the neck line I have just mentioned. The fact of it is that many of the new frocks have abandoned the familiar bateau neck line for V or surplice closing. This is particularly true of the coat frock and of all the navy blue Poiret twills with which the average woman meets the first chill days of fall.

At the left I indicate this neck line in a stunning model of navy Poiret twill combined with vivid red crêpe de chine. This crêpe lines the effective side panel, forms the narrow belt, outlines the surplice closing, and forms the lower part of the sleeve. In addition it supplies the vestee and a side inset on the corsage. This crêpe de chine does not rely entirely upon its own cheerful temperament, for it is generously embroidered in green braid, white rings, and gray beads. The sleeves of the model are noteworthy in that they point to two tendencies of the mode. One of these is to have the lower section made of contrasting material, as is illustrated in the frequent application of gauntlet and mitt effects. The second is a line which often approaches the bishop type.

But to go on about the V neck line. I have spoken in previous letters about the sailor collar which Jenny has revived this season. In front the experiment is frequently lost on the beholder, but when the back is turned, lo! that sailor collar often perseveres to the waist line. In the model I have just described the type is more indolent. It stops work a little below the shoulders. Nevertheless, it is on the sailor order.

Two other new neck lines which I shall show in subsequent letters are the bertha attached to a high collar which is sponsored by Lanvin and the bateau neck line that has created a sensation out of some of the Jenny models. This latter affixes a choker which is separated from the bateau line by means of narrow braid bands, front and back. As this latter model shows the anatomy only in those sections where time has been less vindictive, it should be welcomed by all those haunted by chins.

Of all the garments stressed in the autumn collections the three piece suit has probably received the widest attention. So prevalent is this type of suit that we almost overlook the normal variety. Of course, three piece suits have been coming along as regularly as the chrysanthemums these many years since, but today we have a few spectacular new features. Among these is the one which lines the jacket with some kind of fur. Thanks to this inner life, the suit itself may be made of satin or heavy crêpe, as, indeed, it often is.

Thus the model second from the left might be of brown crêpe if its coat were lined with pelt. For the benefit of timid temperaments I hasten to say, however, that the material is brown broadcloth with the all-over pattern of black vermicelli braid on its coat extending to a narrow side panel on the skirt. The coat is lined with wood brown crêpe, asserting itself more firmly in the original collar. This is, of course, adjustable. As to the bodice, this is made of satin in brown some tones lighter than the broadcloth. It is relieved by embroidered bands in red, blue, white, and green, and these bands, by the way, point to a new trimming touch, for the needlework is executed upon ecru net.

Often the jacket of the three piece suit is lined with the same material as the blouse. Such is the case in the charming model third from the right, where a brown woolen material, finely tucked, is trimmed in bands of darker brown and set off with a beaver collar lined in gold brocaded fabric. The blouse of marron glacé crêpe is repeated in the lining of the jacket. A smart hat of brown duvetyn trimmed with self-color coq feathers completes this costume.

Ribbon is much used on many smart suits and three piece garments, and the suit of gray broadcloth in the center reasserts the black of its seal trimmings by bands of black grosgrain ribbon. The last suit on the page is a salmon pink velour collared in gray squirrel. The fashionable petal trimming of so many French hats is seen here in salmon velvet on a hat of gray suede. Gauntlet cuffs of squirrel might be added successfully to the narrow sleeves, although here gauntlet gloves execute that mission ably.

Third from the left, a frock of wool back black satin with a large gold ornament in front and a white satin collar reaffirms the persistent influence of the cape, for the enormous circular sleeves in one with the shoulders present the cape message. The last frock is a blue crêpe with tucks applied in curves to skirt, sleeves, and bodice. A wide girdle of self-material introduces at one side a piece of printed crêpe in blue and green.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

CONCEPTIONS OF THE TAILLEUR.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS. — (Special Correspondence.) — If you should happen in on some of the conversations between the artist and me regarding costuming you would think you had got into some profound meeting or other, where all sorts of movements were hanging in the balance, from religion to politics and art. We take up such matters as why it is the American woman is likely to fall down in her evening costumes, and what it is that gives a graciousness to the French tailleur.

The answer to the latter proposition is that the women of this nation over here go in for rounded corners, that take away a certain masculine stiffness which American women sometimes court in their suits. Both countries went through a period of playing up to the exclusion of other characteristics the hard boiled look of the tailleur.

When the suit was in that stage of development the French woman, with her own rounded corners, declined to wear it, but now in this country it has taken on a soft graciousness while preserving its look of restraint and discipline, with the result that the French woman is taking to it as to her native tailleu.

As she wears it the costume has a look of balance and adaptation, as if she had taken the costuming of the other sex and made it over for her purposes, but had not stepped into it exactly as it was planned for a man.

I used to have the feeling in America that in our stores we tried to get a softness and dressiness into it by loading it with braid and exotic, inappropriate ornamentations. The French woman achieves gentleness by more subtle means than that. At least, when braiding is called to the rescue it is put on with more restraint than I have seen it at home, and usually it follows some fundamental line of the dress.

The first offering illustrates the thesis. It represents what the French call a dress "easy to wear." That means you can appear in it before 11:30. The dress is in a gray material crossed with black that gives the rough and ready look of the business costume of the business man. It has a blouse in the conventional long lined, unornamented silhouette which has been popular for many a day. The skirt incorporates the new draped movement, drawing over to one side, and the lines of that drapery are traversed by rows of black braiding, graciously easing the look of stern tailoring by rounding the edges as they traverse the hips and descend down the side.

Instead of the boat shaped neck the one in this costume is in the form of a V. As mentioned in a previous letter, there seemed to be a movement to make necks square, but the pointed effects are up to the moment prevailing.

This dress is by Premet, and the artist and I were saying that this house can dress a certain type of American woman successfully. There is the small, chic, awfully slender, even rather angular woman, whose very chic comes through her thinness. The gorgeousness and sumptuousness and high coloring of some French creations obliterate her. Poiret, for instance, does not dress that type, but Premet does so supremely well.

The second sketch represents one of their tailleurs. It is in cinnamon brown duvetyn, braided in soutache in a concentrated pattern round the skirt of the jacket, which circles the hips, flaring slightly at the sides of them. To that flare goes a great deal of the credit for the extreme chic of the coat. What I like about the braiding is that it is concentrated and in a pattern. Braiding does not add to the attractiveness of a costume, I think, when it wanders up and down seams, purposeless and without charm of its own.

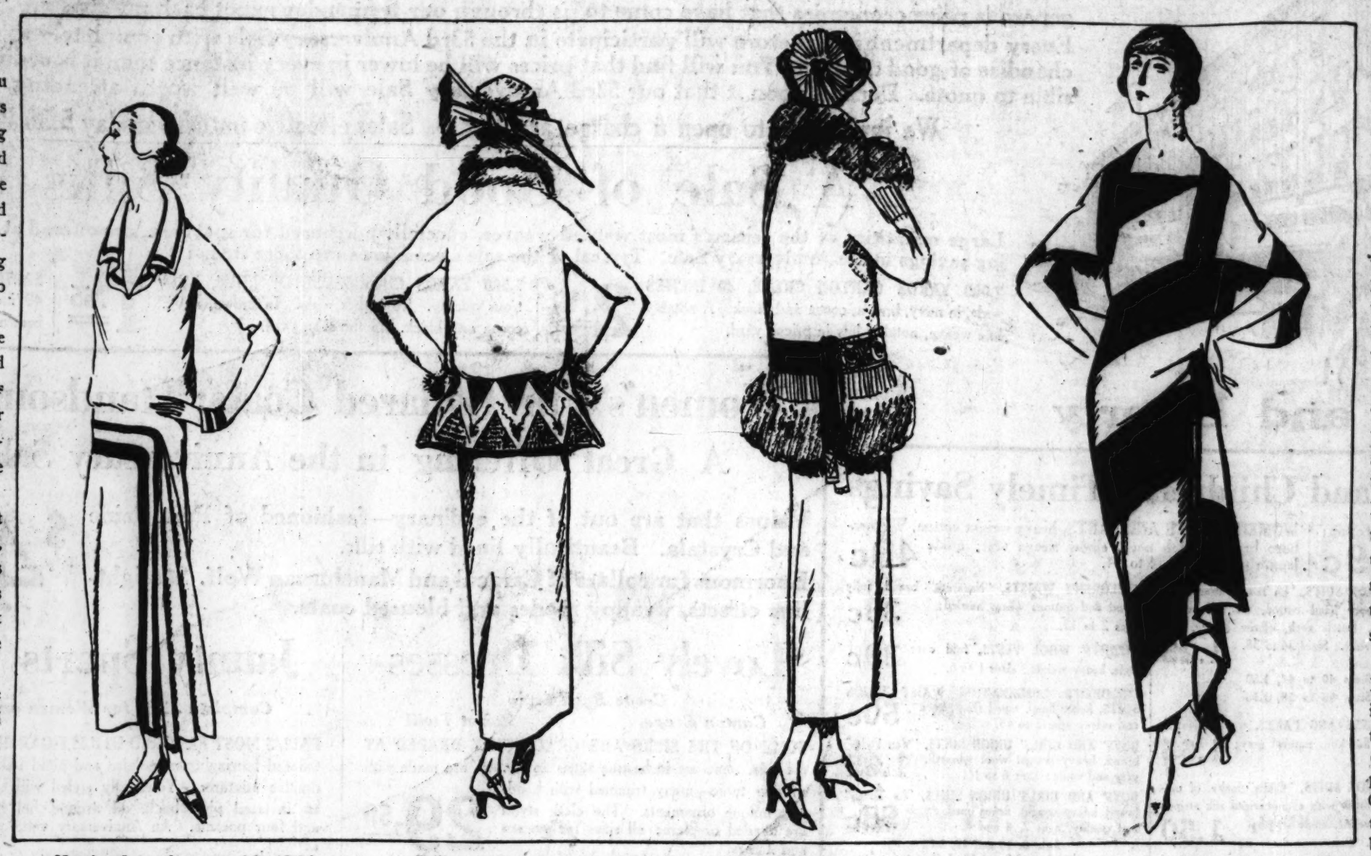
There is a button on either hip holding the line close above the flare. Sleeves and throat are banded in skunk, and the skirt is narrow and straight. The back of the jacket blouses a little above that band of braiding.

The hat is one of Mr. Lewis' successful performances. It is in tete de negre, of the jockey shape now prevailing, and is closely tied round its high crown with a band of moire ribbon. Moire is smart. The band ties in a wide, flaring bow across the back. The costume really has a great deal of chic.

The third offering shows in contrast M. Poiret's conception of a tailleur. See how much more sumptuous it is. It is of woolen corduroy in pearl gray, and between belt and fur piece it is banded with a border of the same sort of material in vermilion red. Poiret started that fancy for running a band of something near fur. It "marries" the fur into the material, as the French put it. The artist puts it in more Anglo-Saxon form when he says that it eases the eye from any shock, and gives it, so to speak, a surprise that is gradual.

The jacket is just a little box coat with no buttons. It is held with a black satin belt that is embroidered in front with white beads, but is perfectly plain in the back. The belt ties and hangs over the fur (which is skunk, by the way), thus breaking up pleasantly the continuousness of the circular line. Of course, this costume is a little fancy as a straight tailleur; it can be easily worn up to tea time, and beyond, to the dinner hour in the city.

The last dress is typically Poiret in the sense in which it has the courage to put stripes together. It intrigues the eyes into an interest in watching what the stripes are going to do. The dress is caught up on one hip and the material below this point falls in handkerchief folds down the length of the skirt. They take the winding course of a stick of peppermint candy down the length of the figure, and in the collar change their direction to horizontal and straight. The material, I forgot to mention, is gray and of the soft silk corduroy, and it has the rich corded look, while silk and plastic.



Morning dress of gray wool braided in black. Tailleur of cinnamon brown with braided design on skirt of jacket. Pearl gray woolen corduroy fur trimmed, with beaded girdle. Dress in silk corduroy striped in pink and blue.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too tall? Sky on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

NEW YORK. — [Special Correspondence.]—A shop girl turned to her sister worker behind the counter one day and remarked in a tone of disgust, "Mamie, you simp, why don't you bob your hair like all the other girls, and show some signs of originality?"

The augury for the approaching beauty session is that Mamie will be shined now to show the same signs of originality by doing her hair up again.

Bobbed hair is doomed by the edict of coiffeur artists in Paris, and we, original as all the rest of the sheep who follow their leader no matter whither he leads, will drag out the old pigtail and set about finding ways and means of attaching it somehow, somewhere, to the fickle scalp again.

Might as Well Surrender.

Some of New York's best hairdressers who have reaped a harvest out of clipping and pruning and permanently waving the bobbed head are putting up a fine barrage of protest, declaiming in terms emphatic that the bob goes merrily on and will continue so to do if they have any voice in the crisis now become international). But the signs—they point, and when they do you might just as well surrender now as later. We all do eventually.

I would be willing to wager if a Parisian edict were broadcasted to tie up one leg and use a pearl handled crutch we would all be there with the leg tied up and at least an imitation pearl on the crutch handle.

It were well that an overabundance of humor was not incorporated into our ridiculous sex, else we would never experience the thrill of lopping off our locks one week and the next attempting to lop them right back on again; yank out our eyebrows one day and try to chase them back onto first base again the next, nor one season how far we could go one way with a skirt length, how far in the opposite direction the next.

Demand for Switches.

Some others of New York's coiffure artists openly admit a shortage of hair to meet the new demand for switches and false ringlets and transformations. This ought to provide a remunerative business in itself.

The present trend of beauty fashion gives to women a glorious opportunity to remodel herself from head to foot, for I am told, too, that high shoes will be back this winter and will appear in various colored leathers and cloths and satins to tone in with the elongated skirt. And is it not half the fun of living and working to be able to renew ones self from hair follicle to toenail? When that spirit departs us, we are getting ready to adopt the rhythm of the well known Chopin tune which beats us sedately on to a land where the harpists wear a one piece uniform or else to the opposite shore where there is never so much as a hint of coal shortage.

To the Memory of M. Marcel.

If any one amonst us bears a grudge, she should look for the one who forced the long skirt upon us. That one is responsible for all these radical departures from the giddy freedom of a year ago. A trip to Paris will be involved. Paris dictates feminine hirsuteness quite as autocratically as she does our dress. There the marcel wave was born, educated, and raised, and then sent out to do missionary work on countless thousands of American heads.

And it might be noted in passing, that this year in that same city there will be accorded the memory of M. Marcel, Grand Knight of the Curling Iron, a celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the famous wave upon which he rode to fame and glory.

Zees grande artistes with the brush and comb and tong never did approve of the chopping block system since the days of revolution. Unless the lady's hair is naturally curly, she has to spend more time than ever in the coiffeur's chair, and unless her face is the face that calls for bobbed hair, not all the king's coiffeurs nor all the king's men can make her as attractive as an artistic arrangement of her own, attached locks.

More Trouble than Long Hair.

Thus mighty rulers dispense with the economy of time, labor, and becoming arguments:

"Bobbed hair is a snare and a delusion," said one brave with a scalp in his hand to which he was applying the marcel doctrine. "It is much more trouble to keep it looking well—it must be worked and fussed over morning and night and during the luncheon and during the show. Aren't women always fussing with it and worrying if it is all right?

"Yes, and how many faces have you seen that were improved by it? Not

He Was Spoken For.

On the third Sunday in every month we have a student minister sent down to preach in our church. As the college was about sixty miles away from my home town, mother generally invited whichever student was picked to spend the week-end with us.

On one occasion an extremely shy youth was sent. On Sunday morning mother, who seldom comes downstairs for breakfast, implored me to make him feel as much at home as possible, as we would be alone together for the meal, and I, alas, have a reputation for abruptness which mother feared might embarrass him.

I promised mother I would be the soul of sweetness and friendliness. I kept my promise beyond all expectations ,for after persistent efforts on my part to converse affably—efforts rewarded by an occasional monosyllable—he at length stammered, "I—I—I'm engaged." B. B.

When a Joke's Not a Joke.

I was called downstairs by one of the children, who said Frances, an out-of town cousin, had arrived. I hurried downstairs, but saw nothing of Frances.

The child giggled and said he was only fooling.

I answered, "Well, I am glad you are fooling. I would hate to be bothered with her today." Just then Frances stepped from behind a door. M. J.

Making It Impressive.

Mother asked me to call the telephone company from my office and ask them to install a phone in our new home at once. So when I did so I spoke as if it were mother, saying I was a widow with three daughters downtown all day, and that it was most important I have a telephone at once, so that they might get in touch with me during the day. I certainly was embarrassed when I turned from the telephone to hear one of the clerks say to another, "She is young to be a widow with three grown daughters, isn't she?' I happen to be 19. A. T

Grandmother in a Reminiscent Mood.

THE other day while grandmother and I were coxily knitting, a long entertained curiosity got the better of my usually respectful and discreet tongue. One of my childhood's earliest recollections had been the sweet affection between grandmother and grandfather. Since the latter had found his last resting place on a hill in the cemetery, grandmother had been so quiet, so gentle and retiring, we all realized she was looking forward to her own release from this life to join the man who at sixty-six had been still her sweetheart.

Grandmother was in a reminiscent mood that day, anyway, telling about how her father used to line their big family of children up against the side of the house every fall and how a shoemaker measured each in turn for winter shoes.

"Grandmother," I blurted out, "you never did tell me where you first met pap." This was our childish love name for the old gentleman.

She laughed softly with the remembrance of youthful happy days. "It was funny. It was at a wedding of one of my cousins. I was seventeen. The room was crowded; people sitting on the bed and standing around—a big crowd for the country.

"I remember just as plainly. My new shoes hurt. You know when your feet hurt you just can't think of anything else. I pulled a baby's cradle out from under the bed and dropped down on the edge. I was desperate enough to have sat on the floor. I had been noticing a dark eyed boy standing near me. I didn't know him, but when I sat down he looked at me and smiled, and when I dropped my eyes," in a prim tone, "I saw that he had on new shoes, too. He stepped over close to me and made a remark about being glad to sit down, so I invited him to share the cradle. There wasn't a thing out of the way about it." Her voice assumed a defensive tone.

"He was very respectful. We both sat as erectly as possible." Even in her eighty-third year grandmother did not lean back nor lounge, ever. "But my mother spied us, and she gave me a good scolding for the immodesty of sitting on a cradle with a young man. Albert heard every word of it."

"What next?" I interrupted her reverie.

"Well, that was the beginning. Albert knew he had got me into difficulties, and he did his best to make up for it."

Grandmother resumed her knitting vigorously, while a vague memory came to mind that I once heard my aunt say that grandmother and grandfather had run away. I was having trouble with the family myself over a young man who was too poor to meet the approval of mother, so I guessed grandmother was afraid to tell me.

Thinking over the picture of the two young people perched on the edge of the cradle and the mother's horror at their immodesty, I better understood grandmother's disapproval of the lax manners of us young folks now. N. M.

Doctor Says Newer Form of Iron Will Increase Strength of Many Delicate People 100% in 10 Days

In Many Instances—Persons Have Suffered Untold Agony for Years Doctoring for Nervous Weakness, Stomach, Liver or Kidney Disease or Some Other Ailment When Their Real Trouble Was Lack of Iron in the Blood—How to Tell.

New York, N. Y.—In a recent discourse Dr. E. Sauer, a New England Physician who has studied both in this country and in great European Medical Institutions, said: "If you were to make an actual blood test on all people who are ill you would probably be greatly astonished at the exceedingly large number who lack iron, and who are ill for no other reason than the lack of iron. The moment iron is supplied a multitude of dangerous symptoms disappear. Without iron the blood at once loses the power to change food into living tissue and therefore nothing you eat does you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. Your food merely passes through your system like corn through a mill with the rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind. As a result of this continuous blood and nerve starvation, people become generally weakened, nervous and all run-down, and frequently develop all sorts of conditions. One is too thin; another is burdened with unhealthy fat; some are so weak they can hardly walk; some think they have dyspepsia, kidney or liver trouble; some can't sleep at night, others are sleepy and tired all day; some fussy and irritable; some skinny and bloodless, but all lack physical power and endurance. In such cases, it is worse than foolishness to take stimulating medicines or narcotic drugs, which only whip up your nerving vital powers for the moment, maybe at the expense of your life later on. No matter what anyone tells you, if you are not strong and well you owe it to yourself to make the following test.

"See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of this newer form of iron known as Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained.

"I have seen dozens of nervous run-down people who were ailing all the time greatly increase and even double their strength and endurance and entirely get rid of their symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time, simply by taking this newer form of Iron, and this after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. You can talk as you please about all the wonders wrought by new remedies, but when you come down to hard facts there is nothing like iron to put color in your cheeks and good sound, healthy flesh on your bones. It is also a great nerve and stomach strengthener and the best blood-builder in the world. The only trouble was that the old forms of iron, like the tincture of iron, iron acetate, etc., often ruined people's teeth, upset their stomachs and were not assimilated, and for these reasons they frequently did more harm than good. But with the discovery of this newer form of iron all this has been overcome. Nuxated Iron, for example, is pleasant to take, does not injure the teeth and is usually almost immediately beneficial."

NOTE—The above company is known to be thoroughly reliable. Over 4,000,000 packages of Nuxated Iron are sold annually, and it has been used and highly recommended by former U. S. Senators, Members of Congress, Judges of U. S. Courts and many physicians. We are able to guarantee that if you do not obtain all and even better benefits than you expect from Nuxated Iron, the manufacturers will promptly refund your money.

"DeLuxe" The Bedspring LUXURIOUS

Wonderful Glowing Health Through Refreshing Sleep

Someone said, "We are a strong race; if we were not we would be dead, because of the way we abuse ourselves." This is a fact. Despite the fact that we sleep on bedsprings that twist the spine and cramp the muscles, we manage to live long and do a lot of work.

But if we really slept on a bedspring built for rest, how much more energetic we would be—how much more we could accomplish. You can prove this by displacing your uncomfortable, sagging bedspring with a De Luxe. It can't sag or tear the bedding. It is interchangeable—fits either wood or metal beds. See it at your dealer's today.

Practical and Fancy Needlework

BY CLOTILDE

THE ARTISTIC GIRDLE.

GIRDLES play no small part today in the scheme of trimming or finishing a dress; and they are something that any woman who likes to use her needle can make herself. One sees dresses with a more or less draped, wide girdle of the dress material tacked on so that a long waisted effect is given, and where the fastening comes a graceful loop and one end will make the finish.

These girdles are usually of the dress material sometimes showing a lining or facing of a gay, contrasting color where the girdle is allowed to turn back a trifle so the color will show. These draped girdles are usually nine or ten inches in width, and while a piece of material cut on the bias will drape more easily, it is possible to use a straight piece. Girdles made of roses of the dress or other material are most attractive and effective. Take a delicate shade of gray crêpe, for instance, and make the roses of the crêpe, tacking them to a foundation of silk or crêpe, and make them so they just meet easily everywhere. Where the girdle fastens have several streamers of ribbon or of the crêpe, making these different lengths and letting a couple reach to the hem of the skirt. Georgette or the silver or gold tissues make up wonderfully in these flower girdles, and if one likes several colors they could be artistically blended to look well together. One evening gown seen recently was most simply made and the finishing touch was given by the girdle, which was of gold roses, long narrow streamers of the blue moire ribbon hanging at the left side of the front.

Double girdles are seen on some of the new dresses, the one at the waist line being lighter looking than the one at the hip line—not a lighter shade of material, but not so wide or thick.

Another attractive idea for girdles is to combine materials of two or three materials and even colors, and braid them loosely together, using this braided strand for a girdle—satin and chiffon in different colors, for instance.

Grosgrain or moire ribbon makes pretty girdles worn easily about the waist and finished with a tailored bow with short ends or in long streamers.

A lovely afternoon frock of printed organdie had a piece of velvet ribbon four inches wide put around the waist and the ends crossed—not tied—at the left side, and brought around the right side, where they were tied about at the hip line in one loop and two ends—the drapery puffing slightly above the bow at the hips. It was one of the prettiest girdles of the season.

Answers to Sewing Questions.

MISS H. G. P.—French seams are the best finish for any dress if the material is light weight like crêpe, taffeta, or any of the wash materials. The cloth should not be cut too close to the first stitching, else it will not hold, and naturally one should be careful where the material ravels easily not to let threads stick out on the right side after the seam is finished. Never make the seam too narrow, else it has a hard, cordlike appearance, and will not press well.

Born in February You Should Marry

Says Doris Blake

AQUARIUS is the zodiacal sign covering the better part of February (Jan. 20 to Feb. 19, to be exact), and astrological advice on the important matter of choosing a life mate is to marry one born under the sign of Gemini (May 20 to June 21) or one born under the sign of Libra (Sept. 23 to Oct. 23).

Aquarius people are a trifle difficult to understand and to live with because of an intense nervous development, making them changeable, erratic, and often unreliable, yet imparting a mental quickness. Aquarius people represent the intellectual and scientific phase of humanity. Out of this sign come the strongest and the weakest people in the world.

They can achieve the best and highest things, or they can be utter failures. It lies within themselves and their associates to prove to which extreme they will go. Aquarius people are subject to great influence. The leisurely habits which characterize most people of this sign will defeat their great promise in life unless fortunate enough to be constantly inspired to activity. They are people who are undaunted by great misfortunes, meeting difficulties with courage and firmness; yet they permit themselves to be irritated and worried by the petty annoyances of life. Life mates of calm, patient, cheerful dispositions make the most helpful associates.

Gemini persons are gifted with a perfect balance between the sentimentally ideal and the grossly worldly. Extreme versatility is their most marked characteristic. They love to command yet do it without tyranny. An extremely sympathetic nature and a delicious sense of humor, also a most generous nature, provide a delightful marriage partnership for the Aquarius born. No other people are their equal in diplomacy. They have the way of bringing out the best in people with whom they associate.

The Libra born are balanced and just in all of their dealings. They have pleasant and agreeable temperaments, often obtaining much of their success in life by reason of their affable ways, which they are quite willing to shower upon others without discrimination. They often marry young, and Venus, being their planet, gives a charm and devotion which makes them ideal mates.

They are fair in their opinions and judgments, rarely having to regret hasty speeches or deeds. They waste neither time nor energy haggling over details. They are the natural leaders of mankind, holding power over others by sheer force of inalienable right. They may see the weak points of others, their imperfections and limitations, but their criticism and advice is helpful—never destructive. They are natural adjusters of incomplete or imperfect work, and never at a loss to supply just what is needed to make up the deficiency. They are shrewd managers. Their tenderness of heart is one of their marked characteristics.

The best months in which Aquarius people should marry, according to astrology, are March and November. These are the months when influences are supposed to work their best. July, September, and January are considered the least lucky for important ventures.

The lucky color is azure blue. The sapphire is the gem carrying good luck vibrations.

My Vacation Adventures

What was the most thrilling moment in your vacation? Was it on a boat or motor ride on a lovely night with the only one? Was it at a dance? Was it a kiss in the moonlight? Or was it a tug at the hook by a big fish? Or a close call when your canoe upset? Write your most thrilling experience and send it to Vacation Editor, The Sunday Tribune. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Out of Her Depth.

The most thrilling moment of my vacation was probably the most thrilling of my life. I am an office girl. Last summer I purchased a cottage at a nearby lake. One morning I decided to go fishing. After putting my pole and bait in and unlocking the boat, I decided to take my casting rod also. I ran back for it and when I again faced the boat it had drifted a few feet from shore.

Hastily pulling off my shoes and stockings, I waded out, but just before reaching the boat I stepped into a miry hole and sank to my waist. Determined not to be outdone, I was quickly out of those wet things and into my bathing suit.

By this time the boat had moved several rods farther out and I plunged in. I am not a proficient swimmer and have not great endurance. Again and again when I had almost reached the boat it drifted just beyond my grasp.

Then suddenly I realized it was gaining speed and I was losing strength. Casting a glance backward, I was startled to see how far away the shore was. In a panic I turned and headed toward it. Then all at once I felt myself going straight down, down, until my ears were under water. How long this lasted or whether I went down more than once I have no way of knowing. I tried to call for help; then realizing how fruitless that would be, since not a cottage on the south or east end of the lake was occupied, I made a supreme effort to keep moving. The next thing I was conscious of touching dirt. I crawled along and lay gasping, partly in and partly out of the water. The real thrill of the whole experience came when I touched good old, solid land.

SULPHUR CLEARS A PIMPLY SKIN

Apply Sulphur as Told When Your Skin Breaks Out

Any breaking out of the skin on face, neck, arms or body is overcome quickest by applying Mentho-Sulphur. The pimples seem to dry right up and go away, declares a noted skin specialist.

Nothing has ever been found to take the place of sulphur as a pimple remover. It is harmless and inexpensive. Just ask any druggist for a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur and use it like cold cream.

Georgia, while at her father's garage, saw one of the workmen enter. His dog, pleased to see him, jumped up to his lap.

George looked on a moment and then remarked, "My, you love your papa, don't you, Sport?" W. F. C.

Bobby had gone off for his first day of school piloted by his older brother. Scarce an hour later his mother was astonished to see him slipping in at the side door.

"Why, Bobby, dear. What's the matter?"

"Well, mother," he answered with a smile that was a bit wistful, "I just wanted to see your face." L. E. E.

Bob saw a baby with a pacifier in its mouth. Fascinated, he watched it for a time, then called frantically to its mother, "Mrs. Smith! Come quick! Your baby's come uncorked!" B. M. R.

Each summer on our vacation east we stop at the house of a relative. Last summer circumstances made it necessary for us to engage a room at a hotel which we left each morning, returning late at night.

One morning sonny picked up the card on which was written the rate per day. Quite shocked at the amount, he asked: "Mother, do we have to pay $7 a day for this one room way up on the tenth floor and no screen on the window?"

"Yes, sonny, isn't it awful?"

He pondered a long time, then suddenly said brightly, "Isn't it a good thing we needn't pay for the nights, too?" E. T. G.

MY NICEST COMPLIMENT

What was the nicest compliment you ever got? Was it a tribute to achievements, social gifts, learning, beauty? Was it forthright and blunt, wittily done, or something subtle? Write it out and send it to the Compliment Editor, The Tribune, Chicago. One dollar will be paid for each letter printed.

Honors to White Hair.

I think my nicest compliment came from my young son. My hair is nearly white and wavy. Several of us were discussing hair and saying how pretty such a one's hair was and what a misfortune it was to get gray so young, when up spoke the boy: "I don't know of anything that is more beautiful right now than mother's hair." E. W.

Chosen as Model.

I think the nicest compliment I ever received was while in boarding school. I noticed that one of the younger girls continually watched me and followed me about.

One day I asked her why she so often left her companions to be with me.

She said, "I have chosen you to be my model and I am going to try to be like you." A. W.

Making a Mother Smile.

One evening I was dressed in a new yellow party gown when my 10 year old son remarked, "Mother, you look just like gold to me," whereupon my 4 year old son said, "You look like a nice big bowl of custard to me." Custard is his favorite dessert. G. G.

Child's Tongue Shows if Bilious, Constipated

Give "California Fig Syrup"

Even Cross, Feverish, Sick Children Love its Taste and it Never Fails to Empty Little Bowels

Hurry mother! A teaspoonful of "California Fig Syrup" today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. 1496—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16 years and 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3⅝ yards of 36 in. or 3¼ yards of 44 in. material.

1474—Woman's dress. Sizes 36 to 50 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 4½ yards of 36 inch material for dress of one material.

1485—Misses' and girls' one piece dress. Sizes 10, 12, 14, 16, and 18 years. Size 14 requires 3¼ yards of 36 inch material for dress with long sleeves.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

KIMONO waists with shoulder seams, such as patern No. 1496, fit much better than waists that are laid on a fold of the material on the shoulder. This pattern will make a smart looking garment and should not be at all difficult.

A waist of this kind should not be snug fitting. It gets much of its style from bing easily fitted. The closing is on the left shoulder, and the dress is to be slipped on over the head.

The skirt seams come on the sides; they are slightly gored, and the skirt is attached to the waist without being measures, for size 36, abou 1¾ yards.

One thing to remember will be to decide upon the length of the dress, for skirts are longer—most of them—some reaching to the ankles; some being four inches from the floor.

Where the skirt slopes out towards the foot as this does, it should have fitted facing instead of the usual hem. Cut the facing on the same grain of the material as the lower part of the skirt, seaming it at the sides, and after stitching it in a seam to the bottom of the skirt, press the seam open flat before turning the facing gathered. At the bottom the skirt ing will be much better if pressed open first.

Blue Chinese crêpe would make up prettily by this pattern, and if trimmed with Valenciennes or filet lace would make a dress one could wear at home afternoons. Insertion one inch wide could be set in between the lower edge of the waist and top of the skirt, and both cuffs and collar could have small motifs set in, and collar and cuffs edged with a half inch wide edge. A string sash made of the crêpe with insertion set in across the ends would complete the dress. Or it could be made of satin, crêpe, or taffeta, and fagotting used instead of the insertion. The neck could be cut in a deep U shape and the opening partly filled in with a lace vestee.

Pattern No. 1485 is a charming design for a dress for classroom wear for a young girl. It seems especially adapted to serge, tricotine, or rep. For the time of year this will be worn full length sleeves will seem more appropriate. The trimming should be of a contrasting color—light weight broadcloth or heavy satin will look well. If the dress is dark blue, for instance, the collar that reaches to the hem of the skirt, the cuffs or wristbands, and the belt could be of tan broadcloth. If one desired, a small motif could be embroidered on the collar just above the belt, on each side of the front. The dress closes on the left side of the front under the collar.

Pattern No. 1474 is a graceful design, suitable for one or two materials. Crêpe or satin with skirt panels of plaited georgette would make a dressy frock, and where the side, body and front are joined a piping could be introduced of some contrasting color; or the side body could be of georgette, matching the panels.

The skirt is one piece, straight, and gathered. Be sure, before laying on the material, to measure the length to see if, after the hem is allowed for, the length will be right. And, of course, if you change the skirt length, the panels must not be forgotten.

The dress is to be slipped on over the head, and fastens at the left side of the little vest, under the rever. It will look well to use a piping in setting the skirt and waist together if one is used in joining the two parts of the waist.

The collar and revers are double—the dress in the front forming the under side of the revers and two sections being cut for the collar and one for the revers. The under collar section is seamed to the neck of the dress, clear to the ends in the front—the seam coming to the wrong side of the dress. Then the other collar section is joined to the revers from the front ends to a little farther back; they will roll open when finished. These seams are pressed open and then this seamed section is pinned and basted to the neck of the dress and stitched in a narrow seam from one end to the other. Where the seam ends in the middle of the front it must be run off as narrow as may be and hold. Then the collar is turned right side out and invisibly hemmed on the under side.

There's One Somewhere.

"I have to work every day, and have a long walk to the station from my home. My baby, 2 years old, is too heavy to carry and too young to walk the distance. I have him brought to the station to meet me and take him back with me three evenings a week, as the young woman who cares for him is going to night school three evenings a week. I sent my older boy to Louisiana for the winter, and he will therefore not be home to watch the little fellow, so I am taking all this time to ask you if there may be among your readers one who has a stroller which I could have, as I am not at all able to pay for it. I will appreciate it so much that I am sure should the donor realize it she would be repaid in my gratitude. I could call for it, if not too far.

MRS. J. B. B."

Under Great Expense.

"I wonder if through your column I can get some clothes which I need badly. The doctor has ordered me to stay out of doors as much as possible, and as I haven't warm clothes, I appeal to you. I could use a warm coat and dress for cold days. I can wear size 40 to 44. I could also use some shoes—size 7½ or 8 EE.

"We have been under great expense from doctor bills and also from starting housekeeping, and as winter is soon here, I'll have to buy coal. So I can't see my way clear to buy the things I need.

Please see what you can do for me and I can assure you you I will be appreciative. "MRS. M."

Something for Every One.

"I have the following articles to give: One pair of white duck trousers, waist measure 34 inches, length of inside seam, 31; one football suit—canvas jacket and padded trousers; several pairs of partly worn white kid gloves, sizes 4¾ and 6¾; half a dozen pairs of muslin drawers for a child about 2 years old; also a pair of large leather covered opera glasses. L. R."

Making a Child Happy.

"I am a girl 14 years of age. My mother, who is ill most of the time, cannot afford to buy me dresses or coats. We are living on what my 15 year old brother makes, which is $12 a week. Sometimes I make a few dimes by doing chores for the neighbors after school. If some kind reader has a dress or coat to give away I will be overjoyed to have it. Thank you.

"FRANCES."

CANTILEVERS ADD TO YOUR VITALITY

SHOES that fit your foot comfortably and by flexing at the arch allow the foot to flex in walking as nature requires, give a constant stimulus to your ability. Contrariwise, shoes that distort the foot and rigidly prevent its natural flexing movement tend to drain your nervous energy and by frequent irritation lower your vitality and your ability to concentrate and work.

If you prefer buoyant strength and achievement, change to the comfortable, helpful Cantilever Shoe.

It is well built on a last that conforms to the contours of the foot. With the natural inner sole line, the toes point straight ahead and are comfortable; a share of the weight of the body falls easily on the ball of the foot.

The well-set heel encourages good posture, which in turn encourages good health.

The shank of a Cantilever Shoe is drawn up, by lacing the shoe, to fit the instep and provide restful support. And it FLEXES WITH THE FOOT. It does not bind the muscles and impede circulation as a rigid sole does. It strengthens the muscles by allowing them freedom to exercise, thus preventing or correcting weak arches.

GENUINE CANTILEVER SHOES HAVE THE NAME "CANTILEVER" STAMPED ON THE SHANK. AVOID SUBSTITUTES. WE ARE THE SOLE AGENTS IN CHICAGO. SEND FOR FREE BOOKLET.

AUTUMN PIES AND THINGS.

A PROPER pumpkin pie has an aroma. This aroma is as positive and allucing as that of the best cake ever baked. The common way of expressing this fact is to speak of "the spicy pumpkin pie." But this may be quite misleading, since pumpkin pies are often flavored with ginger, cinnamon and cloves and theirs is the odor disseminated. It is the pumpkin's own aroma, deepened and intensified by the right sort of cooking, that should constitute the main ingredient in the odor from a pumpkin pie. By long and careful cooking only is this intensification brought about.

It cannot be too much emphasized that pumpkin should be cooked until it is of a dark brown shade. This requires much longer cooking than that required to make it tender. A double boiler or some similar contrivance is the best utensil in which to cook it, and no water should be added. The edible portion of a pumpkin contains over ninety-three per cent of water and by dry steaming—such as that in double boiler cooking—much of this is dried out, and whatever of sugar there is in the pumpkin is actually caramelized or browned, probably, and that is what gives the dark color so superior to any similar color obtained by spices and molasses.

When a pie ranks as a national tradition, as that made of the pumpkin does, it is a pity for this tradition to be traduced as it has been by serving something with an insipid vegetable background against which the spices stand out like sore thumbs, or with which they cannot blend no matter what the admixture of sweetening and eggs added.

Preparing Pumpkin.

Wash the pumpkin thoroughly, wipe it with paper toweling, wash and wipe your hands dry—there are reasons why it is slovenly to do such work as cutting up fruit and vegetables with wet hands. Cut the pumpkin in halves midway between the stem and blossom ends and remove seeds and most of the pulp. Do not scrape off that which clings to the hard part because it is the sweetest and most highly flavored part of the pumpkin, which resembles the cantaloupe in so far as that it is sweetest farthest away from the skin. Cut each piece into convenient shapes for paring and finally cut all into cubes an inch or so square.

The old fashioned iron kettle over a diminishing fire was what was formerly used for cooking pumpkin, which, as any cook of experience knows, will burn readily if directly over too hot a fire. That is another reason why a double boiler is best for this work. But the pumpkin may be cooked for a long time over a simmering burner, turned low, after a tiny bit of water used to start the steam while the whole is being heated, has once come to the boiling point. In a kettle with an hermetically sealed cover there should be almost no escape of steam with this quiet cooking. There may even be too much water in the long cooked pumpkin. If so, add a little butter to the pumpkin and stir it constantly over a hot fire.

Seeds Add Flavor.

Old time cooks often prepared pumpkin by simply washing and cutting it into small pieces, without peeling or removing the seeds. These were sieved out in the end, and perhaps they yielded a certain flavor. Most seeds cooked with the pulp of flesh of any fruit or vegetable do add flavor.

The condition of cooked pumpkin is in determining largely how much milk and other ingredients shall be added to it. Two tablespoons of nice dark smooth condensed pumpkin will season a cup of milk used with two eggs, sugar to suit, and not more than one spice. It is more common to use as much pumpkin as milk and about half as much sugar as pumpkin and more spices—each to his taste.

But the finest pumpkin pie of all—about an inch thick—is to my mind one that has a custard-like skin over the top which may rise and blister a bit as the part underneath loses moisture and shrinks, and then shrinks more in the cooling. You cannot tell how to make this sort of a pie. Each cook has to work out her own salvation.

An English Essay on the Pumpkin.

In an English essay on the pumpkin this statement is made: "Pumpkin to the average American suggests pumpkin pie, but as this vegetable flourishes all over the world almost every nation has its own way of preparing it. In some countries it is fried in oil or butter, in others it is boiled in soup, none of which methods, however, would appeal to the palate accustomed to rich pumpkin custard, plentifully spiced and deliciously flavored."

Plentiful spices are likely to kill the flavor—we cannot say it too often—and if we want to use ginger, especially in large quantities, why not try it in something which is not as laborious to prepare. Squash pies are not nearly so as are pumpkin.

ruined by excessive supplies of spice

Pie Crusts.

We have so nearly lost our ideals on pie crusts that a recipe for this dainty though somewhat dangerous food can hardly be written. If any but fats of the highest quality are used it is impossible to have the toasted flour of the crust give the predominating flavor, as it should. Expert pastry makers, compounding large quantities of pastry dough, often use three sorts of fats, in which case one flavors the other, as in cooking meats, and the housewife can always use a bit of fine butter with a pure lard. No end of methods of making crust have been worked out, but if the hand that makes it is hot and heavy and inexperienced the pie crust will not be light. The great problem is to flour the fat perfectly and not to grease the flour. It is not easy to express this fact adequately, but the difference in results is great. In one case you get a light lump of dough, in the other a greasy, hard lump.

Late Method of Pie Crust Making.

Of course, one of the things our grandmothers never used in pie crusts was baking powder, nor any substitute for it, yet this is frequently put into pie crusts today, so making what is but a rather short biscuit dough, and that is a good dough for meat pies and can be used for anything, but it cannot rank as fine pastry.

A problem is how to use as little water as possible in wetting up the flour and fat mixture. The recipes have left it uncertain, as in Mrs. Lincoln's recipes for "pastry for one pie," which reads: "One heaping cup of pastry flour, one saltspoonful of baking powder, one saltspoonful of salt [one-fourth teaspoon is the same thing], and from one-third to one-half cup of lard and butter mixed. Mix the baking powder and salt with the flour, and rub in the lard. Mix quite stiff with cold water. Roll out, put the butter on the paste in little pieces, and sprinkle with flour. Fold over, and roll out. Roll up like a jelly roll. Divide in two parts, and roll to fit plate."

Note the "rub"! This really means put fat into flour with light fingers, making the whole a thing of uniform texture, though the word "rub" so often means heavy work. Some experienced cooking teachers use two knives, and chop the fat into the flour, but that sort of thing requires practice.

One of the specialists of the experimental kitchen of the United States department of agriculture, in talking before a home economics meeting some months back, said they had been cutting the fat into the flour with a bread cutter. Then they had wet only a part of the mixture and worked the rest into it. This is all right if the dough does not get handled too much, and is the method used by many highly experienced cooks in mixing any dough on a board instead of in a bowl. In this case they have to make a cone, hollow it out, put the liquid into this and work so not to spill any of it out.

Leakless Fruit Pies.

Some old fashioned cooks made the upper crust of a covered pie larger by considerable than the lower, then tucked this extra under the edges of the lower and pressed down the edge in a more or less fancy fashion, so thinning it. But if there were not holes cut in the top of the pie even this would not have prevented the steaming contents from breaking through somewhere, especially if the pie was ter.

Some sugar and flour on the lower crust of a pie before the fruit is added will more or less insure that lower crust from sogginess, but because juicy fruit pies present "unexpected difficulties to the home cook owing to their tendency to become soggy," the specialist of the government kitchen pursued a course in pastry making experiments, and decided that if the under crust were first baked until slightly brown, the pies would be bet- being baked with too hot a fire.

ANSWERS TO LOVE PROBLEMS

Have you a perplexing love affair on which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care The Tribune, Chicago. If you wish a personal reply please send a stamped, addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in the Daily Tribune.

Win Mother Over.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl of 17 who has many girl friends and also many boy friends. I can have all the fun I want with the girls, but I am not even permitted to keep appointments with the boys or speak of them. Kindly tell me what I am to do. BETTY."

Betty, suppose you try to win your mom over to letting you have the boys and girls come to your home. Let mother get acquainted with the boys and mayhap she will change her mind. Naturally, she does not want you going out to keep appointments with them.

He's Changed His Mind.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have been going out with a certain girl for about two months. About a week ago she didn't keep an appointment with me and I told her that I never wanted to meet or speak to her again. Two weeks have passed and I would like to meet this girl again, as I really and truly miss her. I have too much pride to tell her I love her and would like to keep steady company with her. Kindly tell me how I could meet her again. "ANXIOUS."

Bury your hurt pride, Anxious. Call her up and ask her to go out with you.

Think It Over.

"Dear Miss Blake: Having no one in this world to advise me, I'm turning to you. I've been keeping company with a young man for one year and he has given me an engagement ring. My parents have never objected and now they want me to give him his ring back and stop our friendship because he is too old for me and too quiet. I'm 18 years old and he is eight years my senior, but, dear Miss Blake, I love him dearly and he loves me, and to obey my parents would break my heart and also his. So please advise me. "BROKEN HEARTED."

Don't you think you might be able to compromise on a year's wait, say? Then you would be only 19 and perhaps be surer that he is the only man for you. By the end of twelve months your parents, too, may have changed their minds about the man. I would wait. Broken Hearted.

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody Can Tell When You Darken Gray, Faded Hair With Sage Tea

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now, because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. It's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful.

THE POTTERS

by J. P. McEvoy

PROLOGUE.

The only opportunity Ma has to discuss the affairs of the family with Pa is that brief interlude between the time Pa lays his weary head on the pillow and the moment he drops off to sleep . . . it is an ideal arrangement for Ma, because there is little possibility of her losing any arguments . . . so, while she had planned originally to defer discussion of Mamie and Red and their impending marriage until some other day, the sight of Pa in bed, tired and sleepy, was too much for her . . . here is a marvelous chance to change his mind, says Ma; I can convince him he should let them get married, if I can only keep him awake long enough . . . certainly nothing could sound more reasonable than that. . . .

Scene—The Potter Bedroom.

Pa is in bed, dressed in his violently striped pajamas, Pa's only concession to the secret defiance that still flickers faintly in his breast . . . he has neckties, of course, that he doesn't dare wear on the street . . . if he could only summon the courage! . . . but in the privacy of his bedroom he satisfies to some extent his desire to escape the humdrum of life by wearing loud pajamas . . . Ma is seated at the dressing table rubbing cold cream into her face with those mysterious upward passes guaranteed to reduce the most multiple chin to its original single blessedness . . . those tired lines around the eyes are also receiving their nightly attention. . . . Demosthenes, who could make speeches with his mouth full of pebbles, probably learned the trick from observing Mrs. Demosthenes talk fluently with her mouth full of hair pins . . . just as Ma is now doing. . . .

MA (brushing her hair):
What did you say to Red tonight?

PA (defensively):
Not a thing that wasn't right.

Serves Pa right for being so clumsy.

MA: You hurt his feelings just the same.
PA: I told him he couldn't marry Mame
Till he had a job and had made some dough.
What's wrong about that, I'd like to know?

MA (shifting hairpins to other side of mouth):
Mamie was crying, too . . . she said
You talked just awful tonight to Red . . .

(deftly):
I don't see why we should interfere—
We married on little enough, my dear.

PA (sleepily):
When we got married the things were cheap . . .
Go on to bed . . . I wanna sleep . . .

MA (pursuing her line of thought undisturbed):
He's got a job, he told me so,
And we could help a bit, you know.

PA (determined):
Mamie distinctly understands
When once I've got her off my hands
I'm not gonna keep her man and her . . .
Say, wothahel is a husband fer?

MA (icily):
Just a minute—you needn't swear;
There's no occasion to rant and rare . . .

(off on another tangent):
Your poor little girl . . . to make her weep . . .

PA (wearily):
Didn't neither . . . let me sleep . . .

MA (separating strand of front hair and thoughtfully winding it on curler):
They'll get along . . . he's very bright,
And thoughtful, too, and so polite . . .
And he waits on her as quick as a wink.
He's a dear, sweet boy . . . that's what I think.

PA (scornfully):
Say, I'm not looking for boys to keep . . .
Get her a man . . . and let me sleep . . .

MA (starting on second curler):
He is a man, and a real one, too,
And you'll be proud of him 'fore he's through;
And he's so devoted . . . so kind and sweet . . .
A man like that is hard to beat,
And Mamie loves him, and he loves her—
Isn't that true?

PA (starting to snore softly):

MA (loudly):
Aren't you paying attention to me?

PA (happily):
Kaaaaaa . . . Wheeeeee . . . Kaaaaaa . . . Wheeeeee.

MA (louder):
Wake up . . . you can't go to sleep that way . . .
I'm talking to you . . .

PA (drowsily):
Wha' yu shay?

MA (severely):
You didn't hear a word of what I said,
And I was talking of Mamie and Red.
Their lifelong happiness is at stake,
And look at the int'rest that you take!
It's enough to make a mother weep.

PA (heavily):
Yesh, thash ri' . . . I wanna shleep.

MA (applying the cold cream with the magic motions alluded to):
Here I'm worrying all I can,
And you want to sleep . . . just like a man!
You might have listened to what I said . . .

PA (pulling covers over his head):
I wanna sleep . . . Gwan to bed!

(Ma gives the final touches to her makeup and crawls into bed. . . . Pa settles down luxuriously and gives covers extra tug . . . they come out at the bottom, leaving his toes waving in the open air . . . many a home has been wrecked because the covers were not tucked in securely at the foot of the bed. . . .)

PA (fiercely):
I wish you'd learn to make a bed . . .

MA (aloofly):
I wish to speak of Mamie and Red.
You haven't listened to what I've said.

PA (resignedly):
Say your say and let me rest—
Hurry and get it off your chest.

MA (with maddening placidity):
It seems to me you're too severe;
Why don't you let them marry, dear?
They won't need much at the very first,
And if it came to the very worst,
Why, we could help them get a start . . .

PA (wearily):
Help them nothing . . . have a heart . . .
For the luva mike turn out the light
And go to sleep . . . don't talk all night.

MA (turning out light—that's little enough to do for the poor man):
As I was saying, they'll get along;
They won't need to go so strong
On fixing up their place this year,
And we could help a little, dear.
If they should get their little flat,
Wouldn't you love to help with that?

PA (snoring blissfully):
Cawfooshhhhh . . . Kawwwwwww . . .

MA (shaking him):
Here, wake up, I'm talking to you.

(Meanwhile in the next room the baby has been stirring restlessly . . . all this mumble bumble in Ma's room is disturbing a perfectly nice ice cream eating dream.)

"Why don't you answer when I speak?"

MA (exasperated):
Is this the attention that I get?

PA (arousing):
For the luva mike, you talking yet?

(Ducks under pillow and presses it down over his ears. . . . Ma talks on, sitting up in bed in the dark . . . a slight noise from the baby's room.)

MA: Why don't you answer when I speak?
PA: Are you gonna keep this up all week?
I won't have it, and that ends that . . .

BABY: O, Daddy, I wanna d'ink.

PA (sore):
Now you've started the little brat.

MA: Don't you call our child a brat.
PA: He's not a brat, then, he's a pest.
Get him a drink and give me a rest . . .

BABY (insistent):
I wanna d'ink, Daddy.

"You might have listened to what I said."

MA (who has a one-track mind on which trains can run in complete circles without once jumping the track):
We wouldn't have to give them a cent,
And they wouldn't need to pay much rent—
Just a little flat in simple taste,
And if Mamie's careful not to waste
And he works hard they'll do all right.

PA (desperately):
Are you gonna keep this up all night?

MA (soothingly):
Now, Pa, you don't have to start a fight . . .
You're not as sleepy as you think.

BABY (loud:
I wanna d'ink! I wanna d'ink!

PA (getting out of bed with every muscle protesting):
Hush up in there, you'll get your drink;
It's enough to put one on the blink.

MA (virtuously):
You have no right to start a fuss—
You owe a little time to us . . .

(Settles down in bed with a satisfied air of having told Pa what's what and put him in his place . . . meanwhile Pa has conscientiously bumped his bunions getting a drink for the Baby, who merely touched his lips with it and refused to take any. . . . Pa sleepily spills water in Baby's bed and has to give him a dry sheet . . . serves Pa right for being so clumsy . . . finally gets to bed, pulls covers over his head, holds pillow over cover, and hopes for the best.)

MA (continuing where she left off):
Don't you think yourself he's bright,
And so considerate, so polite?
And they could really live quite cheap
If they won't go into debt too deep.
Don't you think yourself they could?
Your judgment, Pa, is pretty good.

PA (dead to the world):
Cawfoosh . . . Squeeeeee . . . Kaaaaaa . . . Squeeeeeeee.

(The end? Not at all, but Ma finally gives up in despair and goes to sleep . . . looks as though Mamie and Red will have to give it up for a while unless they elope . . . unless they elope—wonder if they have ever thought of that?)

(And that's that—until next Sunday.)

Eatmor Cranberries

New Crop ~ now in the market!

There is no flavor just like the tasty tang of the American Cranberry.

Cranberries are good themselves, and make other foods taste good.

They are an all-purpose fruit, and may be enjoyed at every meal.

For breakfast—try cranberry jelly on hot biscuits or toast; it is surprisingly good!

For lunch—with cold cuts—cranberry sauce makes a most delicious relish.

For dinner—with roast beef or steak—cranberry sauce adds a piquant flavor and aids digestion.

As a dessert—a tempting cranberry pie, jelly roll, or pudding perfects the meal.

Cranberries have no waste—all of the fruit is used.

They require no labor to prepare—and little cooking.

A quart of cranberries will serve 12 persons.

Serve them often. Preserve them for Spring and Summer use.

Always cook cranberries in porcelain-lined, enameled or aluminum vessels.

Always specify "Eatmor Cranberries"—a selection of the choicest cultivated varieties.

Try These Recipes

Cranberry Sauce

One quart cranberries, two cups boiling water, 1½ to 2 cups sugar. Boil sugar and water together for five minutes; skim; add the cranberries and boil without stirring (five minutes is usually sufficient) until all the skins are broken. Remove from the fire when the popping stops.

Strained Cranberry Sauce

If a strained sauce is preferred, cook the cranberries and water; then press through the strainer, keeping back the skins; add the sugar and finish the cooking as suggested.

Cranberry Meringue Pie

One and one-half cups sugar, two cups cranberries, one-half cup cold water, one tablespoon flour, two eggs, one tablespoon butter, one-half teaspoon vanilla, two tablespoons powdered sugar. Cook sugar and water to a syrup; add the cranberries. Cook until the berries have popped. Cool a little. Mix smoothly in a bowl the flour and yolks of the eggs; add three tablespoons of the juice of the cranberries; add this to the berries and simmer for three minutes. Stir in butter and vanilla and set aside to cool. Turn filling into deep pie crust previously baked; cover with meringue made from stiffly beaten whites of eggs and powdered sugar. Place in cool oven to set and slightly brown the meringue.

Cranberry Ice

One quart cranberries, one pint water, one pound sugar, juice of two lemons.

Cook the cranberries with the water until the berries are tender; then strain; add the sugar and cook until this is thoroughly dissolved. Cool; stir in the strained lemon juice, and freeze to the consistency of water ice. Serve as a dessert or in sherbet glasses as an accompaniment to roast turkey or any hot or cold meats. Enough for six persons.

Cranberry Jelly

Cook until soft the desired quantity of cranberries with 1½ pints of water for each two quarts of berries. Strain the juice through a jelly bag.

Measure the juice and heat it to the boiling point. Add one cup of sugar for every two cups of juice; stir until the sugar is dissolved; boil briskly for five minutes; skim, and pour into glass tumblers, porcelain or crockery molds.

Cranberry Pie

Have ready a partly baked pastry shell. Pour in sauce when cold, made by either of the sauce recipes, put strips of pastry over the top, and finish baking in a moderate oven.

Mock Cherry Pie

One cup cranberries, one-half cup raisins, one cup sugar, one-half cup water, one tablespoon flour, pinch of salt.

Chop the cranberries coarsely; add to them the raisins, seeded, and cut in pieces. Add also the sugar, water, flour and salt. Line a deep pie plate with pastry; turn the filling into this, and cover with an upper crust. Press the edges closely together, and bake in a moderate oven about half an hour. This pie may be flavored with almond or vanilla. Enough to serve six persons.

Baked Cranberry Pudding

Three tablespoons of butter, one cup of sugar, yolks of two eggs, one-half cup milk, two cups flour, one level teaspoon cream of tartar, three-quarters teaspoon soda, one-third teaspoon salt, two cups chopped cranberries. Cream together the butter and sugar. Add the yolks of the eggs and beat them into the first mixture Next add the milk, then the flour, cream of tartar, soda and salt sifted together; lastly stir in the chopped cranberries. Turn into a baking dish and cook in a moderately hot oven three-quarters of an hour. Serve hot with foamy sauce.

Most Surprising Relief from Heat Is Afforded by Roofs with Steep Gables

Anita de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to home building and home furnishing. Address your letter to Anita de Campi, The Tribune, Chicago. Inclose stamped, addressed envelope for personal reply.

By Anita de Campi.

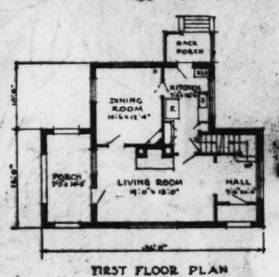
THOSE who have lived in the top floor apartment of a flat building and those who have lived in a story and a half bungalow with a flat pitched roof, will appreciate the relief from the stifling heat of midsummer afforded by the steep gabled roof of this cement stucco house. Homes of the type pictured here are found in certain parts of northern France, and many are being built in California and other states. It is safe to say that as their comfort and livable qualities become better known in this country; houses of this type will be much in vogue everywhere.

Arched openings at either end of the house make an attractively balanced front exposure. The one at the right hand leads to a sheltering recessed entrance porch, and thence into the large entrance hall, which really is part of the 12 by 19 foot living room adjoining. A convenient clothes closet might well be placed at the far end of the hall under the stairs.

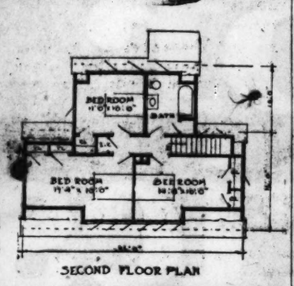
The other arched opening is one of three which make a most picturesque terrace porch, connected with and adjoining the opposite end of the living room. Screened in and fitted up with a couch hammock and a smoker's stand or sewing machine accessories, it is a most delightful place to enjoy a summer afternoon. Glazed, it adds another room to the house in winter, suitable for a children's play room and one which will assist materially in keeping the remainder of the house comfortably warm.

In the living room itself a central fireplace dominates all. Just behind, to one side, is the dining room, in one corner of which is a built-in colonial cabinet, the design of which dates back to an early period. Such cabinets may now be had from the mill, ready to set up and at most reasonable prices.

Through a double swinging door, with a glass upper panel, one enters the kitchen. This is indeed a little gem, well lighted and, best of all, well ventilated. Three doors and a large double window offer instant means of relief should the room be uncomfortable. A built-in pantry case and kitchen cabinet combined, and a closet for the broom, garbage can, and what-not are deftly arranged, so as to be material step savers. Probably a better place than inside the kitchen for the refrigerator would be a small, covered closet placed on the back porch, just outside the door. It should be well insulated from the heat of the sun. The kitchen door might be moved to Janette was seeking her uncle's admiration side, and thus provide space in the corner for a small table.



FIRST FLOOR PLAN



SECOND FLOOR PLAN

A conveniently arranged and roomy upper floor is found at the head of the stairs. Each of two large bedrooms has two clothes closets. The other has one. The bathroom and linen closet are also found here. Two or more wide opening casement windows provide good ventilation for each bedroom. The attic up above also insures a comfortable temperature.

This house has been designed to be built of sand floated, cream colored cement plaster on plain tile.

Cement plaster on metal lath is used on the wall back of the kitchen range and for the basement ceiling over the heating plant and coal storage, which, we are told, are vulnerable to fire.

There is a basement under the rear portion of the house provided with a concrete floor and walls—which insure dryness and protection against rats and vermin. This makes it especially suitable for storage of food supplies and as a place to do up the family washing.

For the exterior color scheme we have, contrasted against the cream colored stucco, bottle green window blinds, white trim, and a variegated shingle roof.

Most favorable results are effected if the house be located so as to front south or if it is placed on a corner lot fronting south and west. Plans for this house were drawn by George W. Schwan, architect, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Answer to Query.

M. K.: In the boy's room carry out a color scheme of French gray and old blue. Use rep for the bed cover. Peony pink taffeta would be nice in the bedroom with the tan rugs and walnut furniture. Ecru net, gathered on rods at top and bottom, could be used on your French doors. Have white dotted grenadine curtains in your gray and white kitchen.

Is Marriage a Failure?

Why do so many marriages go wrong? What are the underlying causes of happy marriages? Are there any happy marriages? What is the matter, if anything, with marriage, the institution?

"H. L. George, the English novelist, investigated 150 marriages. One hundred and sixteen cases he eliminated as unsuccessful; in five cases the husband was unfaithful; in ten it was the wife; the husband disliked the wife in three cases and in seven it was the wife who did the disliking. Only nine marriages, Mr. George says, were 'apparently successful.'

"'Marriage,' he adds, 'is on its trial before a hesitating jury.'"

Look over the marriages you know yourself. How many are successes; how many are failures? And why?

The Tribune will pay $1 for each letter published on the question. Marriage—what do you think of it? Address Marriage Editor, The Sunday Tribune.

Insuring Marital Happiness.

A contemporary poet, Paul Hanna, wrote the line, "Poverty is the shortest road to hell." I think this sentiment applies especially to marriage, both before and after taking.

More marriages are failures because of an insufficiency of food, clothing, shelter, and the little luxuries that make life bearable, than for any other reason. Two can not live as cheaply as one; and while love in a garret may sound interesting in a novel, the reality in actual practice is neither happy nor successful. Look about you! How much of the marital discord today has its roots in complexes caused by dirt, dishwashing, and drabness.

The romantic stuff written and filmed about marriage and love has had a bad effect upon impressionable young girls. Recently, however, a new type of fiction has evolved—a school which aims at telling some of the truth about these institutions as they actually exist among the masses. Read, you beautiful, radiant young girl creatures of today who are tiptoe for love and romance and marriage! Read and consider well. Read everything; find out about this world you are living in. And apply the lesson to yourselves.

The remedy? The only real remedy is the abolition of poverty, of course; but this is a task for the ages. We are concerned now with the making of happy marriages. Therefore, let no one marry who has not considered well the step and who is not assured of sufficient economic provision for a family, instead of one. Let no woman marry until she has read real books and many of them, until she is at least 25, and until she has been engaged for at least three years, with the privilege of seeing other men as much as she will.

Let either party be privileged to break the engagement, for good reason, at any time prior to marriage, "and no hard feelin's." Let no woman be forced into marriage for economic causes—by her relatives or to escape work. There exists some sort of occupation today by which any woman may earn her living, if she will; and there is small excuse for the woman who allows herself to fall into that terrible life—the economic marriage.

Love, with the great mass of normal Jacks and Jills, will usually follow if economic sufficiency is assured. Jack would probably have been about as well satisfied with another one of the vast number of Jills, and vice versa—the difference being, he happened to meet this particular Jill under auspicious circumstances. Z. W.

That First Love Affair of Mine

What was your "puppy love" affair? Can you tell it now without a wrench of the heart—with a laugh, say? If so, The Tribune will pay $5 for each story published on "My 'Puppy Love' Story." Write on one side of the paper and make your story brief. Address Puppy Love Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

PERHAPS HE CAN'T FORGET.

MY poor little "first love." He was one of the neighborhood kids and often came over to my house in the company of his numerous brothers and sisters. He was the youngest of the lot, and bashful. Georgie was his name and the minute I saw him my heart was lost.

It happened I was the little queen supreme of the neighborhood—my rules and wishes were strictly adhered to by all the rest.

Poor Georgie! I fear he cared for me less than any of the others; but I adored him. Consequently, when I commanded the others to catch Georgie and hold him while I kissed him it was done. He would kick and squirm but to no avail. Yes, indeed, many are the kisses I bestowed upon him to the glee of the others and the utter despair of Georgie.

Well, I saw Georgie the other day. He is long and lank—O, I should say "He's six feet four in his stockin' know, he hardly glanced at me feet" (so the song goes). He must be day as I passed him—I wonder about 19 and he still looks bashful. You still afraid? E. S.

LOVE LETTERS

The Tribune will pay $5 for every love letter published. So, if you can write a good one, or if you have one in your private or family possessions you would like to enter in the contest, send it to Love Letter Editor, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago. As no letters will be returned, send copies of the ones you wish to retain possession of.

THE GREATEST GIFT.

GOD'S gift to me: Tonight as I sit in my lonely room I feel a glow, across the weary space that separates me from my best beloved. This I know must be the warmth of your true heart, seeking to fill the great void in my soul, so lost indeed, far from your clinging arms.

Always in my thoughts I picture you in each smallest detail—those blue eyes, so sparkling and so infinitely beautiful to me, those glowing cheeks and that fair skin which asks no aid of artifice, those golden curls that weave about my dreams a silken web to make me still more certainly, if that were possible, your slave.

And as I see you thus, clear as though in the flesh you stood before me, I pity from the depths of a grateful heart that man to whom no lonely moments bring the intimate knowledge of a pure, sweet, loving wife-to-be, the best gift God can make to any man—save, perhaps, a wonderful mother such as has been my great fortune also to possess.

To men, big in stature though they may be, there come at times moments of vast longing—craving for they know not what. Such men deserve no praise, if, in temptation's hour, they keep their path with eyes that do not see another thing but that well loved form which so satisfies, that nothing for one instant leads away from the sweet thought of her who claims first place.

That place is yours, my own, and you need never doubt for one least moment that, no matter the distance nor the circumstance, you so command me, day and night, that nothing counts but the treasured fact that you are mine and I am Always yours.

This Will Ward Off And Break Up Colds

Just a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin removes the congestion

THE two ailments that people generally regard as of the least importance are in reality the cause of most serious illnesses and of the greatest proportion of deaths.

They are constipation and common colds. Many doctors now believe that colds, tonsilitis, a touch of malaria will cause constipation, instead of constipation being their cause. The fact remains that you seldom have a cold without constipation, due to general congestion. The only way to avoid colds is to keep up your vitality. You usually catch cold in the winter if you are run down. Therefore in cold weather exercise more; eat more fatty foods; drink four to six glasses of water a day; keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

You are also less liable to colds if your system is free from the intestinal poisons of constipation, so empty the bowels regularly with a plain vegetable laxative like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

ANY FAMILY MAY TRY IT FREE

Thousands of parents are asking themselves, "Where can I find a trustworthy laxative that anyone in the family can use when constipated?" I urge you to try Syrup Pepsin. I will gladly provide a liberal free sample bottle, sufficient for an adequate test. Write me where to send it. Address Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 515 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois. Do it now!

At the first sign of a cold, at the first few warning sneezes, take a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin and the congestion will be gone in a few hours. Don't wait until the cold has a grip on you. Mr. Henry Dean, Jr., of Rochester, N. Y., cured a stubborn cold in just that way, and Mrs. Alice Corbbrey of Haskell, Okla., uses it effectively for all the small ills of her family, such as constipation, biliousness, headaches, dizziness, and to break up fevers and colds.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a scientifically-balanced compound of Egyptian senna with pleasant-tasting aromatics. It is safe to give to infants, and all children like it. Before you again resort to cold remedies containing narcotics try a teaspoonful of Syrup Pepsin. Any druggist will supply you, and the cost is less than a cent a dose.

Autumn's Great Display and Sale Quaker Craft Lace Curtains and Nets

This is Chicago's greatest display and sale—not merely the greatest in quantity but also in variety. This is not merely of local interest—it is national; that is why we are making a big feature of Home Craft Week. Our one thought for this week will be to demonstrate how much more attractive you can make your home with a moderate investment. We feature Quaker Craft curtains and nets, because they keep their dainty beauty and wear, and will be a delight season after season. They are made of staple Egyptian yarn. Moreover, they have a tied or knotted mesh that can't slip or get out of shape even with rough usage. But best of all, Quaker Craft lace is noted for its beauty and the fact that styles originate in the Quaker Craft line. Here, for example, are some of the new lines we are featuring—the new fringed curtains, casement net curtains, Filet Grandee, Tuscan net, Japanese, Stencil Sampler lace, Duotone, Bobbinet and Crochet Tuscans. We are showing throughout the entire week, both in our show windows and our Drapery Department, models of the most approved methods of draping modern windows.

LIGHTWEIGHT COATS FOR FALL

By A. T. Gallico.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—It is probable that on the day this article is published summer will have taken a renewed interest in this part of the world, as it so often does when we think that autumn has come, and so the thought of fall top coats may not in the least appeal to you. But at the date of writing an exhilarating snap is in the air, causing us to wonder if, when the sun goes down, we shall not be glad of a light overcoat to slip on. At any rate, it is advisable to have one's fall coat within speaking distance, because one never knows just when a need for warmth will come along.

There is always an in between season in spring and fall when a greatcoat is too much and no coat not enough. But the same lightweight coat will do for both ends of the year. There is little noticeable difference between the models of last spring and those of this fall except, perhaps, a greater emphasis upon the loose easy lines of the English box coat.

This box coat, which was one of the predominating garments among the best dressers last spring, promises to hold its popularity this season. Room and plenty of it, is the important note in nowaday overcoat styles. Even the standard Chesterfield model, which is form fitting, has enough room to enable one to grasp a handful of material at the waist line. The conservative dresser has no interest in tight fitting clothes of any kind.

If you want one coat which is to serve every purpose from automobiling to evening wear, the answer is the box model in a soft fabric. A fitted Chesterfield is quite all right and proper for city wear or evening, but as soon as you take it away from a metropolitan setting it is out of its element.

The box coat, with the set in sleeves and without too much fullness, is an all around garment, valuable to any man who does not want to buy two or more coats.

But in case you already have, say, a Chesterfield, and want a top coat that will cover occasions calling for more negligee an attire, it is safe to assume that your Chesterfield will still be in good style, for they are such a stable article, and invest in the more informal raglan sleeve coat, which is in great favor, but which is not recommended quite as highly as the set in sleeve box back model for the coat which is to play many rôles.

The same idea carries through into the question of color. Although light colors will be much in evidence, such as tans and light grays, if there is to be but one coat, a darker color is advisable, both because a light one would soon succumb to inevitable soiling and because a dark top coat is more suitable if the coat is to be used with evening clothes. The day has passed, and whether it will return is doubtful, when one had to have a dress overcoat for evening wear. But the less of the negligee spirit introduced into evening wear the better.

Belted coats are still in favor with many young men, especially in collegiate circles. Belted coats lay the emphasis upon sportiness more than dressiness. They are not recommended as the coat for general use.

Tweeds and homespuns, Saxony cloth and cheviots are the popular materials for loose coats, while the Chesterfield or fitted coats run more to coverts, meltons, and kerseys. Double breasteds are not as much in evidence in fall coats as the warmer greatcoats of winter, when they serve to furnish extra warmth. They should be carefully avoided by any one who does not wish to emphasize shortness or stoutness of figure.

Box coats and other loose models button through as a rule, but fly fronts are frequently seen on the box model. Collars are quite wide, with notched lapels. Unfitted coats are usually finished on the sleeve with a small cuff, whereas the Chesterfield has a plain sleeve with no decoration.

The question of lining is one which has caused much discussion. There are those who affirm that without lining the friction of the coat sleeve against the suit sleeve will make it harder to slip into the coat. As a consequence of this theory a great many coats are but skeleton lined except for the sleeves, which are entirely lined. However, it is also the opinion of many that the present styles are so roomy that the friction is not enough to warrant any complaint as to facility in donning the garment. In deciding individually this question, experience is an important factor.

By Mae Tinee.

GOOD MORNING!

Our most beautiful lady, Miss Katherine MacDonald, has an intriguing vehicle in "White Shoulders." She also has, if you please, a good supporting cast and a fine director. She is not always so lucky. Before pitching into the story, I want to say a word for Bryant Washburn. He has mellowed his acting. Self-discipline has conquered the few annoying mannerisms he collected after several successes that seemed to turn his head. His work in "White Shoulders" is thoroughly sincere and convincing. Our regret is that you see too little of him.

The picture is an adaptation of a story that ran in a weekly periodical and has, for screen purposes, been turned hind side before. Really, though, I believe it had to be to make sense. Anyhow, nearly everything in the story version has been made use of at one time or another, in the picture.

There is no doubt that the director could have put more punch into some of the dramatic incidents. In his desire to avoid the melodramatic, he has, perhaps, swerved a little too much the other way. This fault, however, one can far more readily condone than that of padding, and certainly there is no padding in "White Shoulders."

KATHERINE MAC DONALD.
[Brotherton Photo.]

The story is one of those marriage mart things. A mother, anxious to secure the luxuries of life for her daughter that that daughter has been accustomed to, but which misfortune has laid a cold, firm touch upon, frenziedly plots marriage for her with a wealthy bachelor.

BRYANT WASHBURN.

The girl, for her mother's sake, is about to accept the elderly suitor's proposal, when, overcome with loathing at his touch, she refuses instead. The man makes an insulting remark about her in the presence of her brother and is killed by the brother.

The latter is brought to trial. The jury disagrees and, there being no one to bail him out, he stays in jail. Mother and daughter, under another name, take an apartment in a boarding house in another state.

Here, again, the mother flaunts her daughter before the eyes of a marriageable man, goaded by the added need of money for the new trial.

"With your beauty, he will forgive you anything, once he is your husband," she says to the shrinking girl.

Mr. Washburn is not the new suitor. He is merely a chance acquaintance who has loved "White Shoulders" at first sight and whom she loves. When the sordid truth comes out, as it does, he is the one who, with an old attorney, long consumed with pity for the tragic young thing, sees her through.

The action is all good. Miss MacDonald has several splendid scenes,

Musicians Face Rising Market; Movies and Symphonies Cause

By Edward Moore.

SOME time ago a member of the orchestra known to its friends as the First was invited to sign a contract for the first desk of the section in which he was playing. He answered that he would take it and give his best services to it, but that he must have a salary of not less than $4,000 a season.

The answer gave pause to some; not to the management, who rather expected it, but to the outsiders, who either regard a musician as a warden in the temple of art, living in disregard of monetary reward, or, pityingly, as a silly sort of person who would rather draw tones out of an instrument than make an honest living in an office or selling goods on the road.

But it would seem some musicians have ideas of their own about being worthy of their hire. This particular one argued that he had a family to support, that he would much rather pay his bills than leave them unpaid, and that by sitting back in his orchestral section he could take jobs now and then—theaters, small orchestras, one thing and another—which would build his earnings up to $4,000, and which the light beating upon the first desk would not permit him to take.

Art and the Pay Check.

People are accustomed to hearing about the fortunes made in opera, of Muratore with his $2,800 a performance and forty performances guaranteed—in the words of the cartoon in the classified advertising pages of this paper, them days is gone forever as far as the Chicago opera is concerned—of Galli-Curci and McCormack, who pack the largest theaters to total capacity, whether in opera or concert. Such stars are few, however, and to be counted upon the fingers. There is, on the other hand, something to be said for the earnings of the thousands and tens of thousands in the country who do not get into the stellar class.

This orchestral player is a fairly typical instance. A union musician who belongs to an orchestra—the two are synonymous—is pretty sure of making a living if he is a good player and a reasonably responsible person, and the living is getting better. The union scale for musicians is by no means decreasing, and the demand for good players is increasing. The moving picture theaters have increased the demand as much as any single element, as symphony orchestra managers know to their sorrow. There was a case not long ago where a concertmaster joined a symphony orchestra after an experience in a moving picture theater where he was paid $200 a week. In this case art triumphed over the pay check, because he did not get anything like that rate in the symphony orchestra; but that is one case. The movies are scouring the market for good men as industriously as the symphonists and are willing to pay for them sometimes more willing than the older competitors.

The outlook would seem to be better here than for the teachers and the vast majority of the concert artists. Some teachers are getting prosperous, it is true, but the number who are $4,000 ahead on a season after paying studio rent and incidental expenses is a small one.

There's a Reason for It.

In concert the reward is often more apparent than real. An observer of my acquaintance who is in the profession tells me that a concert artist must draw a fee of not less than $500 per appearance, and have a fairly good number of them at that, to make any kind of a showing. For by the time the artist has paid for his railroad tickets here, there, and elsewhere about the country, the railroad tickets for his accompanist, his hotel bills—though not the hotel bills of his accompanist—advertising, and, if a woman, her clothes, not to speak of a respectable and even sizable percentage to the booking agent, a considerable sum has been checked out. I know of one soprano who goes about the country in a private car and carries—and pays for—herself, her father, her mother, her accompanist, her vocal coach and his wife, her assisting artist, her personal manager, her maid, and a couple of servants for the rest of the party.

Quite a number of years ago the head of a music school advised young musicians to learn an instrument and join the union, and not learn the piano or the violin, either, but the less common instruments—the bassoon, the trom-

Difficult to Share Mr. Miller's Enthusiasm for "La Tendresse"

By Burns Mantle.

With this issue Burns Mantle resumes his connection with The Chicago Sunday Tribune. Each week he will have an article dealing with the drama in New York.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—At the Empire theater on Monday night, when "La Tendresse" was the bill and Henry Miller began his season as its star, the actor-manager made a speech. He recalled, he said, that years ago when he was a boy in San Francisco he took a walk with the manager of a company playing in one of the theaters. The manager had seen H. M. rehearse a part with a local stock company and was impressed with his ability as a juvenile.

"I'm going to have a theater of my own in New York some day," said the manager, "and when I do you can play in it."

A few years later Charles Frohman built the Empire and young Henry came east to become its leading man and later to help considerably in building the fame of its stock company. It was a pleasant reminiscence, and what is left of the old Empire guard of first nighters applauded with dignified enthusiasm.

RUTH CHATTERTON.
[Fairchild Photo.]

Whereupon Mr. Miller went on to say that he hoped Mr. Frohman was there that evening; that his spirit, at least, was hovering about, smiling benignly down upon the company and its efforts to please. Then he withdrew.

The audience did not applaud again. Not with any enthusiasm, at least. It probably thought, as we did, that if Charles Frohman had found peace on the other side he should be permitted to enjoy it and not be dragged back to a play that would distress if it did not pain him.

"La Tendresse" is a labored and dull affair, quite out of harmony with American taste in the theater, and we find it difficult to understand Mr. Miller's enthusiasm for it. It relates the unhappy love affairs of a French academician, who, finding his favorite and most lovable mistress unfaithful, first dismisses her and then permits her to return to comfort him in his advancing years. An old man craves tenderness rather than love, he concludes, and who is he to demand perfection in one who is well intentioned but frail?

Ruth Chatterton is co-starred with Mr. Miller and does all that she can do to build sympathy for the unfortunate heroine, even to wearing a brunette wig. That she left us quite cold is not her fault. We may be aging a bit ourself.

Successors to Last Season Hits.

Two of the new comedies, "It's a Boy" and "Spite Corner," are domestic and simple. Both were written by playwrights grown expert in the treatment of those problems that beset the middle class poor—particularly after the temptations of wealth and social ambition assail them. And both are successors to last season hits. Which handicaps them considerably.

"It's a Boy," for example, represents William Anthony McGuire's effort to hold the trade that was enthusiastic about his last season's "Six-Cylinder Love." Of course, it isn't as good a play. And if it were no one would recognize it. Lightning strikes twice in the same spot much more frequently than playwrights follow one hit with another. Especially when their second bids are made with plays produced in the same theater and written on similar themes. But it is a nice, honest, homey little play.

In "It's a Boy" the Chester Blakes of Carbondale, Pa., figure prominently. Young Chet is the "Woolworth of his town," and Mrs. Chet is the girl he married the year she graduated. We meet them the night their first baby arrives. Which is all the excuse there is for the play's title. Mr. McGuire may have had some thought of linking the child to the theme as a sort of moral stabilizer when he started the play. But if he had he forgot all about it. However, as it stands, the Blakes leave Carbondale for New York when a real 10 cent genius offers Chester $10,000 a year. Chester doesn't want to go, but his young wife has been absorbing the rotogravure sections of the Sunday papers,

Fickle Fortune Does Odd Things to Theater Plans

By Sheppard Butler.

MR. COHAN'S austere Grand Opera house is "going into pictures." When Miss Hayes and "To the Ladies!" shall have departed at the end of next week, certain flickering presentments of Douglas Fairbanks will be shown, the same comprising a film version of Robin Hood's pretty well known adventures in polite banditry. Sic transit, etc.

After this anything may happen. Wrestling matches at the Blackstone, perhaps, when Frank Bacon goes away; perchance burlesque at Powers', or a skat tournament in the patrician silences of the new Selwyn. Who knows? The times are out of joint, and traditions are tumbling.

A perplexing convalescent, the theater—never quite recovered from the relapse which followed that surging tide of post-war prosperity. Better times, the managers think, are hovering just around the corner, but they keep hovering, pestiferously popping in and out, bestowing capricious fortune on some and withholding it, for no apparent reason, from others.

LEO DITRICHSTEIN
in Ben Hecht's new comedy, "Under False Pretenses," at the La Salle.

The Jolson show, over which no one raved in New York, does an enormous business here. "Good Morning Dearie," a prodigious success in the east, just manages to get along in Randolph street. The goose hangs high at the Princess, where "The Cat and the Canary" thrills a houseful nightly, while a better melodrama, "Bull Dog Drummond," disappoints its backers and will stay only a week longer. Ed Wynn thrives, but "The Circle," a play of fine distinction, already ponders the hour of its going.

Miss Hayes' impending departure tells its own story. "It makes me so mad!" she confided the other night, anent the spectacle of half filled seats at the Grand. She is a forthright young person, precisely the same offstage as on. "'To the Ladies!' is such a good play!" she added in justification of her demure wrath. And so it is. We should have kept it much longer in Chicago.

They are all rather frank—even the managers. A plaintive note from one who has something to do with the Studebaker speaks of Marjorie Rambeau:

"Miss Rambeau is not doing so well. She is not especially well known here as yet, though her following grows more definite all the time. She works like fury. . . . To her 'The Goldfish' doesn't mean much; she likes the girl she plays, and is always thinking about her—even talking to such a baby as I am—and wondering if this little touch or that little touch might not make Jenny more real. . . . Wish I had a play like 'The Circle' to hurrah for. There's something intelligent and entertaining and well constructed."

ERNEST TRUEX AND MISS JANE WALKER
in William Anthony McGuire's "Six-Cylinder Love," tomorrow night at the new Harris.
[White Photo.]

The showmen's perplexities, they say, are complicated by a shortage of attractions. Not more than forty of the first grade started the season outside New York, and some of these have already been withdrawn. Thus, movies at the Grand, though the theatrical year is just getting under way. And at the

Today! Special Showing of Nash Carriole

A Notable Addition to the Nash Series

Here it is—the Nash Carriole for five. It's a late addition to the smartly fashioned Nash group of enclosed types.

It will appeal to you immensely because it blends the beautiful with the practical so perfectly.

In every feature and detail it reflects the newest advancements in fine car design and craftsmanship at a reduced price that only serves to emphasize its remarkable value.

Set a little lower and closer to the road, it unites dignity with an admirable touch of sport model dash and spirit.

The beautiful and comfortably roomy body is of all-metal construction similar to those that adorn America's costly coupes and sedans.

The upholstery and luxurious interior trimmings are of the finest grade, taupe-toned wool cloth.

And the front seats follow the parlor-car type with a wide aisle between.

Headlamps are of the new barreled style, door handles are silvered, all dash instruments are heavily nickeled, the cowl has a new-type ventilator, all windows are adjustable, and a heavy bar anchors the chassis side members at the front so that the frame is held rigid under stress or strain.

Only a limited number is allotted to us. So come in immediately.

The New Plays

First Aid for First Nighters on Attractions Scheduled for the Coming Weeks in the Theaters.

GEORGE ARLISS opened his season at the Great Northern last evening, appearing as the Raja of Rukh in "The Green Goddess," a stirring melodrama of adventure by William Archer, the London critic. In Arliss' company were Elisabeth Risdon, Ivan F. Simpson, Frederick Lloyd, Leonard Willey, and many others. The performance will be reviewed tomorrow.

OPENING TOMORROW NIGHT.

"Under False Pretenses" (La Salle)—Leo Ditrichstein as a philanderer again—this time in a new comedy by Ben Hecht, Chicago novelist and newspaper man. Tomorrow night's performance will be its metropolitan premiere; in other words, New York hasn't seen it. The cast includes Maude Hannaford, Maidl Turner, Mary Duncan, Lee Millar, Albert Morrison, and Earle Mitchell.

"Six Cylinder Love" (Harris)—William Anthony McGuire's amusing comedy of marriage and motor cars, presented as the inaugural attraction at the second of the new twin theaters in Dearborn street. Ernest Truex plays the leading rôle, and others in the company are June Walker, Donald Meek, Ralph Sipperly, Berton Churchill, Eleanor Gordon, and Louise Prussing.

IMPENDING JOYS.

"A Bill of Divorcement" (Powers', Oct. 8)—Allan Pollock, an actor long absent from this region, in a thoughtful play by Clemence Dane of London.

"Partners Again" (Selwyn, probably Oct. 29)—Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr, reunited in some further adventures of Messrs. Potash and Perlmutter, devised by Montague Glass and Jules Eckert Goodman.

"The Hairy Ape" (Studebaker, probably Oct. 29)—Eugene O'Neill's grim drama of the emotional adventures of a ship's stoker, with Louis Wolheim in the leading rôle.

"The First Year" (Woods, Nov. 5)—Frank Craven in his own play, hailed in the east as one of the best comedies ever written.

Most Beautiful Lady Has Hard Time, but Clouds Roll By which she might so easily have been maudlinly melodramatic. She signifies them instead with a lovely reticence, or a numb hopelessness, as the case may be.

The production is well photographed. The sets are good. The scenery is all that it should be and, on the whole, while you suffer a lot with the heroine during most of the reels, you leave her with a smile, all surrounded by roses, the man she loves, her brother out on bail, and everything. And the hot subtitles are so nice.

"I can't have them whispering about your wife," says the heroine, nobly refusing the hero, both of them all tanged up from an accident they have been in.

"They're not whispering — they're shouting," he replies. "You're the most admired girl in Dixie land."

And do you think the hero wasn't nuts? BOY, think again!

ASK ME! ASK ME!

T. H. F.: I'm glad you received the most of characters all right. It was nice of you to take the time to write a "thank you" letter. No, we never forget, but sometimes the mail is heavy and we're a little slow. Glad to be of service.

MR. F. C. S.: Mr. Fellowes' permanent address is Nautilus Place, New Rochelle, N. Y. Harry Garson produced the picture you mention. The Garson studios are in Los Angeles. Entirely welcome.

MARY: Picture hound, are you? Well, so am I. Only you pay to be and I'm paid to be. Much obliged, but I shall not attempt the Fiji islander tongue. My venture into Japanese almost cost a worthless life. You're a darling to be so appreciative, Mary!

OPEN MINDER FAIR PLAY READER: Thank you.

L. HILL: No, Bebe Daniels and Helen Ferguson are not sisters that I know of, but they DO look alike, come to think of it! Thanks for your kind letter. The name was taken from "matinée." Y'wekkum.

POPPCHEEK: Whassamatter? Gottatootake? "Senseless infant," are you? Well, so long as you have sense enough to admit the fact you are probably crazy like a fox. We'll print a picture of Mr. Barthelmess for you again some time in the near future.

S. B. J.: We won't publish the communication and we hereby withhold the name. Watch the "roto" for a picture of your favorite.

PRIMROSE

Her last name is Caryll, and her father was the late Ivan Caryll, the composer. She plays a patrician rôle in "Good Morning, Dearie," at the Colonial.

[White Photo.]

THE KICK KORNER

ITS OBJECT: OBJECTION.

Dear Miss Tinée: I have just read Elba's kick in the korner regarding what she sees fit to call a "flagrant flaunting of a beautiful tongue"—the use of the phrase "mi querida" in the play "Blood and Sand."

May I say that I agree heartily with Elba. Producers would do well to employ the services of some one familiar with Spanish in the making of a Spanish play.

It seems that, as far as the phrase Elba mentions is concerned, the producers have done just what she desires, for "mi querida" is entirely correct and Elba is all wrong. In Spanish, Elba, "mi" is used before both masculine and feminine nouns, and "mio" and "mia" are the forms used after nouns.

The next time Elba has a kick she had best pick out a real error, as "senor" instead of "señor."

RRICHARD.

Dear Miss Tinée: I'm about to launch a kick for your corner. I just returned from seeing Rodolph Valentino in one of his first pictures, "The Delicious Little Devil," in which he supported Mae Murray.

Miss Tinée: I've seen several of those old ones, and none of them provided fitting parts for Mr. Valentino, who, I believe, is popular, judging from the jam outside the theater.

I simply wish to say that, in my estimation, it is a great mistake to release old, inferior pictures of this star, who has just recently earned his right to the place he holds. I don't know if I have the right idea, but unless the motive for doing this is to make Mr. Valentino's more recent releases appreciated more, it seems they are giving a serious detriment to his career by allowing these to be shown. M. L. G.

BROWSING BACKWARD

PLEASE write on only ONE SIDE of the paper!

Dear Miss Tinée: I certainly must write to get this off my chest. I have been reading Browsing Backward and am keenly disappointed in many of the letters.

The greatest and finest picture it has ever been my pleasure to see was "Missing."

Without exception, it is the only picture that ever brought a lump to my throat or a tear from my eye.

I'll never forget Griffith's "Scarlet Days," with Richard Barthelmess and Clarine Seymour; she certainly was a beautiful girl and a wonderful actress. I think she would have been a foremost star had she been spared to this world.

JOAN W.

Dear Miss Tinée: Some of the pictures that will always stand out in my mind and that I like to think and talk about are "The Miracle Man," with Thomas Meighan and Betty Compson—Betty Compson can act and so can Thomas Meighan; "Borrowed Plumage," featuring Bessie Barriscale; Marguerite Clark in "Little Miss George Washington," Bert Lytell in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," Mary Pickford in "Daddy Long Legs," "Stella Maris," and "Cinderella."

Publicity Teas Feature Women Voters' Campaign

By Kate Webber.

"WANTED — Five thousand members in a day," is the inspiring slogan which is being kept in mind by the Illinois League of Women Voters until Oct. 10, on which day the membership cards are to be signed. A campaign is now on whereby each member is expected to procure a new member, and it is hoped that the number aimed at will be exceeded.

The week of Oct. 10 is to be a publicity week for the league, and many events are scheduled for that time. Women throughout Cook county will open their houses for receptions and teas, where women interested in the affairs of the organization may come together and hear speakers who will be sent from the central office, and who are well qualified to give their listeners reliable information on the program of the league and the issues of the day.

The members of the league hope this intensive campaign will prove an inspiration to women who are not members, and will stimulate interest in registration and in the coming elections.

Mrs. Rockefeller McCormick, Mrs. E. O. Brooks, Mrs. James K. Boyd, Mrs. Alice D. Webb, Mrs. Rel Randall, Mrs. E. J. Fleming, Mrs. Irene Goins, and Mrs. George Hall are among those who will give publicity teas.

The following week the league is sponsoring a lecture by Philip H. Kerr, former political secretary to Lloyd George, which is to be given on Oct. 17 at 3 o'clock at The Playhouse. During the last years of the war and during the conferences succeeding it there was not a British state paper Mr. Kerr could not read, not a communication from foreign government that he did not know the contents of, nor a conference he could not attend. He was sent from England to be one of two lecturers on British affairs at the Williamstown conference this summer. For these reasons he can contribute an international viewpoint on politics which will stimulate marked interest in world affairs.

Mrs. Clair E. More and Mrs. J. Lewis Cochran are in charge of arrangements for the lecture, and Mrs. Mitchell Follansbee is chairman of the ticket committee. Others who will lend their assistance are Mrs. Watson F. Blair, Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Julius Rosenwald, Mrs. Charles W. Dempster, Mrs. Henry W. Cheney, Mrs. Charles H. Hamill, Mrs. Edward L. Murfey, Mrs. Harry Pratt Judson, Mrs. George Packard, Mrs. Edwin W. Ryerson, Mrs. Chauncey B. Borland, Mrs. Latimer Goodrich, Mrs. Lester Armour, Mrs. William Gold Hibbard, and Miss Marie J. Rozet.

MRS. JAMES K. BOYD.
[Russell Photo.]

Mrs. James K. Boyd is active in the membership campaign being waged by the Illinois League of Women Voters, which will close on Oct. 10. Mrs. Boyd is among the Cook county women who will lend their houses for publicity teas to be given during the week, that prospective members may hear speakers and become familiarized with the important work of the league.

Saturday afternoon.

At the opening session of the Chicago League of Women Voters on Saturday at 2 o'clock at the Congress hotel the following program will be given: "The Genesis of Psycho-Analysis," Dr. Ethel E. Budget Cut Stems Y. W. C. A. Activity

WITH a serious financial handicap, due to the failure of its budget campaign last spring, but with its welcome sign still out to all girls in need of a home, a job, health, education, and good times, the Y. W. C. A. winter activities will be in full swing beginning tomorrow, according to announcement made by Miss Eleanor Richardson, executive secretary for the Chicago association.

MISS HAZEL SUTTON.
[Thomas Photo.]

One new member has been added to the metropolitan staff—Miss Hazel Sutton of New York City, finance secretary of the national board of the Y. W. C. A., who has been assigned for special work for three months with the Chicago association. On account of the budget cut, the west side branch, 101 South Ashland boulevard, has had to abandon its departments of general education, religious education, and business and industrial girls' clubs, and will be maintained only as a health and girl reserve center, with classes in gymnastics and swimming, and club work among younger girls.

"Business as usual" is the watchword at Central branch, 59 East Monroe street, where there has been a record registration not only in gymnasium and swimming classes but in the study courses that include such classes as sewing, millinery, English, French, nature study, dramatics, current events, psychology, and the ever popular "charm school!" Musically ambitious girls will have an opportunity to develop their talents in the choral club, organized under the chairmanship of Mrs. Archibald Freer and directed by Gilbert H. Wilson. Any business girl is eligible to join the club, and there is no tuition fee.

"Are you lonesome? Join a club and find friends and fun," says the welcoming sign at Central branch. "Are you looking for a place to live while you study or work in Chicago this winter? Let the room registry help you. Are you out of a job? Perhaps the employment bureau has just the right one waiting for you. Are you too fat? thin? pale? Join the gym and learn how to be healthy and happy. Do you long for pretty clothes and think you can't afford them? Then make them yourself in a sewing or millinery class. In other words, tell us what you want, and we'll help you get it!"

Among the women who as chairmen of the various centers or members of the board of directors will take an active part in Y. W. C. A. plans this winter are Mrs. William L. Hodgkins, Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. E. Crane Wilson, Mrs. Robert S. De Golier, Mrs. Clifford W. Barnes, Mrs. R. M. P. Sidley, Mrs. N. W. Campbell, Mrs. Carl C. Bullock, Mrs. Herman B. Butler, Mrs. Clicord W. Superfluous Hair Now Removed Roots and All!

A boon to women troubled with superfluous hair is the new Phelactine process. It is totally unlike the depilatory, electrical and other methods heretofore employed for the removal of hairy growths. It is the only thing that enables one to remove the hair completely—roots and all—in one's own home without the assistance of an expert. The result cannot be doubted, for the user sees the hair-roots with her own eyes.

A stick of Phelactine, with easy directions, can be had at any drugstore. It is entirely harmless (a child could safely eat it), colorless and non-irritating. It is an instantaneous method, and so thorough that the skin is left perfectly smooth and hairless, bearing not the least evidence of its former disfurnishment.

horn, the string bass, or the viola. They are apparently still in demand, with a fair living in front of them.

So the next time you find that your subscription seats to the symphony series have gone up in price do not think that the orchestral associations are getting rich, for they are not. Prices for seats are figured with the cost of orchestral musicians in mind, and these costs follow the justly famous law of commerce and are met by the ultimate consumer.

Wagner Not a Wagnerian.

It will perhaps be a bit of a shock to certain believers in what has been supposed to be Wagnerian traditions to learn that they are based upon a totally false premise, that Wagner did not in the least approve of the way his music dramas were sung, and was entirely open, even bitter, in announcing that he preferred the Italian rather than the German manner of singing.

The fact came to light not so long ago. Mme. Marcella Sembrich is in possession of the manuscript of an essay on the subject in Wagner's own handwriting. It was translated and printed by H. E. Krehbiel, in the New York Tribune, and it makes interesting reading, not the less because, though the great composer said his say about German art in the finale of "The Mastersinger," he also said another say here on a matter he thought not up to artistic standards. Incidentally, he is not only voluble but forceful in saying it. It begins:

"We Germans talk so much unmeaning and mawkish drivel about singing as plainly to prove by the very fact how little we have, in general, been endowed with that divine gift. We talk most about that concerning which we know the least, and instead of recognizing what we lack and seeking to acquire it we try by much talking of nonsensical words to make up for it and in our ignorance or self-deception come to look upon our utterances as the truth. That, however, is by no a misfortune. Why is it that we Germans stubbornly refuse to believe that we do not possess everything? Why do we not frankly and openly declare that the Italians have an advantage over us in singing, the French in a livelier and better treatment of operatic music? May we not set off against these things the German's profounder science, his more thorough training, and, above all, his happy faculty of assimilating the advantages of the French and Italians while they can never acquire ours?

Offset Deficiency by Training.

"A lucky natural capacity makes the Italians born singers, not only in respect of beautiful voices, for in this the Germans are also gifted, but in a natural flexibility and capacity for tonal modulation which are foreign to us. These are the superior merits which we must first acquire and which we can acquire, as so many examples prove. This calls for study, and, in view of our peculiar virtue of industry and patience, it is surprising as well as irritating to hear it said that such study is unnecessary, that we can do all that is essential by means of expression. It is foolish to protest that a beautiful voice and feeling are not essential to good singing; but it would be still more foolish not to be willing to note that many gifted persons have gone to destruction who thought these major gifts sufficient.

"We Germans lack the happy natural gifts of the Italians and must seek to offset the deficiency by training. This training must, if possible, be acquired by the singer before he steps upon the stage; for on the stage, where the domination of expression begins, while that which is lacking must be supplied, that which has been acquired must already have become a second nature. What the dramatic singer must have learned differs in nothing from that which must be the possession of the concert singer. The noblest purity of tone, the most perfect precision and polish, the highest equality in passages, and the most careful articulation of periods, and, we might add, the greatest clarity in enunciation, are the fundamental things in musical interpretation, whether in the concert room or on the stage. When the singer has completely acquired these things and made them his own, then, and not till then, can he accomplish what Demosthenes meant by declamation."

There is more to the same effect, but it is too long to reproduce in its entirety. Throughout it is good reading for one who believes that Wagner's scores are the better for technically good singing and the worse for an amiable, nonlegato shout.

Official Word from Federation.

The following resolutions regarding music were passed by the General Federation of Women's Clubs at its recent convention in Chautauqua:

"Whereas, There has been for many years the need for a truly American plan to promote public interest in the American singer and composer, thus establishing an American school of opera and national opera houses where genuine American opera shall be produced in our own language, be it

"Resolved, That the General Federation of Women's Clubs pledges its interest in furthering the plans of the organizations now working toward this end.

"Whereas, It has been proven that the music memory contest is entirely practical and will become the greatest avenue to make popular music good and good music popular in America, and that, if rightly used, it will open the greatest opportunity for the American composer, be it

"Resolved, That the General Federation of Women's Clubs indorses the music memory contest and supports the authorized list of selections to be issued by our music department, which will include a large percentage of works by American composers.

"Whereas, 'America the Beautiful,' a song of dignity and beauty, easily sung, and reflecting the true spirit of America and the ideals of this federation; therefore, be it

"Resolved, That 'America the Beautiful' be adopted as the official song of the General Federation of Women's Clubs."

Opening Kimball Hall.

Kimball hall's first program for the new season will be given next Sunday afternoon by "The Little Symphony," of Chicago, an organization of twenty-five instrumental artists under the leadership of George Dasch, assisted by Selma Gogg, soprano, and Hugh Porter, of Northwestern university, organist.

ANNA LUDMILLA.
[Schwarz Photo.]
She is to be premiere danseuse of the ballet of the Chicago Civic Opera company this season. Miss Ludmilla is a Chicagoan.

Prefatory to the tour of Mexico and Cuba which the Pavley-Oukrainsky ballet will make in the near future, this organization will give one performance in Chicago. Cohan's Grand Opera house has been engaged for Sunday afternoon, Oct. 15, and at that time the ballet will present a program of the works which have been prepared for the Latin-American tour. Several of these have never been done in America before.

The program will include the "Syrian Ballet," representing the rites performed in an ancient Syrian temple, and danced by Serge Oukrainsky and company. Among the divertissements are many novelties, some entirely new and others having been performed when the Pavley-Oukrainsky ballet was in Mexico City last spring. Among these is the "Rondo Capriciosso" of St. Saens, danced by Andreas Pavley and Mlles. Dagmara, Milar, Nedova and company. Mr. Pavley will present the "Victory Dance" as a solo, and the program will close with the "Hymn of Joy," by Ganne, which will be presented by the entire company.

That Louise Homer, considered one of the finest contraltos on the operatic stage, will sing with the Chicago Civic opera company this winter seems almost certain. Since she first sang with the Metropolitan Opera company several years ago after her European successes Mme. Homer has been a favorite with her audiences. Because she has appeared on the concert stage as well as in opera she is known to music lovers all over the country as an artist of fine personality as well as voice, and even though she has never sung in Chicago opera before she has a large following here. It is understood that Mme. Homer will appear in Chicago early in the season for a number of special performances, but just how long she will stay has not been made public. Among the rôles she will sing are Azucena in "Il Trovatore" and Amneris in "Aida." If all goes well she will later rejoin the company during its tour of the east, and will probably sing in Boston, Pittsburgh, and Cleveland.

Adolph Bolm, director of the opera ballet and head of the Bolm School of the Dance, announces that the two scholarships which he proposes to award, one to a girl and one to a boy who shall prove their merits, will in all probability be given some time during this week. He is still conducting tryouts for the ballet, which will soon be thoroughly organized.

Glenn Dillard Gunn, pianist and pedagogue, will open F. Wight Neumann's season at the Playhouse next Sunday afternoon at 3:30. Mr. Gunn has arranged the following program:

Two choral preludes.....Bach-Busoni
"In Thee Is Joy," "Sleepers Awake."
Two rhapsodies, op. 76.....Brahms
Variations in A minor.....Paganini-Liszt
Play of the Waters.....Ravel
Bells Across the Trees, Gardens in the Rain.....Debussy
Bear Dance.....Bela Bartos
Ballade in G minor.....Chopin
Ballade in B minor.....Liszt

Rosa Ponselle, leading dramatic soprano of the Metropolitan opera, New York, will appear under Mr. Neumann's direction at the Studebaker theater next Sunday afternoon at 3:30. Miss Ponselle's sudden and brilliant debut with the late Caruso four years ago when, as Leonora in Verdi's "La Forza del Destino," she forged to the front rank of the Metropolitan Opera company in a night and created one of the greatest sensations in the history of the Metropolitan opera house, will not be soon forgotten in the metropolis, as, in so doing, she established a precedent and broke all the opera traditions in America, for she had been appearing in vaudeville only a few short months previous to that memorable night.

The Edison Symphony orchestra, Morgan L. Eastman, conductor, will give its first popular concert of the season on Thursday evening at Orchestra hall. The Misses Gladys and Alvina Petersen will be the soloists for the occasion.

* *

The Glenn Dillard Gunn School of Music and Dramatic Art will present Sophia Swahstrom-Young, reader, and W. Ward Wright, pianist, in recital on Tuesday evening at the Lake Shore Drive Recital hall, 1254 Lake Shore drive.

A SONG OF THE FALL.

By Guy Lee.

Never was a sun so cheery,
Never breeze with such caress;
Solace for the worn and weary;
Comfort for the soul in stress.
Hope renews its patient labors;
Joy returns—a welcome call!
I am boosting, friends and neighbors,
Weather in the fall.

We forgive the rainy season,
We forget the heated spell,
When the autumn's rule of reason
Comes to sound distemper's knell.
Gladness makes our systems tingle,
Genial smiles are worn by all.
That is why I'm moved to jingle
Weather in the fall.

Hazy, daisy days, and jolly;
Peppy, piquant as can be:
Why they call them melancholy
Is a mystery to me;
For I'm seldom quite so happy
As when fettered in the thrall
Of the restful, zestful, snappy
Weather in the fall!

"You see, Jim, the phonograph is concealed inside so that the Apollo-phone looks like any ordinary player piano. But just wait until you hear the wonderful music it produces. And the rolls match the records—they call 'em synchronized. Now I'll put on this record and we'll hear Caruso sing the "Prologue" from Pagliacci to a player roll accompaniment. You'll think it's great!"

Henry Miller's New Play Gets Tame Welcome

not to mention the movies, and is keen to become a big city lady.

In New York the Blakes acquire a duplex apartment, a bootlegger, expensive habits, and flashy friends. At the end of the year Chet loses the job, which was merely a trick to get him out of the Carbondale competition, and the young folks find themselves on the town, as it were, owing several thousand dollars for installment diamonds and with nothing saved for little Chester's kindergarten course. The awakening has the expected effect. Chester comes to with a start, throws off the leechlike ladies and gentlemen who have been sponging upon him, announces that thereafter Mrs. Chester will take care of her own child and that a new start is about to begin.

"Spite Corner" is Frank Craven's successor to "The First Year" in the sense that it is the first play he has written and produced since the latter comedy ran over a year at the Little theater. It, too, suffers by comparison with last season's triumph, but so would any other play of similar character. "The First Year" was more than a play. It was an inspiration.

"Spite Corner" is, in plot and story, a conventional little comedy about a girl named Elizabeth Dean—the last of the Deans of the town of Dean, which is somewheres hereabout. For five years "Bess" Dean has been running her little dressmaking shop and waiting for John Lattimer to come home and marry her. In the days before either of them were born there had been a Dean-Lattimer feud of sorts, but the young folks had laughed it out of town and were as good as engaged when John went away to earn a fortune.

When John does come back he is still without the fortune, and his failure serves to make him embarrassed and hesitant. Elizabeth thinks he has forgotten her. And just for that she refuses to sell her store and the property on which it stands to Grandfather Lattimer, who owns the rest of the block and is eager to build a fine building that will be of great commercial importance to the town. Never, so long as she lives, says Elizabeth, will she have anything more to do with a Lattimer, either in a business or a personal way.

To this resolution Elizabeth sticks tenaciously for another act and a half—acts that are brightened by several fine comedy scenes—and then there is a fire. It burns down the Dean store, but it brings John and Bess together, as you may have anticipated.

For the more sophisticated visitor, for the lady who wishes to have something to relate to the members of the Fortnightly when she returns home, we have "Banco," a comedy from the French, translated for William Harris Jr. by Clare Kummer. The French author is Alfred Savoir, the chap who wrote last season of "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife."

Herein is told the highly improbable but continually amusing story of a slightly insane French count who had a passion for playing baccarat. One night at the Casino his wife sent him word that she was in an ante-room and would stay there until he stopped play. To which he replied by sending back his compliments and the information that he would continue playing so long as his wife remained in the Casino. For eighty-four hours they defied each other—and then the lady gave up, went home, and applied for a divorce.

A year later she was married to another gentleman, a safe, sane, and insipid countryman who promised never to worry her. But the night of the wedding up turns the husband, swearing that, so help him, the gods of romance and rights, her second marriage shall never be consummated. To prevent which he sets fire to the stables, thus distracting the attention of the husband and the servants, and then sits up all night playing baccarat with the wife. It was not his intention to sit up all night, but his passion for cards betrayed him. With the dawn comes the wife's realization that perhaps her second marriage was ill advised, and she agrees with her impetuous first husband that it shall be annulled. True, it will take a year. But meantime they can travel.

This is a smartly sophisticated farce, never believable as to story or incident, but well played and entertaining for those who love their plays served with a dash of the stuff the censors are preparing to eliminate from the people's drama. Alfred Lunt, the Clarence of two seasons back and Billie Burke's leading man last season, plays the half mad Frenchman with an infectious enthusiasm. Lola Fisher is pleasantly cast as the disturbed but diverted wife, and there is a good supporting performance by Francis Byrne.

THE THEATERS

Olympic they do not know, even now, what will follow Mr. Leiber a fortnight hence.

Nevertheless, for the launching of the season in Chicago, the producers have, as the saying is, given of their best. Here is a great array—Arliss and Drew and Ditrichstein; Mrs. Carter and Marjorie Rambeau and Pauline Frederick; Bacon and Warner and Charles Cherry; Estelle Winwood and Helen Hayes; Jolson and Wynn. No shortage there, ladies and gentlemen. Who'll buy?

Gossip of the Players.

More than 10,000 applications, according to the management, had been received up to last Friday for seats at tomorrow night's performance of "Six-Cylinder Love," which opens the new Harris theater in Dearborn street. Checks for approximately $3,000 had then been returned to would-be patrons and the money was still rolling in. Meanwhile, various crews of workmen were engaged in a last minute burst of speed to complete the interior in time for the scheduled inaugural ceremonies. The decorative scheme is one of rare beauty—a combination of dull gold and deep reds, with elaborate embellishments in the Florentine manner of the sixteenth century, the effect being somewhat more ornate and less austere than that of the Harris' next door twin, the Selwyn.

Barney Bernard and Alexander Carr, nearing the end of their New York run in "Partners Again," cast their eyes upon this metropolis and prepare for a journey hither, with the Selwyn as their destination. They will arrive when "The Circle" departs—probably at the end of this month. The play, as you know, continues the adventures of Abe Potash and Mawruss Perlmutter, who are now engaged in the automobile business.

Leo Ditrichstein, approaching the La Salle with Ben Hecht's new comedy, "Under False Pretenses," comes by an arduous route. Six one night stand performances, undertaken for polishing purposes, have occupied the six days just past, the breaking-in process beginning at Binghamton, N. Y., on Monday and ending at South Bend, Ind., last night.

Miss Marjorie Rambeau considers abandoning "The Goldfish" soon after the play has run its course at the Studebaker. Before the season is far advanced, it is said, she will begin rehearsals in another opus of French origin—Henri Bataille's "The Wedding March." Three playwrights have taken a shot at adaptations and none knows yet who will share in the royalties.

When Allan Pollock brings "A Bill of Divorcement" to Powers' next Sunday night he will have in his company Miss Josephine Royle, daughter of Edwin Milton Royle, the playwright, and sister of Miss Selena Royle, who acted here with William Courtenay in "Her Temporary Husband." She will have the rôle played in New York by Miss Katherine Cornell.

Rumors regarding Miss Fay Bainter's next play have been set at rest with the announcement that she will appear in "The Painted Lady," by Monckton Hoffe. Hoffe is the English author of "The Faithful Heart," a London success which will have its first American performances in Atlantic City this week.

The "Ziegfeld Follies" will not observe this year its custom of coming to Chicago for the holiday season. Seats for performances in New York up to and including New Year's day were placed on sale last week, and there is said to be a possibility that the entertainment will not leave New York at all during the season. These be woeful tidings for some.

The Hawaiian play by Ethelbert Hales with which Al Jolson took a brief whirl at the producing game last season is to be resurrected soon by Jolson in conjunction with Arthur Hopkins. There's a combination of impresari! Hales, an actor as well as an author, was last seen here with Miss Jane Cowl in "Smilin' Through." His wife, known to the stage as Molly Pearson, is the amusing player of the fussy Eustasia in "The Dover Road," at the Playhouse.

CLEAR AS A BELL

The Peerless Queen Anne $250

The Queen Anne Sonora is a master-work.

Like the great creative artists of the world, Sonora experts have concentrated on the soul of the phonograph. That soul is its tone, endlessly developed and perfected in the Sonora by subtle refinements through which the dead record is transformed into warm, life-like, pulsating sound.

By means of scientific experiments in the free use of wood—Nature's truest resonator—Sonora artisans have eliminated the shrill, harsh, nasal sounds long associated with most phonographs. The all-wood, laminated horn, made of from five to fifteen thick, cross-banded veneers, makes the Sonora rendition often more flawless than the original.

Hear the wonder-tone of the Queen Anne and other Sonora master-models.

What Is the Ku Klux Klan?

IT IS an organization composed of native-born white, gentile, protestant Americans, whose sole allegiance is to the Government of the United States of America.

It is a constructive organization, for its cardinal purposes are to build character, to teach practical and intelligent patriotism, to fire the hearts of men with a new love for God, Home and Country.

The evil forces against which the Klan is fighting conduct their activities in secret. The secrecy of the Klan is therefore its strongest weapon. It is only the guilty conscience that shouts for the organization to unmask.

Klansmen are taught that observance of the law is liberty. No form of lawlessness is tolerated within the Invisible Empire, and no law-breaker can remain within its boundaries.

To condemn the Knights of the Ku Klux Klan on the lying evidence manufactured by a desperate enemy is unfair, un-Christian and un-American!

Remember that that which is good deserves to live, and that which deserves to live—SHALL LIVE.

A STAR AT LARGE

INSTALLMENT II.

[Unless thoroughly appreciated every installment threatens to be the last.]

By Mae Tinee.

LATE that night, after the twins and Godfrey were safely asleep, Mrs. Goofus hurried over to the corner drug store to telephone her brother. She had pressed the suit and laundered the shirt, keeping up a barrage of questions meanwhile. But Goof had been proof against them all. Threfore Mrs. Goofus had bethought her of her brother, Harry Headcheese, who had graduated from a correspondence detective school with all honors. He not only had a diploma, but in his possession was a complete assortment of false mustachios, teeth, hair, and noses. He also boasted an unlimited wardrobe that contained everything from the rags of a tramp to the uniform of a general in the Roumainian army.

Harry Headcheese was out of a job because he felt it would be prostituting his art to work at anyhing besides detecting, and so far the police department and various sleuthing agencies had been too jealous of him to allow him on their pay rolls. However, Headcheese was not the man to despair.

He answered Mrs. Goofus' cry for help by saying that he would meet her immediately in the middle of the block. He told her she would know him when he came by the way he would pay no attention to her at all until she should speak to him.

Mrs. Goofus spoke to three gentlemen and one man who told her he would sick the police on her if she didn't go about her business. She was just about to start home in a fright when she noticed a Chinaman wearing goggles and on opera hat standing directly in her pathway. His arm was in a sling, from which his hand protruded. Mrs. Goofus gave a cry of joy. The hand had a wart. This was indeed her brother, Harry Headcheese.

As soon as he heard her gasp, Headcheese said: "Well, what seems to be eating you?"

Mrs. Goofus told him in detail.

"Ha!" said Harry Headcheese. "Hum! You are sure Goof hadn't no fever"

"You wouldn't of thought so if you had of seen the dinner he et," replied Mrs. Goofus, scornfully. "If I hadn't snatched a piece of cabbage off his knife I wouldn't of got a mouthful. He had it almost all gone before I was ready to set down to the table. SICK!!!" snapped Mrs. Goofus.

Headcheese toyed with his cue. "Vurr' strange!" murmured he. "My poor sister, it may not be another woman, but usually the only thing that is ever mysterious about a man is a woman. A rich widow, perhaps, since you say he had money."

"If it's another woman she can have him, so long as she pays for him," said Mrs. Goofus hopefully. "She'll be getting stung, but that's no more than I was. So you will follow him around tomorrow, will you, Harry?"

"I will," said Harry Headcheese in a deep voice, peeling off his headgear, which was all in one piece, and replacing it with a cap which he carried in his pocket, as a policeman came around the corner. "I will be waiting on the front sidewalk wearing a Van Dyke beard and tying my shoe when Goof leaves in the morning."

"Wait in the alley," instructed Mrs. Goofus. "He always comes and goes that way, on account of the gas man and others."

"Farewell," Headcheese whispered, and seemed to melt into the darkness. Mrs. Goofus gave the policeman a haughty stare and went on home.

Bonny Bits in the Movies

My Dear Miss Tinee: I think it is time some one said a good word on behalf of that hated individual, the screen villian. I have seen many a picture in which the arch-plotter stole the acting honors away from the star.

Take Walter Long, for instance: A fine actor and a genius in the art of makeup, he has faithfully earned our hatred since the dawn of feature pictures. I concede him the honors in "Moran of the Lady Letty," and also in "The Dictator."

There's Wallace Beery, too: A screen scoundrel of the deepest dye and one of the most consistent performers in pictures.

Lon Chaney in "The Miracle Man" and in a dozen other pictures; Lew Cody (before he became a screen hevamp and talcum powder ad.) in "Mickey," and in "Don't Change Your Husband"; Stuart Holmes in every picture to which he lent his efforts; Lowell Sherman in "Way Down East" and "Molly-O"—what other group of screen artists can equal them?

The most polished devil I ever saw, though, was the unamed player who impersonated the Duc De Choiseul in "Passion." He imparted to his rôle a poise, an elgance of bearing—and what I might term a velvet finish—which no other actor of the silent drama seems able to duplicate.

Leaving the reprobates of the films to their richly deserved fate, I think the neatest bit I have seen in a long time was the clever work of Mildred June as the waitress in "The Crossroads of New York." It was only a small part, but little Miss June certainly put it across in a delightful manner. In the two reeler "On Patrol," she was just about the cutest thing that ever stepped in front of a camera. I don't know where Mack Sennett gets them, but he surely knows how to pick girls who possess that indescribable something they call personality. From the greatest of comediennes—La Belle Mabel—to little Milly June, the Sennett girls have always ranked highly in the estimation of those who appreciate good screen acting. Nice work, Mr. Sennett! JAY DEE CEE.

Slams of Life

THE CROSSING.

An old man stood beside the curb
And yearned to cross the street,
But motors thundered up and down
And he, no longer fleet,
Stood waiting, waiting patiently
On numb and weary feet.

A woman waited at the curb
And held a baby's hand,
While autos whirled, and autos roared—
A blatant, brutal band—
And no one stopped and no one stayed,
But made her meekly stand.

And children stood there timidly,
And one began to cry;
Because in all that selfish horde
Not one would let her by. . . .
And you were speeding madly there—
Not only you, but I.

ASTRONOMY

Cold stillness reigns on the polar cap of Mars.

MARS A PARCHED PLANET.

By S. F. Maxwell.

THE secret of the inhabitants of Mars is not being rapidly solved. In the latter quarter of the last century markings were discovered on our neighbor world. They looked like the work of intelligent beings. Appearance on Mars seemed to denote the presence of active minds. Certain scientists accepted the evidence eagerly and pushed forward in the study of Mars with all the means at their disposal. But soon two insuperable obstacles loomed ahead. Large telescopes were required. Telescopes cost a great deal of money, and even when the telescopes had been purchased and set up there was a worse enemy in th way, bad air.

We live at the bottom of a sea of air. Every beam of light that reaches the earth must traverse at least five miles of atmosphere and unusually much more. Telescopes were placed on high mountains, to be above as much air as possible. That helped a little, but did not solve the problem. There has been no successful solution up to this time. An astronomer can put on just so much power and then the air blurs his vision. Every wind and even the breath from his body, when highly magnified, makes the image of the planet dance and boil.

Looking up through a telescope at Mars, we behold a writhing disk of golden light. At first we see nothing save the motion and the glare. Then, little by little, we notice that slight instants of steady air occur, when the clear shape of a far off world can be discerned. An instant clear, then many minutes of boiling before another clear glimpse comes. This is what observing Mars through a high powered telescope is like.

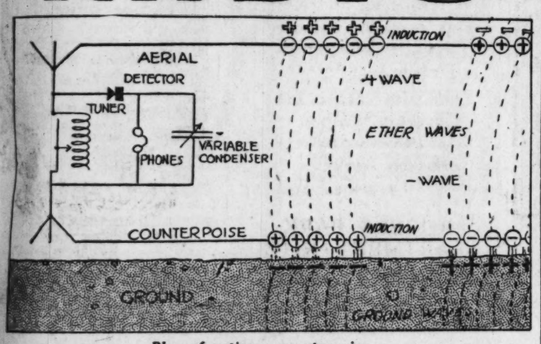
When we become familiar with the planet's appearance, we notice details on its surface. White spots appear each season at the poles, like the snow that collects in the winter hemisphere of the earth. These gleaming polar areas contrast strongly with the ochre yellow color of the planet's soil.

There are darkish areas also visible on Mars, gray green in summer and brown in winter. These regions are the places where vegetation grows. Now here is the remarkable fact about them—the green does not appear in spring as soon as the season grows warm, but waits until water from the melting polar snows is conducted from the frigid to the temperate zones. Definite channels are known, pivoted on the poles and spread in a network all over the ball. Their plan and their well ordered execution lead astronomers to believe that they are artificial.

We stand on Mars. The world is a desert. Clouds are to be seen almost every day on earth, but on Mars there are almost no clouds. The air is thin and cold, like the atmosphere on the tops of high mountains. Mars' sky is blue-black in the day time and inky black at night. The stars seem to press down closely on the dry parched plains. The dust at our feet is ochre powder. For ages cold winds have blown it, pulverized it, burned all its iron contents into haematite.

At the pole we find a sheet of ice. It is only a few inches thick and lies like closely packed frost crystals. At its edge are puddles and wet sand. You splash your feet in the cold water as we walk. "Where are the Martian seas?" you ask. These marshes are the seas. All the water that Mars will have next season lies here in these poor swamps.

RADIO



Plan of action a counterpoise.

LOWERING AERIAL RESISTANCE

A COUNTERPOISED aerial is in many cases a better receptor than a straight grounded one. A study of the mechanics of electricity reveals the reason.

Wireless waves consist of electric strains between the ether and the ground. Part of the waves race along through the ether while an equal part travel through the crust of the earth.

When waves pass over a grounded aerial, currents are induced to shoot back and forth between the wires above and the grounded surface below. It is these oscillations which activiate the detector. Aerial currents are feeble at best; hence anything which decreases the internal resistance of the aerial circuit strengthens them. Currents about the ground plates must move in a field of high resistance, for the ground is a poor conductor compared with metal. The ground plates do not need to be actually on the ground. They can be near it, but insulated from it. This is the theory of the counterpoised aerial.

Two aerials are built, one high in the air—the other almost touching the ground. When a wireless wave passes by, that part which travels the earth induces a charge on the counterpoise side. At the same instant the ether wave induces an opposite charge on the aerial wires. Each half of the aerial system now bears opposite charges. The oscillations which result have an all metal circuit to surge in, and the power of the signals is thereby greatly increased.

THE BEST JOKE I EVER HEARD

They Will Do It.

Brown, a newly wedded suburbanite, had promised to be home from town at 6 o'clock. At midnight his wife frantically sent six telegrams to as many of his friends living in town, asking each if her husband was stopping with him over night.

Toward morning hubby and his broken down auto were approaching the house when a messenger boy rushed up with six telegrams.

All of them read: "Yes, John is spending the night with me." I. C.

How Exceedingly Apt.

Fat Girl: "I have an appetite like a canary."

Thin Girl: "Yes, you have! You eat a peck at a time." C. R. O.

Explained.

He was a patient and long suffering young man, but when at last she arrived at the corner where they had arranged to meet he ventured a remonstrance.

"Darling, you are late," he said mildly.

"Only a few minutes," she protested in an injured tone.

"I said I'd be here at 7 o'clock, and it's only twenty minutes past."

"O," sighed the young man, "then you must have mistaken the day. I've been waiting here since last night." J. S.

Bore No Malice.

An automobile knocked a man down. The auto stopped; the victim sat up.

Driver—"Hey! Look out."

Victim—"Why, you ain't coming back, are you?" V. M.

Done with Dispatch.

Willie had a new puppy and a great opportunity to get home early seemed to present itself when his teacher announced that as soon as the language pupils could hand in their papers showing how they had used the list of words she would write upon the board they might be dismissed.

In a remarkably short time he was on his way rejoicing and his surprised teacher was reading: "The camel, leopard, elephant, tiger, actor, lady, vicar, teacher, zebra, parrot, soldier, sailor, king, and queen all died."

Shorthand and your opportunity

Many of the prominent men of today—railway presidents, statesmen, business men, financiers and even diplomats—got their start with shorthand.

Can you think of any trade that puts you in more intimate touch with business than shorthand?

You work always with men of brains and responsibility, and if you have business ability they find it out.

Whether you want to use shorthand as a stepping stone or as a permanent, bread-winning accomplishment, Gregg School is the place to get the training. Gregg Shorthand—more widely taught than all other systems combined—holds the world's championship for speed and accuracy.

Gregg training is a mighty practical investment, because we always have more good positions open and waiting for Gregg graduates than there are graduates to fill them.

Call at office, write or telephone for illustrated catalogue.

Forty-first Paper—Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn" (Second Article.)

MARK TWAIN'S masterpiece, "The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn"—The London Athenæum called it "one of the six greatest books ever written in America"—not only hung fire for eight years but once stood a fair chance of ending in the fire.

In 1876, when he was 40 years old, Mr. Clemens sent to William Dean Howells in Boston a letter of which this is a part:

Elmira, Aug. 9, 1876.

. . . a month ago I began another boys' book—more to be at work than anything else. I have written four hundred pages on it—therefore it is very nearly half done. It is Huck Finn's Autobiography. I like it only tolerably well, as far as I have got, and may possibly pigeonhole or burn the MS when it is done. . . .

Love to yez.

Yrs. ever,

Mark.

Four years passed. "Huck" still was only half finished. He turned the story over in his mind and had some idea of finishing it and publishing it and "The Prince and the Pauper" in a single volume. "But Livy [his wife] says they're not" [to be so published], he wrote to his sister, adding, "and by George I. she ought to know." She did. "The Prince and the Pauper" appeared by itself.

Three more years passed.

The scene is still Elmira. Now the fit is on him. His zest in the old MS. has returned. He is working rapidly on "Huck" and by a method all his own. On July 20, 1883, he writes to Howells:

I wrote 4000 words today and I touch 3000 and upwards pretty often, and don't fall below 2600 any working day. And when I get fagged out, I lie abed a couple of days and read and smoke, and then go it again for 6 or 7 days. I . . . am away along in a big one [book] that I half-finished two or three years ago. I expect to complete it in a month or six weeks or two months more. And I shall like it, whether anybody else does or not. It's a kind of companion to Tom Sawyer.

Four thousand words a day means about a dozen sparsely paragraphed pages of the Messrs. Harper's limp leather edition of "Huckleberry Finn." You thus can see that it was filigree work and done with great scrupulousness. Or don't you see it? Well, this may give you a gauge: A good reporter, having his matter well in hand, can knock off—on the typewriter—a thousand word (or one column) average newspaper article in twenty minutes. By "average" I mean an article that presents no intricacies of fact and requires no special "treatment."

But Mark felt that 4,000 words a day—with the two day interlude in bed every seven days—was good business, and he felt bully over it. In short, the spell was on him and, like Hamlet, he said, "'tis as easy as lying"—said just about that to his "Ma" in a letter he sent off to Keokuk the day after the letter to Howells:

Elmira, July 21, '83.

Private.

Dear Ma and Orion and Mollie: . . . I haven't had such booming working-days for many years. I am piling up manuscript in a really astonishing way. I believe I shall complete, in two months, a book which I have been fooling over for 7 years. This summer it is no more trouble to me to write than it is to lie. . . .

Hello, supper's ready. Love to all. Good bye,

Sam.

They were long days he put in. Toward the end of August, '83, we find him again writing to Howells:

. . . I have wrought from breakfast till 5:15 p. m. six days in the week, and once or twice I smouched a Sunday when the boss [his wife] wasn't looking. Nothing is half so good as literature hooked on Sunday, on the sly.

And so at the end of 1884, when Mark was 48 years old, "Huck Finn" at last came forth in England and America. The orders during the first weeks of sale were 50,000 copies. It has been a best seller ever since. In 1907, when detailed calculations were made, it had passed in sales all Mark's books except "Innocents Abroad."

But before its appearance "Huck" had to undergo the ordeal of censorship under the auspices of "the boss." For both MS and proofs went into Mrs. Clemens hands to be what Susy Clemens, in the biography of her father that she wrote when she was a little girl, called "expergated."

Said Susy:

I remember so well, with what pangs of regret we used to see her turn down the leaves of the pages, which meant that some delightfully terrible part must be scratched out. And I remember one part perticukiarly which was perfectly fascinating it was so terrible, that Clara and I used to delight in and oh, with what despair we saw mama turn down the leaf on which it was written, we thought the book would almost be ruined without it. But we gradually came to think as mama did.

Mark himself later wrote of this episode:

I do not remember what the condemned phrase was. It had much company, and they all went to the gallows.

It was a good thing for Mark. He was not gross, but delicacy of taste was not his religion, and he did dearly love the thunder-roll of Mississippi river cussing. It was Mr. Howells who ordered all the profanity out of the book and it was Mrs. Clemens who put it out. The verities do not suffer as a consequence. Robert Louis Stevenson, whose taste was almost impeccable, would not admit an oath to the pages of "Treasure Island," yet in no book of desperate deeds does one more assuredly get the "feel" of the presence and language of men whose words are—or seem to be—as wicked as their deeds.

Having undergone censorship in the family circle—and survived it—"Huck" faced a censorship from without, which he also survives. It makes one of the most ludicrous chapters in American literary history and it began where of all places it should not have begun—in the town of Henry David Thoreau. Yes, the Concord public library elected to make an egregious ninny of itself and in 1885 banned the book as "trash and suitable only for the slums."

"A rattling-tip-top puff," wrote Mark to his publisher, adding, "That will sell 25,000 copies for us."

The Concord Free Trade club, apparently wishful to extend comfort to the (un)afflicted, immediately elected Mark to honorary membership.

Often, during the next two decades, expulsion overtook "Huck" and "Tom"—notably in Brooklyn, which expelled both books from the children's room of a public library. To one of the librarians who had stood out against the foolishness Mark wrote:

Most honestly do I wish that I could say a softening word in defense of Huck's character since you wish it, but really, in my opinion, it is no better than those of Solomon, David, and the rest of the sacred brotherhood.

And again, when similar antics were being performed:

. . . when a Library expels a book of mine and leaves an unexpurgated Bible lying around where unprotected youth and age can get hold of it, the deep unconscious irony of it delights me and doesn't anger me.

How soon the rancor goes out of such episodes! Then they become most interesting and instructive sidelights in the annals of a people's culture—inspiriting, too, for the trend, say what we will, seems always to be toward greater rather than less sense.

Contrasts such as only the years can work out are the essence of such instruction and in them the profit lies. The period of the mincing censors passed and the period of the stylists and the thinkers arrived. With them "Huck" came into its own as a work of art and of morals. Hark 'ee: "As imperishably substantial as 'Robinson Crusoe,'" STUART P. SHERMAN; "A marvelously accurate portrayal of a whole civilization," BRANDER MATTHEWS; "A nearly flawless gem of romance and humor," ANDREW LANG; "The greatest piece of American fiction," JOHN MACY; "The two greatest American stories—'The Scarlet Letter' and 'Huckleberry Finn'," H. S. CANBY. Most significant of all were the unstudied tributes of the masters. Who can have forgotten Robert Louis Stevenson's spontaneous "It is a book I have read four times, and am quite ready to begin again tomorrow," and that Englishman on a continental train—not a master but just folks like us—who, recognizing Mark, said, "Mr. Clemens, I would give £10 not to have read your 'Huckleberry Finn'."

"Why so?" said Mark.

"So that I could again have the great pleasure of reading it for the first time."

The book, in short, to all relishing souls is not a book. 'Tis an experience. And the reason for that lies in its many-sidedness and its verity. Not alone to the lover of books and of his kind does it speak with intimate voice, but to the historian, the etymologist and the geographer. You think that perhaps that is buncombe? You will never know how true it is until you cruise down the Mississippi—say from Keokuk to Baton Rouge—with this book in hand. Then its folklore, its occasional words that now are either local or nearly obsolete but are racy of that fecund soil; its scenic bits, and its phrases that are as impellant to reverie as the flicker of the firelight in a darkened room—all that will stir your fancy in wondrous ways. Some of the words are little gems of half-forgotten verities—"Jim's eyes bugged out"—"dangersome"—"fitten"—"whilst." There are dozens. And the "king's," "balditude" ought to go into the dictionaries.

And the reality of it all—not the routine reality of actuality but the true reality of poets! Mark once told Brander Matthews that there was no episode in either "Tom" or "Huck" which had not "actually happened, either to me or to one or another of the boys I have known." What Mark did to those actual happenings was to infuse them with the witchery of forty years of fond recollection. The result is eleven hundred miles of the kind of reality which, in Professor Stuart Sherman's fine phrase, expresses "the half-barbaric charm in that grey wilderness of moving water."

Seven and thirty years have passed since Mark Twain's book started those ante-bellum boys on that literature-making—aye, and poetry-making—trip down the great river. Both Huck and Tom—in real life the Tom Blankenship and the Sam Clemens of Hannibal, Mo., would be nearly 90 years old were they living now. But how can one think of Huck and Tom as old men! Long since they started on the greatest adventure of all but the light—the golden light of youth and of joy and of those first blithe, wondering experimentations we make in the art of living—follows them always. Far, far have they wandered into the hearts of men and their mission has been benign: Youth they have exhilarated; old age they have refreshed. The breezes of happiness and high audacity sit ever in their sails and their craft salutes the white promontories of poetry's magic strand. A little while with confident feet they walked thereon, then vanished in the shadows. But young are they still, for the wand of a poet touched them and they who once are touched with that glamor are ever young and ever diffuse the spirit of youth among the weary ones that trudge by weary ways. And if they die of age they still die young.

In the shadows of their land—the land of a boy's homely poetry and untutored musings—let us leave them:

When I got there it was all still and Sunday-like, and hot and sunshiny; the hands was gone to the fields; and there was them kind of faint dronings of bugs and flies in the air that makes it seem so lonesome and like everybody's dead and gone; and if a breeze fans along and quivers the leaves it makes you feel mournful, because you feel like it's spirits whispering—spirits that's been dead ever so many years—and you always think they're talking about you. As a general thing it makes a body wish he was dead, too, and done with it all. . . . I went around and clumb over the back stile by the ash-hopper, and started for the kitchen. When I got a little ways I heard the dim hum of a spinning-wheel wailing along up and sinking along down again; and then I knowd for certain I wished I was dead—for that is the lonesomest sound in the whole world.

ART AND ARTISTS

Canvases of Eddy Collection Steeped in Modern Isms

By Eleanor Jewett.

THERE has been so much written and said about time, in the long run, being the only criterion of values that one hesitates to employ the trite saw in the case of the present exhibition of modern paintings, from the collection of the late Arthur J. Eddy, in view at the Art institute.

When these pictures were first shown, some decade or more ago, great was the comment aroused. People were stirred to express surprise, condemnation, disbelief, approval, or scorn. An outburst, written and spoken, thundered and flashed about the devoted heads of the errant artists and their credulous friend, Mr. Eddy. Even today that outburst has not quite stormed itself into silence. People may be heard, traversing the institute galleries, wondering under their breath, "Why did any one ever collect things like this, do you suppose?"

To understand some of the less comprehensible of the paintings, one should think of the motive that underlay their production in the mind of the painter. These moderns wanted to escape into a freedom where form and logic were not. They wanted to express feeling, emotion, movement. They wanted to express in color the sensation, for example, that surges in the mind of a person seeing, for the first time, the rosy cloak of dawn thrown, gilt edged, over the lofty snow summits of the Swiss Alps.

That sensation, as a sensation, has been expressed in music, in verse, and in prose. What is the color for it? Probably a torrent of violet threaded with a vein of gold that deepens into crimson at one end and dies in a gray veil at the other. Very well, then, such a torrent of violet threaded with gold will be painted upon the canvas. But unless the sensation is yours, you will entirely miss the meaning and significance of the painting when, untutored, it is placed before you.

Some such idea was behind much of the modern painting as betrayed in the Eddy collection. Not, however, in all of it. Other artists were fixed in the belief that to be sincere in painting they must get back to the simplest forms. Thence come our primitive figures, primitive colors, and primitive compositions. But the most intensely modern, as the unsophisticated know it, is the modernity that sought to put emotion, sensation, and movement into colors.

That these artists were willing to suffer for their ideas is only too manifest in the story of one of them, who may serve as an example of them all. He painted "The Clown," a realistic, sad, and jolly figure that is one of the high lights in the Eddy collection. He was a Frenchman, Manigault, of the Post-Impressionist school, filled with the idea of expressing thought, feeling, vision in paint. He determined to do without food for a time in order to heighten his spiritual light, to quicken his inner vision, as do the ascetics of India. But he went too far in his search for visions that he might give the world. He starved to death.

Greater love, certainly, has no man for his faith, than to die for it.

Fortunately few men carry their beliefs to such extremes. In the present exhibition there are no others who have died in attempting the impossible, but there are many other equally or more incomprehensibly modern than Manigault. For example, look at Wassily Kandinsky's "Improvisation No. 30." Mr. Eddy writes concerning it: "This was not painted as an impression of war, but the atmosphere was so charged with war at the time it was painted that the artist must have unconsciously introduced the feeling."

Perhaps, but until glancing at that note in the catalogue, the single impression introduced to my mind by the canvas was one of chaotic confusion. Chaotic confusion may be war, certainly it is not modern war, with its plotted lines of march and carefully calculated attacks. So, as far as registering truly on on unbiased mind, granting Mr. Eddy's assumption, Kandinsky did not convey the sensation of war, but the sensation of turmoil, thus side stepping the exactitudes of realism.

One might continue, running over the names of canvas after canvas, each steeped in the fumes of cubism, impressionism, and post-impressionism, but time crowds. For each, in these pictures, is his own meaning; to each, their significance counts for what he can put into their color. Unless one reads the story of color, that of design is impossible. These isms thrive on color, the rest is negligible.

On Friday there opened at the Art Institute a most unpremeditated exhibition—that of the paintings of Carl Larwin, an artist who reached Chicago only a few weeks ago, having fled from Austria. He brought with him enough pictures to fill a gallery at the museum, and, his arrival being heard of, he was at once invited to hang his canvases for a public view. The exhibition will continue for some time.

—THOMAS CARLYLE.

By Fanny Butcher.

It isn't often that a novel brings tears to rather sturdy eyes for the sheer beauty of its language, for the sheer loveliness of its poetry, disguised in the raiment of the matter of factness of prose. It isn't often that images of beauty leap from a page and glow before one's eyes. It isn't often that a novel is a gorgeous tapestry of words so delicately wrought as to make one conscious of the sheer living quality of the commonplace words which serve alike the well hearted stupidities and the sad realities. That mere words can be so potent is the magic of all poetry.

I didn't want to read another novel that I had to praise. I wanted to have something upon which to practice the gentle art of making enemies. I almost wanted Rebecca West's novel to be poor. I was so tired of bandying praise about. I read one paragraph and knew that I was captive. I read a few pages and was a prisoner in the meshes of its beauty.

When I had finished the first half of "The Judge" I wanted to shout to Here, my friends and countrymen, is a book which is utterly incomparable. Here is a creature beyond all words lovely and beyond add thoughts adorable. Here—in this Ellen Melville—is the most naive and innocent girl that ever lived. Here is a picture of woman subtler than man or woman ever drew before. Here is romance so delicate as to be sheer poetry. Here is richness of phrase and of image so heavy in beauty as to be at once an overtone and an undertone of the melody of the simple love song that is its theme. Here is humor, like its romance, so delicate as to be something that the reader gives to the book as much as something the author puts there. Yes, here is everywhere a beauty of phrase and idea so deep and real it almost to wound."

There isn't a page that doesn't reach its fingers of loveliness out and hold you in its grasp. "What a lovely thing that is," you say, time after time, or "How nice!" with that peculiar vehement accent on the ny-y-ce that is the tribute of inarticulate lovers of beauty.

The first half of "The Judge" is —and I say it without reservation— the most beautiful love story that I have ever read because it is never at any moment unreal or soppy or over-sentimental, but it never at any moment loses the lyric glamour of young love. It is, in the truest sense of the word, a prose poem. It tells the love of Ellen Melville, 17, a Scot, a suffragette and a socialist and a child of beauty, and Richard Yaverland, a creature of romance to her eager little practical, romantic soul, the son of a union of love, the passionately adored child of a woman who dedicated her life to him.

Ellen Melville is not like any other character in any book in the world. She is wholly convincing, wholly real, and yet she is never what one thinks she is going to be. She never says what one thinks she is going to say. She always says something infinitely nicer! She never does what one thinks she is going to do.

There are touching moments—the one when she receives her first flowers from the man who loves her—and is at first angry at the sheer waste of money—she's a practical little Scot—and then for five nights eats her supper by candlelight because the gas light is bad for them. "It'll be a bit dark, but it isn't as if there were many bones in the fish pie."

And, on her urgent inquiry as to the possibility of a future life and being told that she needn't worry about that problem yet awhile, she says, "O, I'm not worrying for myself. But on a fine day like this I just hate to think my mother's not getting the benefit of it somewhere."

Adorable Ellen, "that earnest child," as Miss West says, "who thought only of laying up treasure in heaven, and would say bravely to the present of a string of pearls, 'Thank you, they're verra nice,' and grieve silently because no one has thought to give her a really good dictionary of economic terms."

Perhaps Ellen is so lovely a thing because Miss West has that rare quality, a real genius for making memorable pictures, rich in backgrounds. One could quote half the book.

Here is a sentence that is characteristic: "Mr. Philip laughed again and left a kind of glow. He never could get over a feeling that to discover a woman excited about an intellectual thing was like coming on her bathing; her cast off femininity afflicted him as a heap of her clothes on the beach might have done."

It is a beauty too deep for bearing. It can't go on. Neither can her characters go on. Such beauty must be followed by tragedy. Those two young thoughts even from the beginning. Ellen feels loveliness too keenly. She is marked for tragedy.

The second part of the book is mostly about Richard's mother, to whom Richard sends his Ellen until they can be married. It is the story of Richard's love for his mother—which is passionately at war with his love for Ellen. Technically, it is an interesting task. Miss West has recreated the past in one long night of horror through which Richard's mother passes. In her memory the time lives again when Richard came to be, when she was stoned in the village, when to save her child she married Peacey. Her letter to Richard's father, the night of horror when Peacey broke his vow never to touch her, the second child whom she always hated but tried to be kind to, the years which had elapsed for all three of them.

It is a fine technical feat. The only difficulty with it is that it drags somewhat. It is a long tale and Ellen's growing loveliness is too absent. It is simply another book, the logical sequel one, less joyous, in a distinctly different key, but no less fine. And all through it there deepens the ominousness of tragedy that is inevitable. Occasionally there are moments of

REBECCA WEST.

Rebecca West has written in "The Judge" a novel which is sheer imprisoned beauty. The first half of "The Judge" is the most charming, the most amusing, the loveliest love story that any one ever read.

"If"

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs and blaming it on you
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you
And make allowance for their doubting too;
If you can wait and not grow tired by waiting,
Or being lied about don't deal in lies,
Or being hated don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good nor talk too wise:

Rudyard Kipling probably wasn't thinking of himself in the year 1922 when he wrote "If" in 1910, but it fits his present unhappy condition. He insists that "I did not give Mrs. Clare Sheridan an interview and did not say the things that have been ascribed to me. I have not discontinued my practice of saying what I have to say over my own signature." Anyway, here's a reproduction of the original manuscript of "If." Copyright by Rudyard Kipling and published by Doubleday, Page & Co., with all rights reserved.

racking coughs that some day will burst the fragile shell of men who once threw back their heads with inarticulate joy in the sheer beauty of vigor—but we hear those coughs sometimes from the eddies of busy streets mingled with pleas to buy shoestrings or needles.

We may be cynics, but we can't see, in a world racked by greed and selfishness and intolerance, much memory of a time when a wave of youth dashed against the shores of France to fight a holy war. Memory of an ideal, at least, should have been bought by that crusade. But it wasn't. We didn't intend that for a joke. We intended it for a solemn fact.

Theatrical Blessings.

A. A. Milne has, within the last two years, leaped into fame and fortune in the United States. There was first "Mr. Pim Passes By," which delighted small audiences and led them to read his "First Plays" which contained it. Then came a volume of amusing essays "Not That It Matters," then a very good mystery yarn "The Red House Mystery," and now one may read "Three Plays" which contains "The House at Blayds," "The Great Broxop," and that wholly charming, delicate, delightful bit of comedy which is now playing here, "The Dover Road." And on Oct. 20 there will be brought out his "Second Plays," and a second volume of essays is promised for the later fall.

A. A. MILNE.

"The Dover Road" reminds me that more and more are the blessings of Broadway being shared with those who must do their theater going vicariously. It is a rare success nowadays—which has any literary quality at all—which doesn't very soon find itself between covers for citizens in the provinces to read.

For instance, we might have read—and we did—last year, "The Circle," which has just opened one of Chicago's exclusive playhouses. We might have read—and we did—"The Green Goddess." In fact, we wrote a piece about it as we remember. We might read—but we're not going to—a novelization of the play by Louise Jordan Miln, the lady that wrote "Mr. Wu" and shocked the sewing circles of South Chicago, Dubuque, and upper Michigan avenue. We might read "The White Peacock," by Olga Petrova, if we hadn't seen it! You can, if you want to. And, by the way, that luxuriantly figured lady used to be a newspaper reporter in London and she is, in her hours of ease, coy with her pen, contributing to the more caloric monthly journals.

Cold and Cruel.

No, not Frances Rumsey herself, whose statuesque profile you see here for the first time, but the heroine of her novel, "Ascent," a woman who cold-bloodedly sacrifices every one to her own ascent. Do you remember her "Mr. Cushing and Mlle. du Chastel"? That was a remarkable book, a subtle study of the delicate problem of the adjustment of love between a man and a woman of different and differing nationalities.

FRANCES RUMSEY.

An Impressionistic Ulysses.

"Many are discussing James Joyce's 'Ulysses,' but few are reading it," says a New York writer. It was "Ulysses" that got the Little Review into trouble, you remember. It was to have been published in book form here, but the suppression of the magazine had turned the eyes of the country and its upholders of righteousness upon it so pointedly that it never had its American publication.

It was brought out in Paris by an English company in a limited edition which was almost immediately exhausted. It was not, according to the most discriminating critics, any more remarkable than its predecessor, "A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man." It is a continuation of the story of Stephen Dedalus, the "artist," and its technique is merely an exaggeration of the technique of "A Portrait of the Artist," the technique of impressionism which you see in its most complete form in Dorothy Richardsons' endless series of novels about the mental life of Miriam (is that her name?), to say nothing of the countless badly done imitations.

Unless I am mistaken, Gertrude Stein was the first person in this generation to throw into her sentences all of the conflicting vagaries of the mind that derail the old fashioned trains of thought. Anyway, what they do, in words of one syllable, is to dump everything out of the minds of their characters on to the paper, with no selection whatever. The result is a realistic muddle of impressions and thoughts which is, to some, extremely stimulating and significant but which is to others merely a confusing mêlée. "A Portrait of the Artist" is a good book to test your reaction to impressionism, which is, I suppose, after all, the most logical realism.

"Robin," by Mrs. Frances Hodson Burnett.

"The Mind in the Making," by James Harvey Robinson.
"The Practice of Autosuggestion," by C. Harry Brooks.

Is A. S. M. Hutchinson
The Successor of Dickens?

The Minneapolis Tribune says: "The successor to Charles Dickens, often talked about but never arriving, seems at last to have appeared in the person of Arthur Stuart Menteth Hutchinson, author of 'If Winter Comes,' whose new novel 'This Freedom' has just been published.

"When 'If Winter Comes' was making its great popular success, the author's work was frequently compared to that of Dickens; in 'This Freedom,' the likenesses are even more apparent. The extent to which Mr. Hutchinson possesses all of Dickens' faults as well as all, or nearly all, of his virtues is simply amazing."

Or Harold Bell Wright?

The Chicago Evening Post says: "It may sell as well as Harold Bell Wright, for as far as the thesis is concerned, and as far as the latter half of the book is concerned, Mr. Hutchinson has achieved just about the same degree of competence, both as a thinker on topics of the day and as a writer, that our own Mr. Wright has proved to us is most likely to appeal to the minds of the big majority."

THE BREATH OF SCANDAL

By EDWIN BALMER

The New York Times says: "This novel is built around an excellent idea, an all-engrossing one, the question of what happens when the shadow of a man's sin creeps into view and casts its grayness on his wife and daughter."

The Chicago Evening Post says: "Mr. Balmer has taken this topic, built an appealing story around it, and given to his readers something subject to much thought and debate. As a comment on the married life of to-day among the so-called higher classes, the book has real importance."

WANTED.
A SALES
ORGANIZATION.

This is one of the biggest "Classified Ads" for salesmen that we ever heard of. to business is not merely a cause of quantity in advertising but it is a symbol of the bigness of the idea behind our vast enterprise and its future possibilities.

WHO WE ARE.

We have good business reasons, which will appear obvious when explained in an interview, for not revealing our name or the precise nature of our business in this advertisement.

Our business is an enterprise operating in a number of the largest cities of the country and aspiring to national preeminence that will certainly include every large city from coast to coast. We are rendering a new and unique service, which marks a distinct advance and improvement over old methods in a line of business which supplies a universal need. We are connected with, and financed by, important financial institutions in the cities where we operate. The business is of the soundest character. It is permanent, effective and operative in all seasons. Our experience in other large cities where we operate bears out this statement. Years of business depression apparently have no effect on our ability to secure new business. We have five years of conspicuous success behind us.

RESULTS.

The practical result of our business to the community is a more widespread opportunity for our clients to share the benefits of time and labor given them than has been possible in the past under the old methods. It manifests itself in speedily building up a tremendous volume of business that runs into the millions, which ordinarily takes many years to accomplish. Our salesmen, therefore, can earn larger incomes right from the start than would be possible under other plans. Our system is original, and effective in smoothing the pathway to the "dotted line." Its appeal is spontaneous. Prospects immediately admit its admirable qualities.

OUR CHICAGO PLANS.

We contemplate immediately establishing our national headquarters in Chicago. We believe in Chicago. We are sold on the proposition that Chicago is destined in all respects to be the world's greatest city. Our plans are to first secure a large sales organization of Chicago and Mid-West men. Our next step will be to launch a comprehensive advertising campaign in Chicago newspapers, and other approved forms of modern advertising that are adaptable to our business. We propose to establish classes in salesmanship where authoritative instruction and information in our line will obtain. Our method of training has already established most reliable and satisfactory banking connections in Chicago.

WE WANT
ONE HUNDRED MEN NOW.

We believe that we can easily use the services of one hundred salesmen immediately. We want men who are big men—salesmen of big caliber, who are accustomed to interviewing and making sales to successful men of the Chicago district. These men should have a high education, should have some resources, and should have executive ability. We want to start in on the front line for taking charge of groups of salesmen and becoming managers of important branches in the future. We want men of the progressive type—men who maintain perpetual business friendships by going out of the rut of a too strict conservatism. We want men who do not fear to leave the beaten path of habit and take a step forward. By virtue of these qualities such men should be sufficiently poised to keep their feet on the ground. These are men with a large mentality and ever optimistic viewpoints—broadminded men with a vision.

SALES MANAGERS.

We have room for a small number of sales managers who have forces of salesmen at their command whom they wish to turn into new and profitable channels. Applicants must be prepared to show successful records of production and sales management in the past. They must not only be able to handle men successfully and be big producers themselves but must prove that by temperament and creative they are not entirely dependent upon harmonizers. Our organization will be one in which every man will cooperate with every other man that is with the success of the organization must be paramount and thereby the success of each individual member. Applicants must be no selfishness in the narrow sense, but helpfulness and progressiveness in the broad sense that brings success to all.

SALESMEN WHO WANT
A BIGGER CHANCE.

We will have room for a number of salesmen who have been making progress in their lines during the past few years, but who feel that conditions with their firms or in their line of business are not conducive to advancement through no fault of their own, and who are willing to accept an opportunity where the only limitation a salesman has is that which he puts upon himself. These men must have strong self-confidence and show that they have successful records, considering the conditions under which they have worked.

SALESMEN WHO WANT TO FORGE AHEAD.

Our organization can include a number of salesmen who are successful in other lines, but who wish immediately to forge ahead. Men who believe that the principles of salesmanship are the same whether a man sells carpet tacks or locomotives, and that these principles can be applied to any business with equal success, given a working knowledge and understanding of the details.

COMMISSION BASIS.

Men who take positions on our selling staff should be able to maintain themselves for thirty to sixty days, until the payment of commissions begins. Subsequently commissions are payable every month. As a general rule we would prefer men who are accustomed to working on a commission basis and who desire to receive the fruits of their ability and industry on a percentage basis of the volume of business done. Our experience is that men of this type in our organization earn much more than salaried salesmen elsewhere.

WHOM WE SELL.

The character of our business is clean, is of the highest order, and is above the slightest reproach. It is highly approved in financial, commercial and professional circles. It is of a nature that serves business men bankers, professional men and salaried people who have good and regular incomes.

WRITE US FOR A PRIVATE INTERVIEW.

Requests for interviews are invited from men who care to give a brief account of their activities in the past. A letter will be held in the strictest confidence, if come, and the utmost freedom can be exercised by salesmen in writing to us, as we will not communicate with your references until after a personal interview and then only with your express permission.

Make application on the basis of this call, as this ad will not be repeated in Chicago.

...2, 3, AND 4 ROOM APARTMENTS.

...For a number of years, on account of the ...popularity of small units, the builders have ...turned their attention to two, three and four ...room apartments, with the result in many ...cases, on account of lack of experience in ...planning and lack of knowledge of the pro... ...visions essential to the comfortable occupa... ...tion of apartments of this type, numbers of ...buildings have fallen short of public require... ...ments.
...The Edgewater Courts is the result of years ...of careful study and experience on the part ...of the builders, coupled with the services ...of one of the most able firm of architects ...in Chicago, who in planning and building, ...were given free rein to produce apartments ...that would satisfy the most exacting tenants.

HAYNES TOURING CAR, MODEL 47, 1921. This very late Haynes touring car is coming into our hands in exceptionally fine condition throughout. The cord tires are above the average in condition. Mechanically it is exceptionally fine. The paint, which is a dark Blue, is also in very good condition. Rarely do we have the opportunity of offering to the public as late a model car at anywhere near the price we are offering this one. Special for this sale, $950.

PEERLESS SEDAN, 1922. This very late Peerless Sedan is in such condition that it would be difficult for any one to distinguish it from new. The paint, which is Dark Blue, has not a mar or blemish on it anywhere, and the cord tires show practically no wear. Mechanically it will carry the standard warranty of this Company. We have never before had the opportunity of offering to the public a car of this Series and Type in the same fine condition that this one is in. It is a very roomy 7 passenger enclosed car and at our price represents an extremely good value. You should see and ride in this car to really appreciate it. It is the last word in high grade motor car construction. Act quickly if you would avail yourself of a real bargain. Special for this sale, $2,850.

CADILLAC 8 TYPE 59 TOURING CAR. This car has just been turned in to us from one of Cadillac's oldest customers and the car is in remarkably fine condition. It evidences the extreme good care and attention it has always had. The paint, which is a Dark Gray, is in very good condition; tires are all Cords and practically new. It is equipped with a set of winter enclosures that to duplicate today would cost about $350. They are covered with black leather to match the top and the general appearance of this automobile is exceedingly pleasing. Mechanically it is above the average in condition. This is a car that the previous owner will be more than glad to recommend to you and can tell you its history from the day it was purchased. We believe we are very fortunate in being able to offer it to the public at such a ridiculously low price and know that it will undoubtedly be sold to the first person who sees it. For that reason would suggest your immediate action. Specially priced at $1,700.

PEERLESS TOURING, 1922. We feel very fortunate in being able to offer to the public this very late Peerless touring car. It has been acquired by us in an unusual way and therefore we are in a position to sell this almost new Peerless car at a ridiculously low price. It has the permanent top, which is a Peerless feature, along with the remarkable endurance and power that makes Peerless a leader among cars in its class and a perpetual friend to its owner. This car is all that any person could require in the way of transportation for any purpose. It will sell very rapidly at the price we have on it, and for that reason would suggest your immediate action. Price, $2,250.

CADILLAC 8 TYPE 55 VICTORIA COUPE. This car has just been turned in to us on one of our new Peerless enclosed cars and we believe if you are interested in the purchase of a 4 passenger Coupe that this one, at the price, will serve your purpose nicely. Mechanically it is very good. The tires are good and the paint is a Dark Blue. We do not believe that you can duplicate the value that there is in this car at anywhere near our price of $750.

PEERLESS COUPE, 1922. This is a Series 7, 4 passenger enclosed car that we have just recently received from one of the officials of our factory. We do not believe that you can distinguish it from new. It is painted a deep Maroon and has been driven less than 4,000 miles. Mechanically it will carry our standard new car warranty. The Gouverneur cord tires are like new. The velour upholstery looks as though it had never been used. It has much extra equipment, including nickeled radiator shell and lamps, special motometer, rear vision mirror, windshield cleaner, and many other extras. Refinished in Foch blue and has every appearance of a new car. Equipped with 5 good cord tires, new seat covers and other extras. Economical to operate and ready for immediate use. An excellent investment at $975.

MARMON TOURING CAR, MODEL 34, 7 PASS. This is a Marmon of a late series and was just received from the original owner, who turned it in on one of our new "Type 61" Cadillacs. It is equipped with 6 wire wheels and 6 very good cord tires, motometer, clock, and other extras. The paint, which is deep purple lake, is in very fine condition and the car throughout shows very little use. Top and upholstery perfect. We have priced it ridiculously low for quick disposal at $990.

CADILLAC 8 TYPE 59 TOURING CAR. The ideal 7 passenger family car. This particular car has just been put through our shops and mechanically it will carry our warranty. We have refinished it in deep maroon with light red stripe and equipped it with 5 new cord tires, bumper, Klaxon horn, seat covers, and many other extras. The Cadillac is noted for its ease of handling and dependability and is a car that any member of the family can drive with confidence because of its mechanical perfection. We suggest early inspection of this fine car, as our price is only $1,900.

CADILLAC 8 TYPE 61 VICTORIA COUPE. This beautiful high grade 4 passenger car is one of our latest series, has been refinished by us, and has every appearance of a new automobile. Mechanically it is perfect and will carry the same guarantee as given new Cadillacs. This particular car did not have a great deal of use and when received by us was checked mechanically. It is equipped with 5 new custom built cord tires, cover, seat covers, stop light, Biflex bumper, and standard "61" equipment. Your opportunity to buy this car at a saving of approximately $750. Price $3,500.

MARMON TOWN CAR, 1919, MODEL 34. The body is custom built by Graff and upholstered in broadcloth, which is in very good condition. It was received from the original owner, always carefully driven, and reflects the good care it had. We have refinished the entire car, the body of which is in a conservative green. Completely equipped, with 5 wire wheels, 5 good tires, spring bumper, motometer, slip covers, heater, spotlight, and other extras. Exceptional value for $1,175.

CADILLAC 8 TYPE 57 LIMOUSINE. This is our 7 passenger inclosed car and has just been received from the original owner. It is in mechanical condition that we consider very good and will be a serviceable car for a great many years. The velour upholstery shows practically no use and the paint condition is good. Equipped with cord tires, 1 spare; bumper, and other extras. A high grade limousine of a series that is very seldom offered. It is very roomy and ideal for town or country use. In the hands of a sightman it would pay for itself in a short time. Your early inspection is urged, as we do not believe it will long remain here at our price of $1,500.

MULTIPLE LISTING WILL BE VOTED ON BY REALTY BOARD

Directors O. K. Plan; Up to Members Now.

One of the most important and far reaching moves made by the Chicago Real Estate board towards the betterment of the local realty business is planned as a result of the directors of that organization unanimously indorsing the adoption of the multiple listing system. The question of its installation is to be submitted at once to the members at large for their approval. It is believed the project will win by a large majority. The directors' action followed a recommendation of the sales committee, of which Mark Levy is chairman.

MARK LEVY. [Wallinger Photo.]

Under the multiple system a real estate owner may list his property with a member of the board and within forty-eight hours every other member will have that listing on his desk. This means that practically every real estate man in the city will be working to sell that particular piece of property.

Costs Owner Nothing.

This service will cost the owner nothing in addition to the usual commission he now pays, the realtors negotiating the deal dividing the commission among themselves. This system, it is claimed, will do much toward making Chicago real estate a liquid asset.

The owner will sign an exclusive agency contract agreeing to give a certain realtor the listing of his property for a certain length of time, on a special form to be provided by the realty board. In it the realtor agrees to list the property through the board.

Board to Pass on Valuations.

He then sends a copy of the contract, together with a description of the property, to the board, where a committee will pass on the listing to determine whether the price is reasonable. If ridiculously high it will be refused. If salable, the listing will be sent on a loose leaf ledger form to every realtor in Chicago.

The realtor who lists the property pays the board $1, which, of course, doesn't even pay for the postage of sending out the form. The board, however, is reimbursed by getting 5 per cent of the commission earned. Each broker will make an initial payment of $10 to cover the cost of the installation of ledger, etc.

Successful in Ninety Cities.

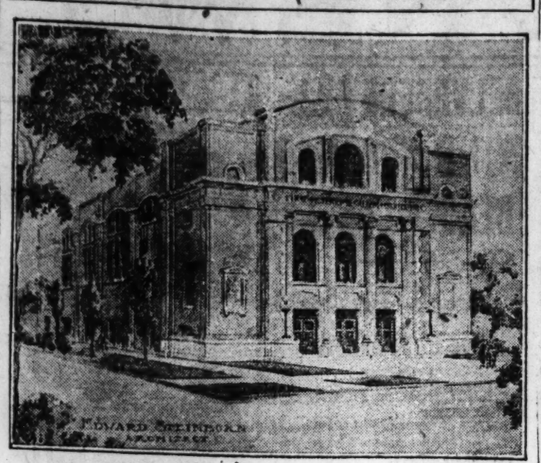
The multiple listing system is now in successful operation in about ninety cities. Two years ago there were only ten using it. In some cities it has been in effect for ten years. It has been a success in every instance, so it is claimed. The usual disputes over commissions and other questions have been eliminated, and the curbstone broker has become almost an unknown quantity.

Mark Levy, chairman of the sales committee of the board, is probably entitled to more credit for the action by the directors in indorsing multiple listing than any other Chicago realtor. He has lectured on it, talked for it whenever possible, and consistently and persistently boosted it. He's been nearly as enthusiastic about it as Charles Nichols has been about zoning —and that's saying something.

$550,000 BOND ISSUE.

The Greenebaum Sons Investment company has underwritten a $550,000 bond issue on the new South Shore Beach apartments, designed by Eric Hall, a picture of which was printed in this department on July 9.

Synagogue to Face Humboldt Park



There seems to be no slowup in the building boom of religious edifices. Work is now under way on a $200,000 synagogue at the southeast corner of California avenue and Hirsch street, opposite Humboldt park, for the first Austrian congregation, formerly on North Ashland avenue. This is claimed to be the first Hebrew congregation on the northwest side. Max Roth is president. Architect Edward Steinborn has designed a 65x125 building, with a seating capacity of 1,200 and several class rooms. Louis I. Simon is structural engineer. Completion date is placed at April 1, 1923.

Start Work on Hundred Car Garage on Ingleside Ave.

Work has started on a 100 car garage by S. D. Jonas and Julius M. Kahn at 5475 Ingleside avenue, in connection with and adjacent to their seventy-eight flat building. They have leased the garage to the Rector's Garage corporation for ten years at a term rental said to be $84,000. Alex Weiss and W. H. Sanders were brokers.

Levy Mayer Building May Be New Name of Stratford

It was reported yesterday that the new Stratford office building, to be built on the stie of the old Stratford hotel, will be called the Levy Mayer building and be a memorial to the great attorney, who had planned for years to make the structure one of the finest in the world.

NEW BUILDING FOR KEDZIE.

A $75,000 two story building, to contain eight stores with lofts above, is planned for the 125x123 on the west side of Kedzie, 200 feet south of Montrose, by David Horwich. Ernest Hahn plans drawn by Architect Robert Cenek. The owner bought part of the site, 75x125, from Morris Levinson, for $9,000. Isadore Perkins & Co. were brokers. Mr. Cenek is building a $50,000 two story building near by.

WHY DON'T MORE OF YOU DO THIS, MR. SUBDIVIDER?

Otto Rueter & Co. have taken title to the ninety-three acres at the northwestern corner of Western and 107th, now being subdivided as Morgan Park manor, from Nathaniel H. Stone of Milton, Mass., for $90,000. This is the property which Mr. Reuter announced several months ago he would place on the market, reserving five acres for a community park. Since then he has enlarged the scope of his plan, and yesterday deeded to the Morgan Park Manor Improvement association one and one half acres for tennis courts, and the same area for children's playgrounds, as well as the originally planned five acres, making a total of seven and a half acres.

OTTO RUETER. [Wallinger Photo.]

Wonder why more subdivision men don't do this? It ought to help selling wonderfully.

Will Remodel Apartments at Kenmore and Berwyn

Rene Wahl has bought the fifteen flat building at the southwest corner of Kenmore and Berwyn from Frank B. Constant for $134,000 and will spend $70,000 in remodeling, according to the Union Bank of Chicago, which has made a $130,000, 6½ per cent loan on the completed property. When finished there'll be eight stores on the first floor and ten apartments above. Dubin & Eisenberg are the architects.

May Add Several Stories to Franklin St. Building

The Louis Sala company, which bought the four story building at 12 North Franklin, as reported last week, intends to remodel the building, probably several stories, according to information just received from Albert H. Wetten & Co., brokers in the deal.

LEASES PERSHING ROAD WAREHOUSE.

The Brunswick-Balke-Collender company has bought the five story warehouse, 90x202, at the southwest corner of Pershing road and Federal, from George W. Shank, through Alex Friend & Co. During the war this was used as a medical warehouse by the government. The purchase was made under contract.

WAREHOUSE CHANGES HANDS.

The Wool Pullers' Warehouse corporation has bought a one story warehouse on Elston avenue, 100 feet northwest of Webster avenue, lot 100x280, from John Svatik and others for an indicated $50,000.

COMMERCIAL TEACHERS' CONVENTION.

The executive committee of the National Commercial Teachers' association met yesterday at the Hotel Sherman and made arrangements for the convention of national commercial teachers to be held in Chicago Dec. 26, 27, 28, and 29.

PLAN ELABORATE GROUP FOR NORTH SHORE SCHOOL

Winnetka Institution Buys 14 1-2 Acre Site.

BY AL CHASE.

Two apparently unimportant transactions have just been consummated by a group of Winnetka men every name of which stands high in Chicago's business and professional world, which on the surface indicate little, but which in reality are of unusual importance to the north shore boy and girl who plans going to an eastern college.

PERRY DUNLAP SMITH.

One is the incorporation of the North Shore Country Day school at Winnetka as a permanent, nonsectarian institution not for profit, a step taken after three years of tentative operation.

The other is the purchase by the school from Francis King Cooke of the fourteen and one-half acre tract it now stands on between Forest and Maple avenues, north of Elder lane, in Winnetka.

"Upper School" to Be First Unit.

On this site an elaborate school group, designed by Architects Clark & Walcott will be erected to supplant the present structures. The first unit, an "upper school building," will cost $80,000. The total outlay is expected will total $275,000. The first building will be completed during next summer in time for fall opening.

The North Shore Country Day school is an unusual institution for this section of the country. The idea originated three years ago among a group of Winnetka men who wanted their children to go to the same eastern colleges they graduated from, but who found the midwestern high schools, as a rule, bent their efforts in preparing students for the state universities and overlooked many subjects required for entrance to Princeton, Yale, and other eastern institutions.

Perry Dunlap Smith Takes Hold.

These Winnetka men persuaded Perry Dunlap Smith to consider the development of such a school and it was opened on Oct. 6, 1919. Mr. Smith, by the way, was the first pupil at the Francis Parker school, in Chicago, and later taught there for six years. He was a student and later a teacher at Hill school, Pottstown, Pa.; he's a graduate of Harvard and one of the organizers of Frank Vanderlip's famous Scarborough school, at Scarborough-on-the-Hudson, and acting principal until he entered the service. He was at Camp Grant and senior instructor of the officers' training school at Camp Lee. He left the service with the rank of major.

Under Mr. Smith the school has developed till now it has an enrollment close to 300 and a waiting list of nearly 200. It has pupils from Lake Forest south to Evanston and is a day school, as its name indicates, and not a boarding school. So, no matter how large it grows, it won't take the place of Phillips Exeter, Andover, Groton or any other of the exclusive eastern prep schools.

Keeps Them at Home.

"Our high schools are for the average boy and girl who goes no farther," explained Edwin S. Clark of Clark & Walcott, who is interested in the school both as father of a pupil there and as architect. "They don't teach many of the subjects the eastern colleges require and they're not equipped to prepare for eastern colleges. The North Shore Country Day school keeps our boys and girls at home until they are ready for the eastern colleges; they get the training they'd get at the eastern prep schools without having to leave their home towns."

The school is an all day institution, opening in the morning and continuing until late in the afternoon, the pupils eating their lunch there. It pays more than usual attention to athletics, and an elaborate gymnasium is contemplated, just back of the first unit. The curriculum covers the range from kindergarten to the last year of high school.

Here Are the Directors.

The board of directors responsible for the business management of the school comprises the following Winnetka men: Frederick H. Scott of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Calvin Fentress of Baker, Fentress & Co., bankers; Cornelius Lynde, attorney; Ayres Boal, realtor; Robert H. Ripley, son of the late E. P. Ripley and vice president of the American Steel Foundries company; Willoughby G. Walling, president of the Morris Plan bank; Robert Stevenson Jr., president of Stevenson Bros. & Perry, Inc., investments; H. Spaulding Coffin of Curtis & Sanger, and Charles T. Mordock of the Randolph-Perkins company, engineers.

ADDS TO MANUFACTURING PLANT.

Architect Jacob Lewis has drawn plans for a 94x150 addition to the plant of the Gits Brothers Manufacturing company, 1941 South Kilbourn avenue, makers of automobile parts. When completed the plant will have a total floor area of 34,000.

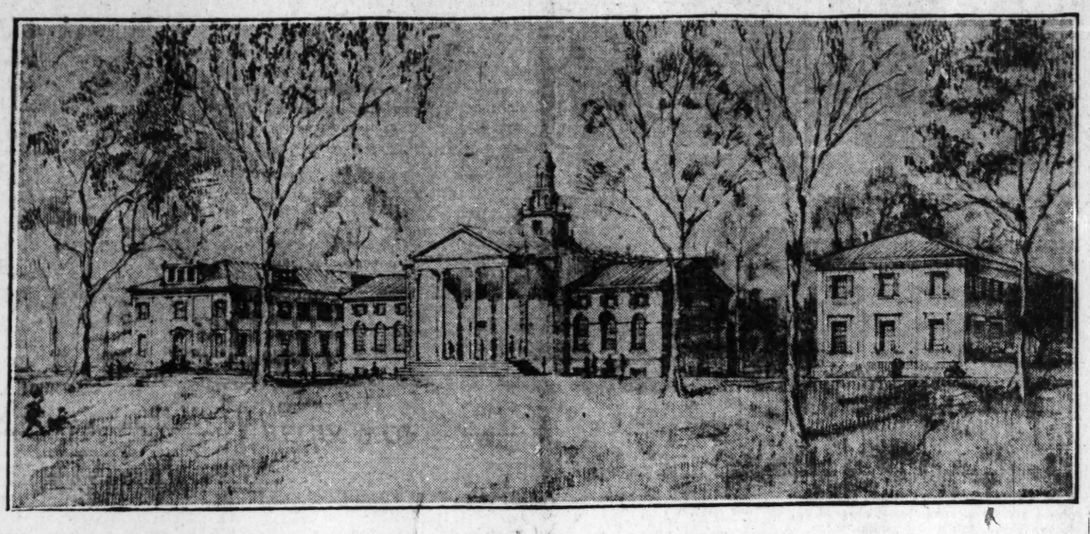
Where They Prepare North Shore Youngsters for Eastern Colleges



Architects Clark and Walcott have designed the new group of buildings to supplant the present structures of the North Shore Country Day school at Winnetka. The 14½ acre campus, formerly leased, has just been purchased. More is told in a nearby column.

New State-Bellevue Building

Work will start at once on what is claimed will be the largest two story building in the city, the State-Bellevue block, to cover the entire irregular shaped block fronting 229 feet on Rush, 227 on State, 149 on Oak, and 82 on Bellevue. The owners are Seymour Marks, Max Grossman, and Dr. Vincent Marzane. Alex Levy and William J. Klein are the architects. It will be ready Feb. 1. An arcade will run across the first floor. The second will be divided to suit tenants. With the land the building, it is claimed, will represent an investment of $850,000. Greenebaum Sons Investment company has made a $425,000 bond issue on the property.

COMMISSION MAN PAYS $305,000 FOR APARTMENTS

Among the sales totaling close to $500,000 reported by F. A. Richards, of H. E. Henderson & Co., is the southwest corner of Loyola and Lakewood, improved with sixty-three apartments and seven stores, purchased by W. G. Howard, South Water street commission man, from Oscar C. Junge for $305,000, subject to $127,000.

Mr. Howard also bought the three flat building at 928 Winona for $65,000, from James H. Sullivan. Mr. Howard sold the twelve flats at the northeast corner of Lakewood and Loyola, reported in this department last Wednesday, for $50,000, subject to $18,700. R. C. Oberg represented all parties in these deals.

Count 150,000 New Homes Throughout Nation in '22

Contracts for fully 150,000 dwelling houses will have been let throughout the country by the end of 1922, according to an estimate made on data gathered in fifty-three important cities by Johns-Manville, Inc. W. H. Fogarty, local manager, said that reports indicated that residential construction for this year will reach a figure half again as large as 1921.

Peggy's Grill on Dearborn First of Several Planned

Peggy's grill is the latest addition to loop eating places. Mrs. Anna Holmes has leased the 18x36 shop at 161 North Dearborn street, through L. R. Cert & Co., for five years at $5,000 annually for the first two and $5,500 for the last three. This is "Peggy's" first venture and she plans several more grills later on.

CITY PLANNER GIVES HOME TOWN PLANS FOR SCHOOL GROUNDS

It isn't often business men are public spirited enough to donate their services to their home towns, so it's always a pleasure to report one who is. It's telling about the new grade school building for Wilmette last week in this department, we completely overlooked the fact that Myron H. West of Wilmette, president of the American Park Builders of Chicago, donated the design for the proposed village playground and school setting.

MYRON H. WEST.

The sixteen acre grounds, bounded on the east by 17th street, by Ridge avenue on the west, the first alley south of Lake avenue on the north, and the alley just north of Washington avenue on the south, will have a football field, a baseball diamond, an outdoor swimming pool, a boys' play area, a girls' play area, and a "children's play area" with a pool. In addition there'll be four tennis courts, a basket ball court, and a croquet ground.

The scheme contemplates the development of the western section of the grounds by the village trustees with the coöperation of the board of education through permitting the school grounds to be used for joint recreational purposes. It is planned that the grounds be managed by joint trustees appointed from the village board and the board of education. Perkins, Fellows & Hamilton have designed the school building, a picture of which was shown on this page last Sunday.

BEGIN WORK ON $600,000 PLANT OF PULLMAN CO.

Work has begun on a big addition to the Pullman company's plant, on 101st street, east of Corliss avenue, from plans by Frank D. Chase, Inc. The total cost, including equipment, will be $600,000. The building will cover approximately a 250x250 area and will be completed early next year. It will be used for the manufacture of car wheels. A building permit was taken out on Thursday.

Loyola Vista Flats to Be Sold on Co-operative Plan

G. B. Gardner of the W. W. Tarr company, reports having bought the Loyola Vista apartments at the southwest corner of Sheridan road and Winthrop, from Sussan & Lippman for $245,000, subject to a first mortgage bond issue of $135,000. Francis Ryar of the George W. Stewart company represented all parties. It is claimed eighteen of the thirty flats already have been sold on the coöperative plan.

Building Permits

Thirteen building permits for fa total valuation of $275,000 were issued yesterday, among them being the following:

Merrill-av., 6700-16; 3 story brick flats; John S. Smith, owner, mason and carp.; A. G. Lund, arch. $200,000

Lowell-av., 1817-19-23-25; four 1 story brick; W. M. Pierson, owner and carp.; R. N. Braucher, arch.; M. Ottalrano, mason. 24,000

Princess Pat Smart Shop Rents Store in Mallers

The Princess Smart Shop has leased the store at 52 East Madison, in the Mallers building, for ten years from Oct. 1, at a term rental reported by E. C. Brownlee, broker, as $100,000. Mr. Brownlee also leased the four story building at 1254 West 15th to the Irving Stein company, florists' supplies, for ten years at a term rental of $30,000.

Busy Now on Evanston's Big 3 Story Apartments

Construction is under way on what is said will be Evanston's largest three story flat building, at the northeast corner of Oak and Dempster, by Eric Skoglund, from plans by John A. Nyden. There will be eighty four room apartments. It will front 265 feet on Oak and 200 on Dempster, and have two courts. Completion date is set for April 1.

REALTY OFFERS MOST CHANCES, SAYS LECTURER

A well organized and well managed real estate office of today offers more opportunities than any other field of endeavor, declared Charles E. Fox of J. J. Carroll & Co., who spoke before the class on real estate of the Y. M. C. A. School of Commerce on Tuesday. But to realize on these opportunities you must know your subject and be everlastingly at it, warned Mr. Fox.

"Selling real estate is a fascinating business," he said. "It affords plenty of excitement, thrills, and sometimes keen disappointment. Frequently deals look very promising, hopes are built up by the salesman, then for some reason or other the deal falls of consummation. Here is where proper organization will do considerable to keep the selling force 100 per cent efficient, by the close coöperation and affiliation of the manager with the members of the selling force."

Henry G. Zander of Koester & Zander will speak on "Subdivisions" next Tuesday evening.

BELVEDERE BILL WINS $000,000 BEAUTY CONTEST

Swimmer's Tie Catches Eye of Antoinette.

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Help! Help!

Shades of Tweedledum et Tweedledee! A frenzied femme'd have words with thee. There's Apollo John and Belvedere Bill, an' I gotta decide which is handsomer still. There's Tweedledum John, a handsome guy—but look, I ask you, in Tweedledee's eye. Was ever a orb so purty set?—and think! there's another just like it yet.

JOHN J. READY JR. [Matzene Photo.]

John has a chin you'd love to touch—and Will's is up to quite as much. There's Tweedledee's ear, like a Tiffany set. No platinum tubes would that sweet ear get. John's are carved with a nifty turn. Such odes could be writ as to make 'em burn.

And such swell hair have the handsum pair, no rivalry out from the follicles there. O Tweedledum! O Tweedledee! I'm sure afloat a perilous sea. Eyebrows arched are their eyebrows rare. Frank and disarming is John J.'s stare.

Willie's Tie Lands Him.

Not on Willie's wicked, vampish eye rests my decision. It's Willie's tie. It has that slender, sylphlike grace which lands him neatly on first base. I like the way his collar fits and the way his head on top of it sits. But don't you think John J. ain't there. They're a rarely beautiful, handsum pair.

P. S.—'Twas a turrible job, I do declare, as raises my right for the Bible swear.

A WORD BY THE R. E. EDITOR

The great $000,000 realtors' bathing beauty contest is over. William P. Heyn, former national A. A. U. junior diving champion, has been selected by Antoinette Donnelly, the world's most famous judge of facial merit, and Willie wins by a tie.

Just a word to those who haven't followed this thrilling contest. At the recent outing of the Chicago Real Estate board, Mr. Heyn was selected by two diminutive feminine judges as the most beautiful realtor in a bathing suit. As he already had won a swimming race, he was disqualified and John J. Ready Jr. was named—not by the judges, however.

Letter Vote a Tie.

To quiet the uproar occasioned by the decision, we decided to let the world settle it. With one exception, all the letters which have poured into THE TRIBUNE office have been from feminine readers—and the result was a tie. We turned the two photographs over to Miss Donnelly and you have the result.

We intended running a new photograph of the prize winner, but Miss Donnelly's decision calls attention so emphatically to the various points of beauty of each of the handsome gentlemen, we've decided to reproduce again the two photographs used by Miss Donnelly and which the public voted on.

Wins by a Tie

WILLIAM P. HEYN. [Moffett Photo.]

Antoinette Donnelly says 'twas a turrible job deciding the famous bathing beauty contest, but Mr. William P. Heyn's carefully folded neckgear won her heart—or eye, and so Bill's the winner. Antoinette's official report on the contest is given in another column.

Prendergast of Mr. Beak's office represented him.

Columbian Colortype Men Buy Prairie-21st Corner

Adolph Schmidt and Joseph L. Strauss, president and treasurer of the Columbian Colortype company, have bought for $55,000 the southwest corner of Prairie and 21st, 75x180, improved with an old time residence designed by Daniel Burnham. According to George F. Iliff, manager of the south central office of the Bowes Realty company, who handled the deal, the new owners will build a structure to suit any tenant. They own considerable property in the neighborhood.

Wreck Buildings to Make Way for Wrigley Annex

Work is to start tomorrow morning wrecking the building across from the Wrigley tower to make way for the big annex planned for the Wrigley structure. Actual construction will start as soon as possible.

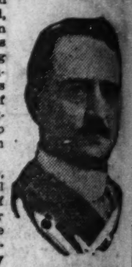
DEVON AVENUE TO BE MADE A GREAT CROSS CITY DRIVE

Plan 10 1-2 Mile Boulevard 108 Feet Wide.

Devon avenue is going to be made one of Chicago's greatest thoroughfares, an east and west boulevard, 108 feet wide, ten and a half miles long, stretching from Lake Michigan to the Des Plaines river, if present plans outlined by a group of Chicago men are carried out.



CALLISTUS S. ENNIS.

The initial step, according to Axel Lonnquist of Lonnquist, Driver & Co., one of the most active members of the newly formed Wider Better Devon Avenue association, will be the widening of Devon between Western avenue and the city limits and its ultimate extension to the Des Plaines river. Already such impetus has been given the movement, says Mr. Lonnquist, that the project is assured. A magnificent system of lights along the entire stretch of road is to be a feature of the project.

East End to Act Later.

According to Callistus S. Ennis, another active member of the association and one of Chicago's best known realtors, the widening of Devon east of Western is expected to follow as soon as the property owners see the advantage of being part of the bottle and not merely the neck, which it would be if the 108 foot boulevard ended at Western.

An interesting feature of the plan is to have the stretch running through the Edgebrook forest preserve, now containing 2,200 acres, a winding road, the same width, of course, but picturesquely laid out as a drive instead of a straight city like street.

Subdividers Dedicate Strip.

The three quarters of a mile of Devon extending through Edgebrook Manor, already has been assured of a 100 foot width through the dedication of property by Lonnquist, Driver & Co., William A. Peterson had dedicated half a mile farther east.

A plan is being considered to follow the Boston system of having the street car lines run in the center of boulevards on a grass plot, with center poles. This means no dust and practically no noise. It is pointed out that eventually a car line from the lake to the Des Plaines will be in operation and this Boston idea, never worked out here, is to be carried out if possible.

Some of the other members of the association in addition to Mr. Lonnquist, Mr. Ennis and Mr. Peterson, are Fred W. Brummell, Henry G. Zander, and William Zelosky.

FINANCE SOVEREIGN ANNEX.
